国家出版基金项目
NATIONAL PUBLICATION FOUNDATION

THE KIRGIZ'S HEROIC EPIC OF CHINA

ماناس

MANAS

BOOK FOUR

KENAINYM

Volume One

Singing: Jusurp Mamay

Editing: Chinese Translation Committee of Manas

Translating: Linghuan Ma Xiao Lin Gregory·B·Meeks

XINJIANG PEOPLE'S PUBLISHING GROUP
XINJIANG PEOPLE'S PUBLISHING HOUSE

THE KIRGIZ'S HEROIC EPIC OF CHINA

ماناس

MANAS

BOOK FOUR

KENAINYM

Volume One

Book One

Manas

Book Two

Semtay

Book Three

Seytek

Book Four

Kenainym

Book Five

Saiyit

Book Six

Aslebacha and Bekbacha

Book Seven

Sombilek

Book Eight

Chigetai

THE KIRGIZ'S HEROIC EPIC OF CHINA

ماناس

MANAS

BOOK FOUR·KENAINYM

| Volume One |

Singing: Jusurp Mamay
Editing: Chinese Translation Committee of Manas
Translating: Linghuan Ma Xiao Lin Gregory·B·Meeks

XINJIANG PEOPLE'S PUBLISHING GROUP
XINJIANG PEOPLE'S PUBLISHING HOUSE

Statistics of Cataloging in Publication(CIP)

The Kirgiz's Heroic Epic of China. Manas. Book Four, Kenainym, Volume One to Two, English/Publishing, Jusurp Mamay Singing. Chinese Translation Committee of Manas edited. Linghuan Ma Xiao Lin Gregory·B·Meeks Translated —Urumqi: Xinjiang People's Publishing House, 2019.12

ISBN 978-7-228-18712-6

Ⅰ. ①Chi... Ⅱ. ① Ma... ②Ma... ③Lin... ④Gr... Ⅲ. ①Kirgiz-Epic-China-English Ⅳ. ①I222.7

Archives Library of China Cataloging-In-Publication Data 007944(2020)

Copyright@2004 Kirgiz Edition Manas of Xinjiang People's Publishing House sung by Jusurp Mamay

Publishing Planning: Hui Lin Qijuan Sun
Executive Editor: Qing Chao
Designer: Kanhai Liu
Cover Illustrating: Zhenming Kuai

The Kirgiz's Heroic Epic of China Manas

( Book Four Kenainym Volume One to Two )

Singing Jusurp Mamay
Editing Chinese Translation Committee of Manas
Translating Linghuan Ma Xiao Lin Gregory·B·Meeks

Published Xinjiang People's Publishing Group, Xinjiang People's Publishing House
Issued Xinjiang People's Publishing House
Address No.348 Jiefang South Road Urumqi
Zip Code 830001
Tel (0991)2837939
Platemaking Xingjiayi Graphic Design Co. Ltd Urumqi
Printed Beijing Fucheng Color Printing Co. Ltd
Format 787 × 1092 1/16
Sheet 67.5
Edition No. First Edition in September 2020
Print No. First print in September 2020
Price 150.00RMB

All Rights Reserved

Jusurp Mamay
(1918—2014)

Jusurp Mamay, Kirgiz, born in Aheqi County of Xinjiang China, was the honorary Chairman and the researcher of Literary Federation of Xinjiang Uygur Autonomous Region, and the member of the Standing Committee of the Chinese People's Political Consultative Conference of Xinjiang. He was a famous singer of Manas, the inheritor of national intangible cultural heritage of China and referred to as the "Modern Homer" in the epic field at home and abroad. Chinese state leaders describe him as the "National Treasure"of China, who was once the only inheritor, singer and researcher in the world who can sing eight books, i.e. more than 235 thousand lines of heroic epic Manas. He had contributed so much for inheriting, protecting, and developing the epic Manas, thus he garnered many honors and praise from the Chinese central government and Xinjiang Uygur Autonomous Region government. He was invited to visit Kyrgyzstan on three occasions, and was granted the gold medal and the title of "Kyrgyzstan People's Actor".

Manas Chinese Translation Committee

Director of Translating and Annotating Team: Zhumak Kader

Associate Director of Translating and Annotating Team: Adili Jumaturdi

Director of Editing and Collating Team: Jihong He

Director of Verification Team: Xiongfu Ma, Zhumak Kader

Associate Director of Verification Team: Jihong He

Manas Book Four Kenainym Chinese Translation Staff

Translated by Zhumak Kader, Turdi Mehmettursun

Kirgiz-Chinese checked by Zhumak Kader, Amantur Abudurisula,

Mohtar Juma, Buwajar Abulimit

Edited and Collated by Jihong He, Minjie Guo, Ruizhou Li

Verified by Zhumak Kader, Xiongfu Ma, Jihong He, Zhenhua Hu,

Ying Lang, Zhanzhu Wu, Yingfu Luo, Hongchao Zhang, Guodong Zhao

Wurhaliqia Hederby, Minjie Guo, Ruizhou Li, Li Li, Yan Wang

Preface

Manas is a heroic epic of Kirgiz folk literature. It is widely circulated among and treasured by Kirgiz people and has been handed down from generation to generation. It is not only one of the three great epics in China, but also a bright gem in the world literature and art.

Manas is the general name of the whole set of the epic, as well as the name of the first epic and the name of the hero. This epic, which originated from ancient tribal battle time, is a masterwork of folk art in the hero-worshiped period. Handed down orally for thousand years, like a running river, this epic is the spiritual pillar and cultural symbol of Kirgiz people and integratedly embodies their knowledge of society, nature, and life. The abundant stories in the epic modeled the ethnic spirit and soul of Kirgiz, and showed an epic spirit of patriotism, bravery, wisdom, unity, and inclusiveness.

The epic is voluminous and rich in content, telling the stories over a long period with many different versions. Only the version from Jusurp Mamay contains 235 thousand lines. The epic presents a moving stories of Manas and his following seven generations, highly eulogizes their extremely hard and bitter battles on defending their people and homeland, and their struggling and heroic spirit in fighting against external invaders, striving for freedom of the Kirgiz people, and for pursuit of their happy lives, and building their beautiful homeland.

The structure of the epic is that of typical ancestry hero saga. From the hero Manas to his later generations, the romantic but moving and tragic feat can be seen in the whole epic. The epic is a masterwork of folk literature with magnificent and exciting contents, like a dazzling star that has a profound artistic influences. The epic brings the reader into the ancient Kirgiz life with its poetic language and impressive stories. The characters appearing in the stories are of rich varieties, such as wise Khans, brave and wise generals, grand old ministers, eloquent emissaries, heroines, wizards, workers, traitors, and villains. No matter whether they are the heroes or the villains, they are all portrayed vividly and magically with lively characteristics. The hero Manas is brave, valiant, and without a rival in power, like a brave tiger or lion in the battles, as strong as a dragon and as agile as an eagle. When he goes to battle, he is accompanied by fierce tigers in his front, cheetahs behind him, and with great dragons flying over guarding him. He wears the iron helmet and battle gown, with the battle-axe on his shoulder, the long spear in his hand, and the sword on his waist. He fights in the battlefield elegantly. Through the characterization of the epic heroes headed by Manas, the epic presents a folk picture of the ancient Kirgiz life, covering the scenes of weddings, recreation, and various ceremonies.

The epic is a treasure trove of the art of language. Varieties of rhetoric devices, such as comparisons, exaggerations and personifications, are commonplaces in this epic. The brave heroes are symbolized with the images of tiger, black mane wolf, and male camel. The epic lines follow strict poetic rhythm, and as a result, it has a strong sense of tempo. Rhymes are almost in every line, and many of the lines are based on both alliteration and end rhymes, which makes the epic lines catchy when a Manasqi sings them sounding pleasant and beautiful. Each volume of the epic is independent of one another and at the same time the volumes connect closely with one another. This makes the epic a integrated work which are structurally cohesive and integrative in creating its characters, designing its plots and narration of the stories. The epic manifests the Kirgiz peoples' brilliant art skills and It also fully shows their unique literature expressive capacity and their aesthetic tastes through the depicting images of the characters and animals and the plot narration. Manas is a classical work of infinite vitality, and it is a great peak of Kirgiz literature as well as a classic that is handed down for thousand years. It is deeply rooted in the rich Chinese civilization from the beginning and is a great achievement of Chinese culture through communication and exchanges.

Since the founding of the People's Republic of China, especially since the Reform and Opening up in 1978, Kirgiz hero epic Manas has been listed as one of the three great national epics of the country with the high value and support of the Communist Party of China and the central government of China, and it was successively listed in China's National and World Intangible Cultural Heritage of Humanity. Since the Eighteenth National Congress, the CPC Central Committee with General Secretary Xi Jinping at its core accords great importance to the heritage and development of epic Manas. On the Central Ethnic Work Conference, Forum of Art and Literature, the Thirteenth National People's Congress and on the signed article published before he visited Kyrgyzstan, Xi Jinping highly emphasized the epic's historical status and the value of its heritage and development. He said Manas is a great heart-shaking epic. It does not only provide rich nourishment for the Chinese Nation, but also contributes a splendid chapter to the world civilization. In 2006, the State Council approved epic Manas to be listed in the first National Intangible Cultural Heritages. In 2009, it was listed in the Representative List of the Intangible Cultural Heritage of Humanity of UNESCO. In 2015, the State Administration of Press, Publication, Radio, Film and Television (SARFT) recommended epic Manas as one of the popularizing books of the excellent traditional Chinese culture. In 2018, the Publicity Department of the CPC and China Federation of Literary and Art Circles (CFLAC) listed Manas as one of the selected books in National Library and Xinjiang Volume of the Epics of Chinese Folk Literature. The cultural authorities of the country offer special funds for supporting the protection and continuity of Manas, especially for the translation and publication of this epic. In 2013, under the aid of the National Publication Fund, Xinjiang People's Publishing House published Manas Book One (Volume One to Volume Four) in Chinese, Kirgiz, and English. The Chinese and English versions of Manas Book Two Semtay, Book Three Seytek, and Book Four Kenainym were selected in the list of National Publication Fund in 2017.

The CPC Committee and the people's government of Xinjiang Uygur Autonomous Region have always valued the investigating, recording, collating, translating, and publishing of Manas. The leaders of the Committee and government and the leaders of various departments in charge of culture affairs of Xinjiang Uygur Autonomous Region have made instructions on how to put more efforts in the protection and continuity of Manas. The Region's Cultural Department has given strong backing on protection plans, applying for projects from the country's authorities concerned and it has also provided special funds for the work.

Since Kizilsu Kirgiz Autonomous Prefecture (K Prefecture for short) was founded, its CPC Committee and government have paid special importance to the protection, continuity and development of excellent Kirgiz traditional culture, the protection of the cultural heritages in particular. As the inheritance place of epic Manas and the applicant place for World Intangible Cultural Heritage Program, K Prefecture has made great contributions in filing, preserving, inheriting, publicizing, publishing, researching, and developing Manas.

Since the founding of the People's Republic of China, the national government and Xinjiang government have made many instructions to the related departments for collecting, surveying, recording, collating, translating, and publishing epic Manas. From 1955 to 1957, CASS Research Center for Ethnic Minority Languages, Central College for Nationalities in Beijing, and the region's Commission for Language Reform co-organized a Xinjiang ethnic minority language surveying team. The team did investigations of Kirgiz language in the areas where Kirgiz people lived and recorded many lines of epic Manas but treated them as the dialect data. It was the first time that the written form of Manas entered the National Archives of China. In the autumn of 1960, Fajun Liu, Jiaqi Liu and others from Xinjiang Writers Association heard folk artists sing Manas when they were soliciting contributions in Kizilsu Prefecture. At that time, the teachers and students from Central College for Nationalities, who were teaching and majoring in Kirgiz language, were doing their language practice there. Under Professor Zhenhua Hu, the teachers and students together recorded some lines of Semtay and Ayichulek from Timur, a famous Manasqi in Wuqia county. And what they collected were one part of Semtay of Manas. Later, they translated the lines into Chinese and Uygur language, and the translated versions were published in literature magazines Tianshan (in Chinese) and Tarim (in Uygur language) respectively.

In May 1964, the Manas Research Group was founded under the direction of Folk Literature Research Association of China, Literary Federation of Xinjiang Autonomous Region, and CPC Committee of Kizilsu Kirgiz Autonomous Prefecture. it was headed by Yang Tao, a researcher of Folk Literature Research Association of China, and Fajun Liu, a researcher of Literary Federation of Xinjiang Uygur Autonomous Region, and they led the group to carry out interviews in the areas of Kizilsu Kirgiz Autonomous Prefecture, recording the lines of epic Manas. In 1978, a project leading group was established again by the above three units, and it began to record and translate the lines of the epic in Beijing. Zhenhua Hu, a professor from Minzu University of China, and Fajun Liu from Literary Federation of Xinjiang Uygur Autonomous Region, were the directors of this group. In June of 1982, Xinjiang Manas Project Leading Group was established and the main leaders of the Standing Committee of People's Congress of Xinjiang Uygur Autonomous Region, Literary Federation of Xinjiang Uygur Autonomous Region, and Kizilsu Kirgiz Autonomous Prefecture were the group leader and vice leaders. In November of 1989, approved by the CPC Committee of Xinjiang Uygur Autonomous Region, certain personal adjustments of the Group was made.

The collecting and research of the epic went through a difficult process. From 1960, with the great support from the departments at all levels, under the guiding principle of overall collecting, key sorting, all-out popularizing, research strengthening, and faithful recording, the researchers started general surveys. As long as there was a singer, and even he could only sing one or two sections, the researchers recorded them carefully. The researchers were divided into three groups. They went to villages and herding sites by camels and yaks, crossing mountains and rivers to look for local epic singers (Manasqi). In three months, they visited many remote villages and lots of places where Kirgiz people lived in Xinjiang. As a result, they collected more than 200 thousand lines of the epic and some other folk literature works. In their surveys in the villages, they found Jusurp Mamay, a great master of Manas. Later, It took Jusurp Mamay eight months to sing the first five volumes of the epic –Manas, Semtay, Seytek, Kenainym, and Saiyit and what he sang was totaling more than 110 thousand lines, and the researchers recorded them carefully.

From August 1964 to October 1966, the Xinjiang Manas Project Leading Group spent more than two years in making surveys of what might not be collected in their previous work in the four counties of Kizilsu Kirgiz

Autonomous Prefecture. This time, they recorded Koktoy's Fiesta, Sent Letters to Seven Khans, Expedition, and other chapters of Manas, which contained 124 thousand lines. They also collected 21 manuscript books of Manas with about 90 thousand lines. Jusurp Mamay supplemented the content of Manas Book One from 38 thousand lines to 59 thousand lines; Book Two Semtay from 27 thousand lines to 32 thousand lines; Book Three Seytek from 18 thousand lines to 24 thousand lines; Book Four Kenainym from 16 thousand lines to 34 thousand lines; Book Five Saiyit from 28 hundred lines to 10 thousand lines and then later to 24 thousand lines. During that time, he also sang Book Six Aslebacha and Bekbacha which is 45 thousand lines long. It is quite a misfortune that the recording transcripts and the translation copies that dozens of people had worked hard on for more than two years were lost.

In 1978, Jusurp Mamay re-sang the first six books in Beijing, besides, he also sang Book Seven Sombilek and Book Eight Chigetai for the first time. All of which were carefully recorded.

After the researchers' and Manasqis' hard work for collection and research of epic Manas for several decades, the great epic began to take shape. Different versions of more than 80 Manasqi were collected, and the Kirgiz language version of Jusurp Mamay was published in 1995. In 2004, the revised edition was published, and what is more, the edition of the Slavic-letter transliterated version of the epic was published, which evoked a strong and positive responses in Kyrgyzstan, Russia, and other countries.

In order to draw more readers' attention on epic Manas, many folk writers and artists took great efforts to publicize it in newspapers, magazines, and books. With their efforts, many well-chosen passages were published. At the same time, Xinjiang People's Publishing House published the Chinese version of Manas (Volume One) , the translation work was organized by Fajun Liu. And it also published some other books of Chinese version that related with the epic, such as Kirgiz Folk Literary Classics-Best Parts of Epic Manas, which were selected and edited by the History and Annals Office of Kizilsu Kirgiz Autonomous Prefecture and Xinjiang Association of Folk Artist. However, due to certain reasons, the translation work of Manas from Kirgiz language to Chinese language was not processed systematically.

In 2004, with the advent of China's Cultural Heritage Protection Program, the translation of Manas from Kirgiz language to Chinese language embraced an unprecedented opportunity. Under the concern and support of the main leaders from the CPC Committee and the government of Kizilsu Kirgiz Autonomous Prefecture, Kizilsu Kirgiz Autonomous Prefecture and Xinjiang Literary Federation organized a Manas Chinese Translating Group, which was later renamed to Manas Chinese Translation Committee, and it was an efficient working group whose members came from Sereral ethnic groups.

At this time, the translation work from Kirgiz language to Chinese language began and it was coordinated, and directed by the Chinese government. The Autonomous Prefecture government and Xinjiang Folk Artists Association organized experts proficient in both Kirgiz language and Chinese language to do the work of translating, compiling checking and approving.

First, the Chinese edition of Manas was based on the Manas version sung by Jusurp Mamay that was republished by Xinjiang People's Publishing House in 2004.

There are three teams under the group: the translating, collating, and annotating team, the editing and compiling team as well as the checking and approving team. The three teams understood their responsibilities and the need for cooperating with each other to accurately translate, compare Kirgiz-Chinese versions, collate, review, validate, and revise the transcripts. Some basic principles were set up special for the translation work.

Translation: The translation should be strictly in accordance with the characteristics of folk literature. They should stick to the translation principles of faithfulness, expressiveness, and elegance. The translation verses are corresponded up and down. It is coherent and complete in meaning from sentence to sentence, section to section, and paragraph to paragraph. The translation of each word and each sentence should be expressed accurately and appropriately.

Contrasting in both Chinese language and Kirgiz language: this aims to correct the mistakes, errors, and omissions in the translated versions. It also modifies the unclear translation and inaccurate wording. It specifies some unique folk adages and proverbs, describing the sentences with word meaning extension and reverse extension for the usage of adding references and annotations in editing.

Collation: Under the guideline of taking its essence and removing its dross in collating excellent traditional culture, words should be processed precisely on the basis of respecting the original epic. It should meet the code of language, reading habit and taste of Chinese readers, and keep the language features, artistic characteristics, and national traits of the original epic. The wording should be concise, accurate, affluent, vivid and with epic's lingering charm. It should keep the rhythm of Kirgiz folk epic, and not apply the rules and forms of Chinese poems mechanically.

Validation: It also can be called overall proofreading. It is the last process before the translation draft is submitted to the publishing house with the purpose of reviewing the first three rules, especially checking the translation quality, literary expression, and wording. The ethnic relations, region concepts, customs, and beliefs involved in the translation draft should realize the goal of respecting the history and being in line with harmonious development.

Second, at the beginning of translating Manas to Chinese language, the leading group had already instructed the related experts that they should strictly follow the translating principles of "being faithful to the original version, preserving the style, and being common and smooth in its words". It is to achieve the goal of appealing to all by keeping the original flavor of the contents and the characteristic of folk artists' improvisational singing style, and taking into account the majority of Han Chinese readers' tastes. Moreover, Manas is a cultural treasure handed down for thousands of years. So the translation not only needs to represent the charm of the epic, but also need to handle appropriately the problems in transferring the vocal songs to written words.

The Character orders were clear in the original language of the recorded version, but some need to have a subject and some need to be marked off with punctuation in translating them into Chinese language. In the scenes of people's dialogues in the epic, some happened in the yurt and some happened out of yurt, so it should be expressed clearly in the words.

Transliteration and annotation are used in translating names of people, horses, places, plants, animals, and tribes. Free translation is used only in very few of them with the purpose of rhyming. The translated words of some places names are the same as that of some current places, but the positions of them are not necessarily the same as the current ones.

The epic does not have sections itself. Sometimes singers could sing dozens of lines in high spirits and rhyme all the way to the end. So the translated Chinese versions of the epic should be paragraphed according to the plot development and for the sake of readers' convenience without affecting the epic structure. According to the collating plan of Kirgiz language version, first level headings were divided out under major events in each book. There were several second level headings under each first level headings, which made it clear and distinct for the readers.

Translating the epic into Chinese language is also a process of doing research of the epic. After careful studies, the time when Manas epic originated was clarified based on the epic contents and the historical records. Therefore, in the Chinese versions, the terms that frequently appeared in the epic and the experts and scholars showed great concern to were defined more accurately. For instance, Karamak is the name of a part of Mongolians, also translated as Karmek, Karmark, etc. It is not correct to simply be translated as Mongolia. In addition, the meaning of theword Beygin was debatable in Manas. It was translated as "北京" (Beijing) in some parts of the epic. It actually refers to the capital city of Khitan. And some scholars believe it was Linhuang (Shangjing is the name of the upper capital of Liao Dynasty). In the 2010 edition of Cihai (Mini-print) defined Beijing as Shangjing Linhuang which was renamed Beijing in the first year of Tianjuan of Jin Dynasty (Year 1138)and the name was revoked in the second year of Tiande (Year 1150). Its site is southeast to Boluo in Left Bailin Banner of Inner Mongolia. Some scholars believe Beygin in Manas refers to Beiting in history. Beiting is in today's Jimsar county of Xinjiang Uygur Autonomous Region. It was the office site of Beiting Administration Office of Tang Dynasty. Western Liao once built a new city here in Yemili to recruit troops, and later it built a capital in Husordo. Some people mistakenly take Beygin for today's Beijing (北京) which does not match what the word means in Manas. And today's Beijing was called Yanjing in Liao Dynasty. Therefore, in translating the epic into Chinese language, the transliterated word Beygin (别依京) was adopted, meanwhile Shangjing or Kangayi were used for certain sentences.

In order to be faithful to the original epic, translators of the first draft are all Kirgiz people who are proficient in Chinese. For this, about ten Kirgiz experts and scholars were invited to participate in all sections of Chinese translation, especially in the contrast phase between Kirgiz version and Chinese version. They compared Book One twice to make sure the translation to be more precise and accurate.

Under the substantial support of various circles of society and the unremitting endeavor of our epic researchers, the Chinese version will meet the readers in succession. It is still to be discussed whether some Chinese expressions and the understanding of some uncommon words and sentences in the epic are appropriate or not because of the different comprehensive levels of the translating and validating staff members.

Manas is a great cultural heritage created by the whole Kirgiz people. The surveying, recording, collating, translating, and publishing of Manas is also the fruit of many people who had been working together. At the time of publishing this book, we want to express our great homage to those who inherited and passed down Manas from generation to generation. We would like to show our sincere appreciations to the people participating in the surveying, recording, collating, translating, and publishing of the epic and to the Party leaders and experts who devoted their time to Manas for decades.

July 2020

Contents

Volume One

Heroes of Three Generations Fought with Cannibals

Semtay's western Expedition to Conquest Aytubi ..... 003
Krichorao Gathered Information of the Enemy at Night..... 027
The Young Alemsarik's Killing of Seven Dobati Brothers ..... 046
Bakay Annihilated Enemies of Night Raid ..... 061

The Heroes Got Trapped Beside the Devils Lake

Sumargan Ran for Help ..... 073
The Heroes Fought against the Giant Kezriarip ..... 082
Four Heroes Went into a Mysterious Valley by Mistake ..... 101

The Young Kenainym Rescued Four Heroes

Sayikali Awakened the Soul of Kenainym ..... 111
Kenainym Killed the Giant Kezriarip ..... 127
Kenainym Defeated Five Giants in a Row ..... 136

Hero Kenainym Killed the Devils Bravely

Four Heroes Fought Fiercely against Haribek..... 155
Kenainym Killed the Devil Haribek ..... 170
Yellow-faced Death Kenainym Fought against Devil Jurendo ..... 193
Kenainym Chased Qingersh and Married Qinekay..... 220

Semtay and Other Four Heroes Passed Away ..... 244

Kenainym Fought With the Khan of Karamark Qiktay

Khan Qiktay Invaded Kirgiz With Allied Forces ..... 253
Kenainym and Qiktay Took Turns to Attack ..... 282
Qiktay Sought Help Everywhere After a Series of Failure ..... 297
Kenainym Slashed the Villain Qiktay ..... 318

Kirgiz People Overcame the Famine

Talas Suffered Snow Disaster ..... 329
Fighting Famine Together ..... 340

Kenainym Launched an Expedition to Fight the Wicked

Kenainym Fought against the Witch Kublegen with Wits and Courage ..... 359
Shermat and His Daughter Were Killed for Doing Evil ..... 386
Yellow-faced Death Killed the Rogue Oliya ..... 407

Three Khans of Karamark Started a War and Launched Invasion

Karamark Assaulted Kirgiz with Three Troops ..... 419
Bagetebay Led People to Revolt the Enemy ..... 426
Talparkbye Fought a Battle of Wits against Invaders from Karamark ..... 444
Kenainym Rescued Bagetebay ..... 461
Yellow-faced Death Lifted Shalekmat up With Spear ..... 476

Angry Kenainym Killed Kekmat

Messenger of Karamark Revealed Military Situation ..... 489
Two Warriors Rescued Fifty Chieftains by Strategy ..... 500
Fifty Chieftains Rushed to Jetitor at Night to Meet the Attack ..... 508
Kenainym Killed Kekmat ..... 515

Volume Two

Kenainym Confronted with Timirbek

Fifty Thousand Woldiers Expedited westward Along with Kenainym ..... 523
Chounalep Invaded Kirgiz ..... 547
Bagetebay Killed Musahan in Rage ..... 567
Kenainym Defeated Timirbek ..... 587

Timirbek and Chounalep Left No Means Untried and Died

Chounalep Escaped with Bare Life ..... 615
Kenainym Killed Timirbek ..... 635
Kirgiz Defeated the Enemy from Three Sides ..... 653
Chounalep Died under the Spear ..... 668
The Son of Qiktay and the Son of Chounalep Died for Revenge ..... 681

Khorasan Allied with Isfan to Invade Kirgiz

Keslety Befell Disasters to Talas Folks ..... 691
Talas Folks Expected for Kenainym's Triumphant Return ..... 711
Kenainym Fought against Keslety for the First Time ..... 721

Kirgiz Folks Defended Homeland in Joint Forces

Two Heroes Sacrificed in the First Battle against Khorasan ..... 737
Kenainym Defeated the Allied Troops Three Criminals Fled for Lives ..... 764

Salamart Betrayed and Was Killed

Dabbitay Raked up the Past to Instigate Salamart to Betray ..... 787
Kenainym Killed Salamart with Rage ..... 809

Kenainym defeated the Army of Khorasan again

Kenainym killed Keslety ..... 835
Kenainym Speared the Giant of Khorasan Talana ..... 855
Dabbitay was Defeated and Escaped ..... 873

Dabbitay Attacked Talas in Stealth

Dabbitay Striked Talas Heroes rose to Resist ..... 895
Exasperated Dabbitay Slaughtered Kirgiz People ..... 916
Kenainym Came Back to Talas Dabbitay Escaped in Haste ..... 930
Stray Dog Dabbitay Hatched a Larger Plot ..... 953

Wicked Dabbitay Deserved more than Death

Invaded Talas again Dabbitay Escaped in panic after Defeat ..... 969
Dabbitay Lured Autor to Send Troops to Invade Talas ..... 987
Perverse Autor Worked His own Ruin ..... 1006
Dabbitay Strook the Harem of Autor Six Princesses rose up in Resistance ..... 1019
Culpable Dabbitay Lost His Life after Three Attacks on Talas ..... 1029

Postscript ..... 1047

Heroes of Three Generations Fought with Cannibals

Semtay's western Expedition to Conquest Aytubi

In this thrilling story of the Manas Family,
Three heroes have been chanted to date.
And Kenainym who will be praised at this moment,
Is the forth-generation hero of this Family.

The ancestor of Kenainym named Boyin Khan,
Then appeared his descendant Kayin Khan,
Kara Khan was after Kayin Khan,
His offsprings were born in succession,
And finally came Onuzdo Khan.

Onuzdo Khan had ten sons,
One of them was Jagurp.
The son of Jagurp was the hero Manas,
And this is where our heroic story begins,
About the hero Manas.

The displaced Arashi people,
Returned their home under the help of Manas.
For the dignity of Arashi people,
Manas fought on countless fronts.
For the rescue of the enslaved brethren,
Manas led the expedition to Begin,
Plotted against by his enemy and didn't manage to survive.

The son of Manas, Semtay,
With his mother Kanikai sought for shelters all around,
Suffering untold hardships.
Already had full of valor and vigor at the age of twelve.

Skillful in war and fight,
And defeated innumerable vicious enemies,
He is an unparalleled hero in the world.

The wife of Semtay is the Fairy Ayichulek,
They had a son called Seytek.
Having been persecuted by betrayers, Semtay vanished from earth,
Before his son came to the world.
The Fairy Ayichulek, the Khan's wife,
Gave birth to her son Seytek,
After having conceived for three years and six months.

Seytek was an invincible hero as well,
Seized back his father's power when he was just twelve.
He had two wives,
One was called Gulinar,
Alemsarik was the name of her son;
The other was the Fairy Kuyale,
An unrivaled heroine,
She gave birth to Kenainym,
Who was courageous and his fame had spread far and wide.
There then comes the story of the hero Kenainym,
Please allow me to sing it from the very beginning.

Although Semtay came back down to the earth,
He was not what he used to be and advanced in years.
Less than thirty was his son Seytek,
While having an extremely strong constitution.
There was no steed that could carry the son,
Thus he usually stayed at home and out of work,
Hardly could lead troops far out to fights.

Kuyale gave birth to Kenainym,
And today the son was already at nine.
Although with huge stature and tremendous food intake,
He could only lie on bed day and night.
One day afternoon,

When the sun lowered in the sky,
Semtay, Bakay and Krichorao,
Were chatting together at home.
A group of guests came to the door,
One of them had a glib tongue,
Hastily making inquiries to the gatekeeper,
"Here may I ask who is in charge?"
In non hurry the gatekeeper replied,
"This place is left by the deceased King Manas,
And the palace belongs to Seytek Khan."

The man said quickly,
"Seytek Khan's fame has spread thousands of miles away,
He is a hero with infinite strength.
Semtay still enjoys good health,
And the Saint Bakay is also here.
So is the son of Almanbet,
Krichorao.
Now there are enemies coming to invade,
I do not know who can stand out to fight?
We are wretched people exposed to calamity,
Anxiously appealing Khan for rescue."
Knowing the purpose of the guests,
The gatekeeper went to acquaint Semtay Khan.

With sweat dripped from the face and anxiety filled in the heart,
The gatekeeper could not say a word.
Not until Krichorao urged him to stay calm,
That the gatekeeper started to report the request:

"We were standing outside of the gate,
And a group of guests from remote areas came to visit.
They talked irrationally with disturbed looks,
Terribly fatigued with tearstained faces.
Saying that they suffered from dreadful calamity,
And desiring to meet and beg the Khan for help,
Please forgive my disordered words for I am in haste to report."

Since Sart was defeated,
The heroes stay at home with nothing to do.
Hearing someone was suffering and awaiting,
How could they remain indifferent?
The Khan ordered those visitors to be brought in,
The gatekeeper retreated to the door,
And led them to Semtay.

The visitors bowed themselves in,
Without daring to lift heads.
Made a kowtow to the khan,
Dared not sit at the corner until they were permitted.

Semtay looked these visitors up and down,
Bare-boned and pale-faced,
With lanky necks mucky and dark.
How did they become like this—Thought Semtay:
"Where did you come from?
What did you come across?
Please tell me accurately if you need any help."

The visitors dared not look up into Semtay's eyes,
Timidly recounted their stories:
"We were merchants coming from the rising sun,
One hundred and thirty men in the aggregate,
Among them fifty one were Arashi,
And thirty men belonged to Kirgiz.
They joint us from Oboler.

"They told us:
'Semtay Khan of Kirgiz,
The descendant of the black mane wolf Manas.
As long as he is alive,
The enemy will not even dare harm a hair of our heads.'

"But people of Kirgiz and Arashi,

All of them lost their lives,
They were in the stomach of Qingersh.
So we come in front of you,
To tell our wretched lot."

Seeing puzzled faces of heroes,
The man told more details:
"At the direction of sunset,
There is a place called Aytubi[①],
And the khan's name was Aytumsh.
Around Aytumsh,
There is a giant called Qingersh,
A heartless man-eater he is.

"Qingersh's daughter is Qinekay,
A beautiful girl she really is.
In order to marry Qinekay,
Local giants fight at the cost of their lives.

"A giant called Sumargan,
Is much more cruel than others.
He will forcibly marry Qinekay,
Qingersh dare not speak with unwillingness,
Having no choice but to claim huge betrothal gifts:

'I want seventy spacious houses,
In which there is full of shining gold;
I want seventy thousand young slaves,
And let them reproduce,
I will fat them up and eat them one by one;
I want livestock and wild animals all over the mountains,
So as to hunt them for great joy.'

"In order to meet the needs of Qingersh,
Sumargan caught more people all around.

1 Aytubi: Kirgiz term of place, means a place near to the moon.

He drove flocks of people into sheepfold as driving sheep,
More than one hundred people were seized including us.
Both Sumargan and Qingersh like to eat human flesh,
Satisfying hunger with human day in and day out.
Someone also have been sold,
Cannibalism is nothing strange.

"Our people become fewer and fewer,
There had been over one hundred men,
Only five survived including me.
That is our horrible fate,
They wanted to eat us at first,
But left us to get fat.
They cut our ears for labeling,
And drove us out to feed ourselves.

"We have been trapped there for six years,
Before we got chance to leave at last.
There a rule has been set,
That any man without ears,
Is considerd to be Sumargan's slave,
And he will be sent back to the devil's hands.
We were afraid of being sent back,
So we hided by day and came out at night,
Quenching our thirsty by rainwater,
Satisfying our hunger with weeds.
Having fled from Aytubi for three years,
begged for a living everywhere,
And told everyone our tragedy.

"Some kind-hearted people told us,
'Semtay is the hero of Kirgiz,
The only man who can save you.'
So we arrived here,
All by destiny,
We are all slaves,
From Kangayi."

Hearing their tragedy,
Anger was aroused from Semtay.
To Krichorao he said:
"Kristan,
My warrior,
Move now.
Call all the twenty khans together,
I will lead an expedition to these cannibals.

"My father conquered Begin in those years,
With warriors from fourteen tribes.
I will launch an expedition to the west,
I need troops of the same size.
With me twenty khans must go along,
All men who can ride horses shall join in."

A moment later,
Semtay continued:
"Since was known as Semtay,
I have never heard of cannibalism.
I can even count the stars without fault,
These devils brought only disasters,
I will wipe all of them out.

"Sumargan is the son of Su,
Is he also a devil eating human flesh?
After hearing my name,
He must gather cruel giants together.
Just wait for their gathering,
For it is a god-given chance.
I will destroy them once for all!
Thinking of the scenes of human-eating,
My mind is difficult to calm,
And I must root them out.

"Kristan,

My tiger,
Make preparations now,
We will set out as soon as possible."

Then Krichorao said:
"My dear brother,
Your saying is true with no doubt,
And I have only one thing to tell:
Our father was broad-minded,
He governed fourteen tribes.
Facing powerful enemy Kangayi,
He had to mobilize all his tribes,
Subjugating powerful enemy required the force of all warriors.

"Now we will go on an expedition to the west,
To wipe out those men-eating devils,
They are not that powerful,
We do not need to mobilize all those tribes,
And disturb their tranquil lives.

"Having been fed by the tribes,
That is how I grew up.
Arokai's son Kunwuerbayi,
His conspiracy failed.
At the mountain pass of Kezlerkay,
Only four of us started a charge,
Cutting the head of Kunwuer,
We defeated all enemies and protected our tribes.

"Today we are sending forces to the west,
Summoning all people is in no need.
We can defeat the giants,
With only selected powerful troops.

"We have Alemsarik,
We have lionesque heroine Kuyale and Salamart.
So long as one thousand chosen men are on standby,

The inevitable triumph will finally be achieved.

"We will launch a fierce attack on Aytumsh and Qingersh,
As well as the son of Su, Sumargan.
Against them we will have an intense battle on horseback,
No matter how cruel and harsh the fight is,
I will march forward intrepidly and fight to my last gasp.
Even though the Death comes my way,
I will by no means take pity on my precious life.
Yet too many forces carried,
Will only make us seem to be weak and timid.

"Toletoy and Qinkojo in those years,
Thought nothing of Nieskara.
The one-eyed giant on black ox-Madhan,
Did not take Kunwuerbayi into account.
Usangan and Zubatay,
With the addition of Kezileuyok from Jafan,
Acted in collusion to intrude us,
We could wipe them out only by elite troops.

"Among other men,
Kanchorao and Kiyaz,
Acted in cahoots and bullied us by all means,
Were destroyed by our men at last.
Also the maniac Sart,
Had dared to defy us.
Seytek bolstered himself up,
Kuyale arrived to rescue in time,
And we took his pitiful life as well.
Masses of Monget People,
Had no alternative but to flee and weep.

"My well-beloved brother,
Your noble stature is in robust health,
Your sharp eyes are the shiniest stars.
Your sweetest words gladden the people's hearts,

Giving them strength.
If I am wrong,
Please correct me,
And I will be with you from beginning to the end."

The Old Bakay continued:
"To destroy the evil and to protect the people,
Is the tradition of our ancestors.
We shall head for the setting sun,
To eliminate the cannibals.
As long as we are of one heart,
The evil will be subdued without fail.

"Our saha[1] will never miss the aim,
The devil will be killed in this battle.
Our saha will hit the target at every hurl,
And the giants will be completely brought down.

"We once expedited to Begin,
Their territory is boundless,
Densely populated as weeds,
But we still defeated the enemy.
With regard to Aytubi,
We barely know anything about it.
Anyway,
The giants are not stronger than Kangayi.

"We already knew that in the west,
Evil people eat human flesh,
We can not avoid to save the civilians.
If we do not defeat the cannibals,
It would be a shame of the descendants of Manas!
I agree with Krichorao,
Lead one thousand chosen men to fight,

1 Saha: A Kirgiz term. The big and weighty gristles of wild sheep hooves used to hit rows of jacks in Kirgiz folk games.

Semtay,
Would you go along with my words?"

Hearing out Krichorao and the Old Bakay,
Semtay asked Krichorao to gather the troops.
After careful deliberation,
The hero Krichorao summoned all the leaders.
He made a decision as follows:
"Every household with three or more sons,
Should choose one man out to the battle.

Conscript one thousand men,
Gather them here five days later.
Take the arms and mount the horses,
Bring enough food for expedition."

Every leader of the tribe,
Registered the warriors who decided to enlist.
The morning of the fifth day,
One thousand energetic men arrayed in the palace.

The troops ready to fight,
Along with the olds staying behind,
All the people regardless of gender and age,
Gathered in front of the tomb of Manas.
Semtay Khan in person,
Led the funeral ritual to be held.

Each warrior slaughtered an animal,
They cut off the heads of sheep,
They slit the bellies of maria,
They made the white-head cattle sacrifices,
They made the unweaned camel calves as offerings.

All of the warriors along with others,
Grasped their own collars,
Walked around the tomb.

Prayed to Manas,
Blessed the heroes with victory and triumph.

The Old Bakay and Semtay Khan,
The tiger Krichorao and Alemsarik,
The Heroine Kuyale and Salamart,
And one thousand mighty men,
Embarked on the journey spiritedly.

Each warrior heading for Aytubi,
Rode a treasured galloper,
Strong and smart with martial arts,
Versatile in every kind of arms.
Fully equipped,
Their tips of spears shined under the sun.
Swords rattled in the scabbards,
And crescent axes clashed with the daggers.
Firelocks on the shoulders,
Large pouches at the belts,
The warriors were in yellow embroidered leather pants,
And their bottoms of trouser legs swung in the wind.

Wearing the dome fur caps at a tilt,
All the warriors sang sonorously,
Talked and laughed incessantly.

They have been walked westward for eighteen days,
Getting further and further away from Talas.
Their fellows with white felt caps were out of sight,
In front of them was the desolate gobi desert.
The troops stopped,
And rested for two days.
People consulted the Old Bakay:
"Where is our way,
And how to cross this gobi?"
The Old Bakay answered,
"I have never been here,

And seen this endless gobi."

Salamart said then,
"I have an idea,
I wonder if you are willing to accept.
Kuyale used to lived here,
How to cross this gobi,
And where to find water and grass,
She is very clear about that,
Shall we ask for her advice?"

Semtay sent for Kuyale at once:
"Call her to be here quickly."
The messenger came to Kuyale:
"Semtay Khan and the Old Bakay summoned you,
Along with them there are Krichorao and Salamart,
Alemsarik is also there."

Kuyale said then,
"I have been in Talas for fourteen years,
My son Kenainym has just turned nine.
According to the rules from ancestors,
Where there are more than three people I did not and will never show up.

"We are all at outside today,
I should never show my face.
Or Alemsarik could come to invite,
It is natural for a mother to accept her son's request,
So that I will not breach etiquette,
And I will not break rules."

The messenger accurately reported Kuyale's words,
Krichorao said,
"Kuyale is right,
But she has to be here at this moment.
Alemsarik,

Go to invite your mother,
This is how our ancestor would do."

The strapping Alemsarik,
Came to Kuyale,
Reverently greeted his mother:
"My dear mama,
The respected grandfather Semtay Khan,
The resourceful Old Bakay,
And the tiger-uncle Krichorao,
Sent me to invite you for consultation.

"Our troops came to this endless gobi,
No one knows the way to Aytubi.
No one has been to the west,
And no one knows the direction of the road.
Salamart told grandfather,
That only you know the way,
So would you please be our guide."

Kuyale came into the people's presence,
Bowed to the elders,
And begged for God's blessings.
She acted courteously and appropriately,
And was praised with one accord.
Krichorao lifted up his voice:
"Kuyale,
My child,
There were some people from the west,
They said in a place called Aytubi,
Sumargan and Qingersh eat human flesh.
In order to rescue those civilians,
Semtay Khan leads our expedition.

"In front of us is the boundless gobi,
No one knows the way to traverse.
I heard that only you know the way.

Child,
If you know,
Please go into particulars."

Hearing what Krichorao said,
With her head down Kuyale answered unhurriedly:
"Before I was twelve,
I have never been there.
In my animal year[1] of thirteen,
I often hunted in the gobi desert.

"This desert is endless,
Disasters may happen anytime,
This desert is too arid to get through for ordinary person,
Known as having no way of return.
If we go to the gobi with knowing nothing,
We will be wiped out with no one alive.

"If we choose the northern line and go along the foothills,
The way will be too far.
We need to pass by Baran in the west,
Local tribes will hinder us,
If we fall into fight with no other choice,
The war will involve common folks.
In this way full of dangers and fights,
We can only arrive Aytubi in one year time.

"If taking a short cut,
We will come to a desert called Qiarack,
Only two oases can be found.
To get through the desert,
We need forty or fifty days.
As long as we are fearless,
We will get through the desert at last.

1 animal year: Kirgiz people used twelve animals to count years, twelve years make one cycle, and the year which represents the same animal as the one when a person was born is called his or her animal year.

This way to Aytubi,
Will cost us fifty days.

"I heard that there was no Aytubi previously,
As it was uninhabited.
High mountains are close to the sky,
The place seems to be near the moon.
Jurendo fled once to the desert,
The name Aytubi was given then,
Castle was built afterward,
And Aytumsh was appointed the khan.

"This is all I know,
Please tell me,
If there is anything I can do."

After Kuyale finished,
No one had a word to say.
Krichorao broke the silence:
"My uncle Bakay,
Let Kuyale lead the way for us,
She will go in front of the troops,
Lead us across the gobi desert,
And go straight to the castle of Aytumsh.

"Alemsarik and Salamart,
Guard the sides of troops.
I will walk at the rear,
In case anyone loses himself.

"We will carefully lead these one thousand men,
Across the gobi desert safe and sound.
They have been living with joy in Talas since childhood,
With clothes tidy and potless.
They had plenty of food and wine all the year round,
With Kumiss and Sherney never dried up,
Sheep snatching and horse racing were held often.

Rich lives they have had,
Losing thirty or forty livestock,
Was not a bid deal to them.

"They have never fought with enemies,
Nor have they toughened themselves by wars,
getting used to idleness.
If someone sleep on the horseback,
Remember to wake him up,
Without sneer and curse,
Respect the dignity of everyone.
Prevent horseback from sores,
Take good care of every mount."

After Krichorao finished his words,
To move on tomorrow Semtay commanded.
Everyone should be well-prepared,
Carry enough food and water to across the desert.

The next morning came then,
Kuyale mounted her steed Gilgitbiz,
Lead the mass troops into the gobi desert.
Erenow,
No one can across the desert.
In front of the troops,
The heroine was bright and brave.

On the quicksand,
Horses could hardly walk.
Which made the troops uneasy,
Worried about water evaporated by the scorching sun,
They made every endeavor to conserve it.
Having one meal every three days,
Both people and livestock had little to drink.
After walking for eleven days,
A thick reed marsh finally appeared,
They went wild with joy and rushed forward.

Kuyale stopped her steed and shouted:
"Do not drink the raw water in the lake,
The water contains a lot of mirabilite and salt,
People and horses can not drink even a sip.
Just one sip,
Will poison you to death.

"Put the raw water into the pot,
Set a fire and boil it,
Then you may drink or use it to cook.
Water stored in leather bags,
Should be boiled with no exceptions.
Water for horses must follow the same steps.
Boil the water carefully,
No fault can be tolerated.

"To ensure the safety of people and horses,
If any person or horse is poisoned,
With no mercy the person in charge will be decapitated.
Alemsarik and Salamart,
You must follow my order."
Warriors strictly followed Kuyale's words,
People and horses all safely ate and drunk.

There were lots of animals around the lake,
Tigers, lions and also wolves,
Ostriches was shaking head beside the lake,
Lizards were climbing all places around.
Tortoise here were distinctive,
Looking like gray sand dunes.
A hedgehog bristled its spikes,
Frogs were fighting with dust raised,
Boas were thick as the trunks of poplars,
Crocodiles were huge as dromedaries.

In this vast gobi desert,

Wild animals were everywhere.
They drunk directly from the lake,
While grew stout and healthy.
Such a fantastic world,
That no one could ever explain.

People who used to live in cool places,
Deeply suffered from the heat.
They were too scared of vipers to fall asleep,
While having a rest at night.
Individuals could not leave without permission,
In case they were lost in the desert.
The troops stayed for two days,
And complaints started to emerge.

Now it was at the crack of dawn,
The light looked like a beauty's brows.
Heroine Kuyale mounted her steed,
Marching in front of the troops.
Gilgitbiz was her treasured horse,
Biting its bridle firm and hard.
It cocked the ears like scissors,
With its increasingly brisk scampers.
The eyes glowed red,
The neck stretched out as ducks did.
The head wagged from side to side,
With increasingly firm steps.

The mane waved under sky,
The hooves clomped on the ground,
The heat went off from nostrils,
And the sweat flowed from armpits.
The tail switched against the wind,
And the dust were rolled up right behind.
There is no first-class breed,
That can match Gilgitbiz.

The clever men discovered,
That there was no crow flying past,
No chough flew across,
Neither was there hare running around,
Not a single creature was there inhabited.
Not even a blade of grass grew,
Nor a drop of water to drink.
Desolate desert as it was,
Brought down countless lives.

They were amongst the boundless desert,
Toiling and struggling as month time fled.
Marching in the sunlight and hushing under the moon,
Heavenly oasis eventually came into sight.

Rolling hills sitting in the North,
Flat grassland lying in the west,
Between the both ran through a rivus.
Pines and cypresses over the heads,
Zabeliis and catalpa woods in the foothills.
White birches and wild willows all over the hirst,
Far and near cam the faint scent of all those woods.

The mountains reached high up to the sky,
An exquisite beauty as they were alike.
Alpine pastures lied in the valley,
With rippling lakes amongst them.
All these Kirgiz men and women,
Had never seen the splendor in their lives.

Endless were the swamps and lakes,
Upon which lived wild gooses and ducks.
Kaymar[1], Quraic[2] and Sono[3],

1 Kaymar: Kirgiz term, a kind of wild male duck.

2 Quraic: Kirgiz term, a kind of female duck.

3 Sono: Kirgiz term, a kind of wild duck.

Could be seen all over the wet land.
Ezgir[1], Giagala[2],
And all other species were to be found.
White Tarkldak[3],
Awoke in the dark,
Cooed all the night.
Black Kunaz[4] and herons,
All kinds of storks and blue Kazan[5],
Ospreys and Chulduk[6],
Loitered among the lakes.

Kalabor[7] and Kashcaldak[8],
Larks chirped,
Cuckoos and Zaynaf[9] sang,
Quails ran in the grass,
Cooing at times.
Otters lively played.
At the edge of the woods,
Badgers sneered.
Mice had a creaking sound,
Reptiles squirmed all around.
Animals here were of infinite kinds,
Densely distributed on the earth.
Suddenly came the snapping sound,
As if the woods were cut down.
Came a group of lions with glaring eyes,

1 Ezgir: Kirgiz term, a kind of small fowl inhabited in swamps.

2 Giagala: Kirgiz term, a kind of fowl inhabited in swamps.

3 Tarkldak: Kirgiz term, a kind of bird.

4 Kunaz: Kirgiz term, a kind of bird with long neck and legs, similar with herons.

5 Kazan: Kirgiz term, a kind of bird.

6 Chulduk: Kirgiz term, a kind of bird with long neck and legs, inhabiting by lakes or in swamps.

7 Kalabor: Kirgiz term, a kind of bird with black belly.

8 Kashcaldak: Kirgiz term, a kind of waterfowl with bald forehead and white beak tip.

9 Zaynaf: Kirgiz term, a kind of bird, in love with a cuckoo according to legend.

Bears staggered with unkempt furs.
Tigers raged and fiercely roared,
The timid creatures fled in fear.
Cunning foxes hided themselves.
Lynxes, silver foxes and sables,
Along with minks and wild cats to be countless.
The elephants' bodies were strong as mountains,
Ostriches stretched necks and wagged heads.
Ermines bit with cracking sound,
Fat scorpions and sowbugs can not stir a limb.
Wolves worried in the mountains,
Argalis raced in the valleys,
Wild rams funneled between the stone peaks,
Antelopes capered in the gobi desert.
Down the valleys and on the plains assembled all those wild deer,
Toward the river they rushed in great hurry.
Crows of zebras seemed like donkeys,
Roe deer grazed among wild woods.
Giraffes roamed with slender legs,
And does fawned with joy and cheer.

As the forest was thick and dense,
To all animals it was a paradise.
The birds that people have never seen,
Were all easy to find all around.
Snow cocks chirped on the cliffs,
Eagles hovered and searched for preys,
Pheasant dodged deep into the forest.
Peacocks showed off beautiful plumes,
Hawks watched with wide open eyes,
Vultures overhead spread their wings,
And falcons cried as it liked.
Owls stood on the camel tail trees,
With well rounded staring eyes.

There is another kind of bird Judomisi[1],

1 Judomisi: Kirgiz term, a kind of bird, originally means to be slovenly and unkempt.

With feather messy and unkempt.
Pines, birches and wild willows,
Poplars and also sycamores,
These were where all the birds lived.
There were also birds that could not fly,
Running and trotting among the woods.
Warbles of them filled the air,
And wild beasts played all around.
Do not forget those naughty monkeys,
Jumped from this tree to another.

All the birds and all the beasts,
Were here to live and to multiply.

The dreamy sceneries of Kankole and Talas,
Could not be forgotten in everyone's hearts,
While the landscape here was still unique,
Like a gallery through which the troops passed.

Took a bath in the lake,
Lied on the strath,
The troops camped here for five days.
Continued to be led by the Heroine Kuyale,
They advanced for another six days.
Then near the Shaytan Lake they arrived,
Cooled by the refreshing breeze.

The Heroine Kuyale did not dismount,
Saying these words on the horseback:
"I have never been here,
But heard that it belongs to Aytumsh,
Right behind the Shaytan Lake.
The mountains were so high,
As were near the moon which failed to surmount.
Hence the name,
And the legend found its way ever since.
As for what lies further ahead,

It is hard for me to tell."

Hearing Kuyale's words,
Krichorao asked warriors to dismount.
Seeing the clear lake with lush grass,
He knew it was an ideal rest place.
The Kirgiz stayed here for six days,
All their fatigue was eliminated.

Hunted for deer and argalis,
Then dug the ground oven to cook.
The fragrance of the fat overflowed,
Dipping with salty water would be perfect.
The warriors leisurely stretched out,
Unbridled their horses as well.

Let us put this to one side,
And sing how did Kirgiz and Qingersh fight to the end.

Krichorao Gathered Information of the Enemy at Night

At a dark silent night,
The son of Almanbet, Krichorao,
Rushed towards the direction of sunset,
With his steed Gray Hare.

Coming to a mound at dawn,
He unbridled the steed to leisurely graze.
Reaching the top of the mound,
He took out a clairvoyance from the arms,
And overlooked to the west.

Unusual was the clairvoyance,
As a treasure brought from Begin.
A boy of fourteen when Almanbet was,
Master Jurendo sent him as a gift.
And Krichorao always took it with himself.

As an amulet the box of the clairvoyance was,
A gray python was stitched on the silk lace.
Elegant as it was,
Rather complicated its functions were:
If the lens cone was unfolded,
The length will be the same as the height of a man.

A flame would go out of the lens,
The one would be burnt as being watched.
The place that cost six-day horse ride,
Would appear as was close at hand.
Krichorao aimed at the west,

Aytubi, taking from here nine-day horse ride,
Looked as if being right there under his nose.

He saw a castle in the mountain,
There were houses, trees and livestock.
Upon the hill on the side,
Over thirty men were walking around.

In order to know more about Aytubi,
Krichorao decided to go that very night:
"I will head for Aytubi,
To talk with people,
And make inquiries.
Then tell uncle Bakay after returning,
What to do next,
We will follow his lead."

Putting the clairvoyance back,
Krichorao mounted his steed Gray Hare,
Towards the direction of sunset.

He thought:
"The way is so far,
That costs three days to arrive and depart.
In order to spare the worries of our men,
I must return tomorrow before dark."

With lashes by Krichorao the steed galloped,
As swift as an arrow.
They crossed the surging rivers,
As well as the steep mountains,
And went through the endless gobi desert.
The Gray Hare sweated all over,
Without a trace of weariness.

It was about noon,
Krichorao arrived the castle of Aytubi.

Coming to this strange place,
Krichorao was flustered.
As he went on a hill,
A group of people were standing on the slope.
Quick and nimble as whipping on the horse,
Krichorao rode up to the patrols.

Noticing the stranger,
The men rode up to him together.
There were thirty-six of them,
Trying to unsaddle Krichorao,
And to escort him into the castle.
Krichorao was hooted and encircled,
By the patrols with firelocks on everyone's back,
And hammers and slings in their hands.
Invincible hero Krichorao,
Took no account of them at all.

Knowing more than forty languages,
He fluently spoke with various accent.
Alternately mumbled with gestures,
And shouted like "Buter-Buter".

When he talked with the twelfth language,
The thirty-six men understood his words.
They shouted with one voice:
"Who are you,
And what do you want?"

Said Krichorao with sweet mouth and stony heart:
"Please tell me where do you live,
Which tribe do you belong to?
Who is the owner of the castle,
And which one is your khan?
If there is any intruder,
Which dauntless giant will stand out to fight?
As we speak the same language,

We shall talk as friends with open hearts."

Everyone pressed lips like a mute,
Making contact with eyes,
The only thing they wanted is to topple Krichorao from his horse.

With the angry eyes Krichorao shouted:
"Speak now!
Who is your khan,
Which castle do you live?
Answer me without concealing.

"If still not giving a word,
And conspiring to subdue me,
All of you will fall to the ground.
After tasting bitterness,
You will have no choice but to talk!
If you dare to revolt,
Your brains will be blown out!

Hearing the words from Krichorao,
Some of them were filled with fear,
Wetting their pants in terror.
Seven or eight men were over-confident,
Besieged Krichorao with their weapons.

As fast,
As could be,
Krichorao slightly waved the whip,
And one after another they were beaten down.
Kneeling down all together on the ground,
These men kowtowed and begged for mercy.

Krichorao shouted once again:
"Lay down all of your weapons,
And pile them up in one place.
If anyone dare to be dishonest,

I will end your life on this spot."

Obediently laying down the arms,
Those men squatted on the dirt.
At last one of them lifted the voice:
"We had no alternative,
But to keep our mouth shut,
Daring not say a word,
Now we have to tell you the truth."

"Aytubi is where we live,
Our khan is called Aytumsh,
But only a nominal one in deed.
Including him we have to obey Qingersh,
And can not defy what he says.
As for the whole story,
Let me tell from where it started:

"The Hero Jurendo was said to be here first,
A desolated place in those days.
Aytubi was the name he gave,
and the castle was built by the gathered folks.
A man called Salikay,
Was renamed Aytumsh,
And Aytubi was in his charge.

"At the side of Jurendo was a hero called Qingersh,
A man of capability knowing dozens of magics:
He can turn into a pigeon flying in the sky,
Or a fish swimming under the water.
Even Aytumsh must make a bow,
Qingersh is the one true khan as a matter of fact.

"Qingersh has a daughter named Qinekay,
Pretty and radiant even at the age of nine,
And it was her beauty,
Brought the evil to our lives.

"In the western place of the setting sun,
The son of Su is called Sumargan,
An unparalleled giant he indeed is,
Eating human alive without blinks.
The harsh and cruel Sumargan,
Intended to marry Qinekay as concubine.

"Qingersh was unwilling to give his daugher,
But dare not refuse because of the power.
Thus he required a mass of betrothal gifts,
To force Sumargan to give up.

"Qingersh asked him to send one thousand men,
Five hundred in total have already been sent.
They picked among the men every single day,
The fat and plump one will be taken for feast.

"All of us are as thin as lath,
In case of being eaten up.
What I am telling is all the truth,
No tricks, no lies, and no secrets.

"The skills of Sumargan are second to none,
His invisibility is adept and unique,
No one could track when he suddenly change.
He can turn into a fish and jump into the sea,
A strong steed is beside him with furs black and brown.
Waiting Qinekai to grow up to the marriageable age,
He is the only one who will marry the beauty and no one dare oppose.
I am not exaggerating about him,
That is what happened in this place.

"Since Qingersh got the bride price,
He has been indulging in eating human flesh.
For the sake of keeping his throne,
Aytumsh transported the men at all costs.

Our ears were cut off as marks,
Making us easily recognized and then we will be caught back.
From here no one could escape,
We have no choice but live in fear day and night."
After saying those words,
The men drew a deep sigh.

Hearing their misfortune Krichorao came to realize,
What he heard in Talas were not lies.
Then he spoke out these words:
"Listen,
I will not hurt you guys.
Go back to the castle,
And to your khan bring my words.

"Do carefully listen to these:
I am the Kirgiz hero from Talas,
Hearing that in Aytubi there is cannibalism.
In order to punish the man-eating giant,
And to save the innocent folks,
Our khan lead the expedition of thousands of miles.
I am only a pathfinder to have arrived first,
The main force will get here soon.

"Our ancestor is the Hero Manas,
And our khan is called Semtay,
Possessing the highest prestige,
He thinks nothing of all enemies.
Now I am going back to our khan,
To Aytubi he will send the letter of challenge.

"Aytumsh as well as Qingersh,
Both of their times have come.
Having done all those crimes,
With them they will be evened up blood debts.

"In three days our envoy will come,

What we want to say will be all in the letter,
Do ask your khan to prepare better.
Send my words,
To your khan with nothing omitted."

After saying those words,
Krichorao immediately turned his steed's head.
It was already at noon,
The sun lowered in the sky.
Spurring on the galloping horse,
He returned to the encampment before dusk.

Krichorao went to see the saint Bakay,
Semtay khan was also in the tent.
The Old Bakay asked him:
"Child,
Where did you go in this couple of days?
All of us are worrying about you."

Krichorao answered with smile:
"The night before yesterday I went alone to investigate,
Standing on the hill at dawn.
Using the clairvoyance to watch Aytubi,
I saw a group of people walking on the mountain slope.
I thought that I should come to them,
And to keep us well informed.

"My Gray Hare ran at full speed,
At noon we already approached them.
Thirty-six people suddenly rushed toward me,
Each of those wretches was as thin as a lath.

"Eleven languages I spoke were unknown to them,
It was until the twelfth one they began to understand.
In all details I inquired,
Knowing that they are patrols of Aytumsh.
The Cannibalism of Qingersh turned out to be real,

Those merchants in Talas did not lie to us.
Fewer people would been eaten,
If we had known this.

"Worrying with flames of fury burned in my breast,
I told our situation to those men.
I said that our hometown is Talas,
Our ancestor is the mane wolf Manas.
Our khan is called Semtay,
And his envoy will be there in three days.
Aytumsh and Qingersh,
They shall reply at once with no avoidance.

"That was what I did in these days,
I just dismounted from the horse,
And come here to ask khan and uncle to decide,
Whether to send an envoy round."

Then,
Alemsarik,
Along with his mother Kuyale,
Came to visit the three elders.

Semtay Khan asked:
"I suppose Krichorao is right,
To send the letter an envoy shall be dispatched.
He should be brilliant, brave and skilled in debate,
Capable of safeguarding the dignity of us.

"There is a man named Turna,
Courageous, clever and bright,
Allot him four attendants to go along,
Let him choose for himself."

Krichorao wrote the letter that very night,
A pearly white light appeared in the eastern sky.
In earnest Semtay said,

"Warrior Turna,
My child,
Go!
Take this letter of challenge to Aytubi,
Send it directly into their khan's hand.
'No killing of envoys during the fight,'
That is the rule from the ancient time.

"They can not understand your words,
Thus may put on airs with threats,
Do not be afraid,
Handing over the letter is all you need to do,
Do not stay long and return at once.

"Five days to go,
And five to come back,
How long will you stay in Aytubi,
Is up to Aytumsh.
If you still do not return after fifteen days,
I will lead my troops to approach day and night,
And bring darkness to the cannibal khan."
Semtay ordered carefully,
And the five envoys set off to the west immediately.

After Krichorao had left,
The patrols of Aytubi,
Turned their horse head.
Coming before Aytumsh,
They reported their experience,
To Aytumsh khan at one breath:
"We met a doughty warrior,
On the mountain slope outside,
Imposingly riding a gray steed,
Whose deportment was dignified.

"The thirty-six of us carried up weapons,
And rushed at him all at once.

Slightly he waved his horsewhip,
And we were thrown off our feet.

"Warrior like him I had never seen,
Not until this day,
Nor would one expect he is such a heroic man.

"That hero told us,
That Kirgiz warriors from Talas,
Are not far from our ligeance,
Within a few days,
The letter of challenge will arrive in your hands."

Hearing the report of the patrol,
Aytumsh thought to himself:
"While Qingersh is from the west,
He never heard about Kirgiz,
Did he flee from the place?
And for his reputation he chose to be silent?"

On the throne sat Aytumsh,
Hearing the approach of Kirgiz troops,
He was flustered in a cold sweat.
He called for a carriage,
With no delay to meet Qingersh.

Seeing the appearance of Aytumsh,
Qingersh stepped forward as asking him:
"What brings you here, your majesty,
Is there anything I can do for you?"

Panting and thirsty,
Aytumsh told him the words of the patrols.
With the pale face Qingersh almost fainted,
And trembled as was blown by the cold wind.
He roughly threw his clothes over the shoulders,
And kept sighing with chin on his hands.

Hearing the coming of Kirgiz,
Qingersh felt quite anxious.
Hearing the name of Semtay,
He was filled with panic.
The feeling of doom,
Bent his back.

Haunted by what had happened,
He talked to himself and lowered his head:
"At the seaside in the east,
Jurendo and I lived a leisurely life.
We thought the world was so small,
As narrow as what we had seen.
Kirgiz people were so arrogant,
That not only did they fight against Kunwuerbayi,
But also vied with Aisan Khan.

"Manas led Arashi people to march to Begin,
The war between us never got the end,
Until we exhausted ourselves,
Begin was occupied by Kirgiz at last.
Jurendo could not live there anymore,
Taking me to flee to this place.

"Here no one had inhabited,
We gathered people to build the castle,
And we named the place Aytubi.
Though having made Aytumsh the khan,
We got the true power to say the word.

"Jurendo found elsewhere,
Saying that Kirgiz people would not come here,
I thought it was my territory,
Every thing was under my reign.
I never thought Kirgiz would come once again,
That makes me burn with anxiety.

"In fear of Almanbet,
Jurendo took me to flee in the earliest days,
I have already heard of his death,
Then why should I be scared like this?"

At the thought of this,
Qingersh lifted his spirits,
Raising his head and conferring with Aytumsh:
"You kept the message in secret,
And came here to tell me about this,
What you have done is correct,
Now let us discuss the strategy of defense.

"My Aytumsh,
Do not panic,
We have the castle in Aytubi firm and sturdy,
Our weapons and provisions are quite sufficient.
If the war is inevitable,
At the forefront Sumargan will fight with all his strength,
There is no need to live in fear.
If Sumargan is not strong enough,
Surmargan will be his backup.

"Just wait till their envoys arrive,
And I will show them what we have got,
Let them find the solution by themselves.
Just go back and have a rest,
If the envoys of Kirgiz do come to us,
To me lead their way."
Hearing the words of Qingersh,
Aytumsh got back in a carriage.

A few days went by,
In front of Aytubi appeared five envoys,
Patrols met them outside the walls,
But for language barriers they failed to communicate.
Into the castle the envoys were brought,

And came straight before Aytumsh.

Turna strode to the side of Aytumsh,
And put a letter in his hands.
Remembering the words of Qingersh,
Aytumsh had envoys brought to him.

With puffy pouches of the eyes,
Qingersh had a contorted face,
Pretending to be imperatorial.
He took something out from a chest,
And roasted it for a while.

The fierce wind rose while the ground suddenly shook,
People trembled in great fears,
And did not know what would happen next.
Following a loud noise,
On the wall a huge crack appeared,
Before those envoys,
From the split came a figure,
With his appearance ferocious.

Face black as coals,
Eyes shinning blue flame.
Whiskers looking like a bush,
He had a big mouth resembling the boar's.
The man stared at people covetously,
As if he would swallow all of them alive.

Qingersh asked Sumargan to sit,
And picked up the letter of the envoys.
Sumargan skimmed it in haste.
With face turned dark,
He grimaced in a great rage.

He grasped a guard standing by,
And opened mouth to eat him alive.

Seeing the horrific killing scene,
The five envoys trembled with fear.

Qingersh asked Aytumsh to come near:
"Aytumsh, Sumargan,
This is the letter of challenge from Kirgiz,
Together let us read it for another time."

They read the letter over again,
The letter from the khan Semtay.
As follows he wrote down relentlessly:
"In the east I heard that you eat human alive,
Each of those people coming to Aytubi,
Could not escape from your mouth.
How many people did you eat?
You shall tell me the truth accurately.

"Taking human flesh as meat to eat,
This is not a humane deed!
You must swear to stop doing this.
On this letter put your fingerprints,
And let the envoys bring to me,
That would be the proof of your promise.

"Sumargan,
You had better perish your evil thought,
Do not think about grabbing the girl of nine years old.

"Aytumsh, Qingersh and Sumargan,
If you do not listen to my words,
The dauntless people will rise up to revenge,
Punishing you according to my will.

"As you can see in this letter,
Those are all my requirements.
Come to fight with Kirgiz people,
If you are unwilling to accept,

And I am waiting for your reply."

Aytumsh, Qingersh and Sumargan,
After reading the letter together,
Discussed for quite a long time,
And decided to battle against Kirgiz men.

Sumargan announced with gruff voice:
"We will see you here in six days!"
Then turned away to prepare for the war.
Qingersh and Aytumsh,
Turned back to whisper behind the wall,
Leaving the envoys to be perturbed.

Knowing the rule of not killing envoys,
In the letter Aytumsh wrote all his words,
And gave it to them to take back.
To show the khan's generosity,
He sent new clothes to those men.
Their calm finally resumed,
And on the horses they started to go back.
Let us leave this part aside,
And take a look at Semtay Khan.

Since Turna had left,
Semtay was restless day and night,
He summoned the leaders to discuss:
"The warrior Turna has gone for days,
They might be in danger at all times.
People in Aytubi are from all places,
Does their khan know the etiquette of reception?
Does he know the rule of not killing envoys?
To them I am worried if anything would happen,
Their situation is always what we concern.

"We can not stop here,
Nor can we wait for the reply of Aytumsh,

To move on is what we have to do at once.
If the group of Turna can return safely,
We will see them on our way.
If they are sent into prison,
We have to rescue with no delay.

"We shall approach Aytubi,
And make a decision then as the occasion demands.
If Aytumsh dare resist,
We will definitely start the fight."

What Semtay Khan said,
Were praised by the Old Bakay and all others.
They then mounted the steeds and marched toward the west.

A grassy steppe was in front of them,
Flocks of gazelles were running all around,
And wild deer were playing at the riverside.
The warriors hunted during the march,
Taking the preys as their precious feast.
The leathers were cut into strips,
Braided into ropes and taken by their sides.

Since leaving Talas,
It was the first time they played with joy.
As they were near to Aytubi,
Some figures came into sight.
Whipping the horses to approach fast,
They saw the five envoys returned safe and sound.

They had planned to walk for anther day,
Returning by tomorrow to Semtay.
Overjoyed to see khan on the way,
Turna sent the letter to Semtay.

"I am the khan of Aytubi,
Do not expect us to surrender easily.

If you are Semtay Khan of Kirgiz in deed,
For what reason you came here as if getting lost?
What a grave mistake it was,
That you dared trespass on my land!
I urge you to turn back for your own good.

"If you do not leave at once,
We have a hero named Sumargan,
Who is going to eat each of you alive.
And drain your blood to the last drop.

"On my land there has been no one daring set a foot,
The intruders will not have any chance to go back.

"I know you came from the Central Asia,
Grazing cattle and sheep day in and out,
Each of you are plump and fat.
Come to fight with me if you dare,
If you win,
You are lucky,
And if you lose,
You are my food,
Your every drop of blood will be drained.

"In my eyes,
You can not be better than my trouser ends[1],
If you do not listen,
On my dinner table you will be placed.

"If you decide to fight,
Rush to the battlefield as rapidly as you can.
Plant your banner into the ground in the castle suburb,
And I will expose you to complete defeat.

1 trouser ends: It is the most common words to scorn an opponent, it means you are lower than my trouser ends.

"You are courting death, Semtay,
Why did you come here across rivers and hills?
Your men and your horses are exhausted,
For your rash and unconsidered acts,
Kirgiz are going to shed blood at this place,
You deserve it!
And you asked for it!"

Reading the letter,
Semtay Khan mutely kept his countenance.
You can never regard a cannibal as a man,
The khan barely took the enemy into any account.

The Young Alemsarik's Killing of Seven Dobati Brothers

As the next morning came,
The gold-gilded red banner of Manas,
Outside of the castle was lifted high.
Semtay thought to himself:
If they live up to their words,
We shall meet here to measure our strength.

Seeing the banner outside,
To their khan Aytumsh's patrols reported:
"The troops of the Kirgiz are not in a large size,
While their men are mighty and disciplined.
They have already put the flagpole upright,
The gold-gilded red banner is waving in the wind."

When he heard the patrols' report,
Sumargan shouted with outrage:
"I shall rush forward by myself,
No solders and no attendants,
I shall wipe out the Kirgiz."

Aytumsh exhorted Sumargan:
"Ay,
Reckless Sumargan,
It is said that take your foe as a tiger,
If you consider yourself a lion,
Only then can you fight with the Kirgiz.

"If you meet the attack alone,
You will be in derision,

And bring us embarrassment.
Fight with your seventy thousand men,
And let them devour the Kirgiz.
If they do not appear in three days,
The problem will be difficult to deal with.

"Before the arrival of your soldiers,
My troops will meet the attack first.
There are lots of warriors with me,
Each one thinks himself matchless,
Let them fight and compete in battlefield."

After Sumargan left,
Aytumsh and Qingersh,
Led twelve thousand soldiers to the front,
Vast and mighty with the banner waving in the wind.

From the castle of Aytubi,
Rushed out the giant Dobati.
He rode a black male camel to the battlefield,
And in a loud voice he shouted:
"Aytumsh!"
As if to gobble all of them up.

Dobati was stalwart and taller than a plane tree,
With the head as huge as a yurt.
The brows as a cur lying on a hayrick.
And the arms long and thick,
He held a spear in his hand.
He was said to be full of vigor,
Capable of unweariedly fighting for ten days.

Seeing the arrogance of the foe,
Alemsarik itched to begin a fight,
Asking to meet the challenge of Dobati.
Old Bakay agreed with a nod:
"Go ahead,

Warrior,
The spirit of Manas bless you."
With the permission,
The Lion Alemsarik rode straightly to the battlefield.

Seeing a child of Kirgiz,
Confronted with mountainous Dobati,
People of Aytubi made a fuss,
Thinking it ridiculous.
"He is not comparable with Dobati,
He can not even fill his belly!"

Dobati on the black male camel,
Looked like a moving hill.
The soldiers sighed in great fright,
Even the ground could not hold his might,
The earth trembled and the mountains swayed.

This evil-minded bastard heavily breathed,
And truculently came to the battlefield,
The Lion Alemsarik rode before him,
With a spear in his hand.

Seeing the young teenager,
Dobati swallowed his slobber.
He ferociously urged the horse forward,
Intending to catch Alemsarik into his mouth.

People of Aytubi only knew Dobati's thick arms,
While had not seen the valor of the Kirgiz youth!

Cruelly Dobati thrust Alemsarik,
When the spearhead almost touched his chest,
With one hand Alemsarik pushed it aside,
And transfixed Dobati's spine with the spear in the other hand.
Dobati dropped from the camel,
Broke the neck.

One after another Dobati's six brothers hit out,
They bent on revenge,
And put Alemsarik to death.
How could they defeat the offspring of Manas,
In succession the six brothers died.
The seven brothers of the same father,
Disappeared in the dust altogether.
Then both sides reached a truce for the coming night.

The next day when the morning star disappeared,
Soldiers of two sides had flocked into the battlefield.
On account of yesterday's victory,
The hero Alemsarik was in high spirit.
Aytubi lost seven warriors in the initial combat,
All of his men seemed overwhelmed.
Aytumsh and Qingersh,
Irritated and discomfited.

At this time,
A beast with a face reddish brown as a goat lung,
Grinded his teeth and rode to the front.
His gray mule,
Waved its short tail,
Raising the dust with its hooves.

The beast was named Tikay,
Intent on revenge against the Kirgiz.
His face was green and his stare angry,
The murderous eyes were terrifying.
His ferocious face was large as a calf,
Six wild dogs could not eat it up.
The sagging neck hanging on his chest,
Looking like a twelve-year-old child.

Armed with a six feet iron stick,
On his shoulder a shield was carried by Tikay.

The sword at his waist glistened cold light,
As if was to destroy all the lives.

Alemsarik was fearless,
Toward Tikay he urged his steed,
Tikay lifted the stick into the air,
Hitting toward the head of Alemsarik,
Alemsarik warded it off,
And the stick fell to the ground.

Alemsarik grabbed the opportunity,
Thrusting the neck of Tikay.
The spearhead did not pierce his neck,
But broke and dropped to the ground.

Tikay felt extremely angry for that hit,
Straight to Alemsarik he rushed.
Seizing each other's collars,
With bare hands they grappled.
From morning to night,
Their robes were both ripped,
But none of them was kicked down from the horse.
The night fell since the sunset,
After all the animals came back to their nests,
The two sides started to return to their campsites.

At this moment,
Sumargan arrived with his seventy thousand soldiers,
Aytumsh and Qingersh,
Tearfully complained:
"Sumargan,
After you left,
Only two of us led the troops to fight.
There was an invincible Kirgiz youth,
He defeated Dobati at first,
And killed all the seven Dobati brothers.

"The hero Tikay was on a rampage,
Going to revenge with might and main.
But got attacked by the spear at the start.
The two fought at outrance hand-to-hand,
From the sunrise to sunset,
And no one either won or lost.
That is our present plight."

Utterly furious,
Sumargan was sullen-faced.
He scolded Aytumsh and Qingersh:
"The day before yesterday you told me a bunch of crap,
Asking me to bring the troops before fight.
It just cost me two days' time to depart and arrive,
While you are like drowned rats when I am back,
How dare both of you have the nerve to see me?

"Why not tell the Kirgiz,
That you would start the fight after I come back?
Now I have seen through you,
Imbecile, incompetent, and self-important.
Having vainly thought about defeating the Kirgiz in my absence,
Now what else will you argue as we lost our warriors?

"Listen,
I shall kill the Kirgiz first,
And then I will return to sort you out.

"The next morning Tikay will go for a single combat,
Do not let the tiny child to be too scared.
I will kill him in front of you,
And take him as my breakfast.

"You two conceited khans!
Listen carefully to my words:
From now on,
You must not leave the battlefield,

Until we defeat the Kirgiz and get the ultimate triumph.
You must not go home,
Nor must you hide,
If any one intend to sneak away,
I will peel him with no mercy.
I will make you see with your own eyes,
That how the Kirgiz people who terrified you,
Are wiped out by myself."

Sumargan's words were like a command,
Aytumsh and Qingersh dared not utter a sound,
And looked at Sumargan as rats looked at a cat.
Both of them spent a sleepless night,
Keeping walking around with restless minds.

The eastern sky had been turning pearly white,
The larks began to sing and chirp.
The morning breeze blew over the earth,
And all the animals came out from their nests.

Aytumsh and Qingersh,
Rode toward the central battlefield in haste.
Tikay rushed in the front of the troops,
Deciding to continue the combat unfinished,
He would not stop fighting until one of them return to dust.

Seeing Tikay had already been in the field,
Alemsarik fiercely rushed forward to continue the fight.
The swords clashed with sparkles,
The axes collided with earsplitting sounds.
One warrior stabbed with his spear,
And the other defended by his shield.
They were already familiar with each other,
Holding their lives tight in their own hands,
Even braver than before and never compromise.

In Alemsarik's heart flamed the anger,

The name of Manas was shouted from his mouth,
At Tikay he thrust his gray spear.
Hearing the name of Manas echoing in the air,
Tikay lost his courage and trembled with fear,
He chopped back and escaped,
Horribly scared.

The spear of the Lion Alemsarik,
Had been stuck into Tikay's back,
Headlong he fell from the horse.

A roar shook the heaven and startled the earth,
The dust floating in the air blocked the sunlight.
Among the dust a yellow banner indistinctly appeared,
Seventy thousand soldiers fiercely growled,
As a tide they surged toward the battlefield.
Sumargan was on a black steed,
As a python he galloped forward.
On his tabard,
Serpents were embroidered.

Imposing like a giant dragon,
His furious roar shook the earth,
Merciless as a starving wolf,
He came alone in front of the two sides,
Shouting with overweening arrogance:
"I am the hero Sumargan,
Who have the guts to accept my challenge?
I am ready to teach you a lesson.

"I shall play in the lake of your blood,
And achieve the dream of Aytumsh and Qingersh.
I shall kill all the Kirgiz,
Making you vanish from the earth.

"I heard your hometown is called Talas,
And your ancestor is named Manas.

I shall destroy your City of Sire,
And make the castle into rocks and sands.
If anyone dare to mention Manas,
I shall have his tongue ripped out.

"If anyone dare to revolt,
I shall cut off his eyes,
And peel his skin off like killing a sheep.
If I can not make it,
I had better die on the battlefield.
I shall fight you to the last drop of my blood,
I shall not stop until a winner is declared!

"I shall pull out your entrails,
Conducting Sadha to myself.
If I can not make it,
I had better die on the battlefield.
Even destined to misfortune,
I shall never draw back!"

Hearing the curse of Sumargan,
Alemsarik was in outrage,
Shouting the name of Manas,
And rushing at Sumargan with his steed and spear.

Seeing the coming one young and strong,
With glistening forehead and radiant face,
Sumargan was in an ecstasy:
"You are the one I want to eat,
Fat and tender with good taste,
I shall take you as my breakfast."

Sumargan galloped forward to meet the attack,
Fended off the spear of Alemsarik,
And turned around to fight back.
Alemsarik did not give his way,
Shielded off the spear at full tilt.

Having attacked in vain,
Ouraged Sumargan stabbed once again,
And the spear was stuck into Alemsarik's spine.

With his feet slipping from the stirrups,
And his bottom sliding from the saddle,
Alemsarik fell off to the ground.
It was at this juncture that,
Salamart dashed forward to rescue,
Covering Alemsarik to return to the barrack.

Sumargan gritted his teeth with rage,
Having not asked his rival's name,
He bolted for Salamart as a rabid dog.
Salamart stayed calm and collected,
Meeting the attack to the utmost.

The spears clashed in sparks,
The battleaxes collided and axes heads dropped.
The swords smashed together and the blades fell off,
No one could tell which hero would win and who was going to lose.

Food and water were all afterthoughts,
The two had fought for three days and nights.
It was until the two sides were all exhausted,
That they agreed to truce for one moment.

Having re-equipped,
They went on to struggle and fight,
Torn were their tabards,
Once one grasped the rival's collars,
And dragged while pressing him on the stirrups,
Swayed would as well be the steed.
The two warriors became even braver without weariness,
Swearing to kill each other and never giving their ways.

At this juncture,
Sumargan's full brother Surmargan,
Whipped his horse to rush forward,
Intending to lend Sumargan a hand.
The Heroine Kuyale was outraged,
Blocking the way of Surmargan:
"My name is Kuyale,
Who are you?
Salamart and Sumargan,
Are fighting till this moment,
No one has fallen down to the ground,
Why should you lend a hand?
Me, Kuyale, will not let you interrupt."

Surmargan could not answer,
But drew his sword with shameful rage,
And dashed toward Kuyale.
The heroine Kuyale was not afraid,
Stretching her sword out to encounter the attack.
For her it was inappropriate to shout the name of Manas,
Thus meditated in the heart:
"Bless me, the spirit of Aykoler[①]."
The two heroes joined the fight,
And there were four warriors grappling all at once.

Krichorao mounted a steed and shouted:
"Kuyale and Surmargan,
Listen:
For you to compete it is not the time.
The fight between Salamart and Sumargan,
Still does not come to an end,
Resist your urge and do keep calm."

Hearing the words of Krichorao,

1 Aykoler: Kirgiz term, laudatory title of Manas, which means a broad-minded hero. According to the rules of the Kirgiz, a daughter-in-law can not call the names of her husband's brothers, sisters and all the elders.

The two heroes backed to their own sides.

Krichorao kept watching the fight,
Finding that Salamart got the upper hand,
Relievedly he turned his steed.
At this juncture,
A roar came out from Salamart,
He yelled the name of Manas,
Even the ground was shaken by the shout.
Salamart waved his spear,
Piercing the bottom of Sumargan,
Sumargan dropped from the saddle.
Suffering from the deadly blow,
All at once he lost his halo.

Rapidly Surmargan turned his horse,
And rescued Sumargan.
He rushed forward to kill Salamart,
Roaring as the thunder in the storm,
The ground shook and raised the dust,
Cowards were scared to wet their pants.

Surmargan held his spear,
With the spearhead sparkling firelight.
His piebald steed was dauntless,
Erecting its ears to be alert.
Its hooves raised a cloud of dust,
Its bell sounded sharp and loud.
The steed also prayed in its heart,
For the God's guard and bless.

As soon as he touched Salamart,
Surmargan shielded off the hit,
Before having time to turn back,
Salamart was stabbed and fell from the horseback.
At the moment to be killed,
Heroine Kuyale appeared.

Kuyale and Surmargan,
Two heroes met again,
In order to poke the foe down,
They both planned in their minds.

Surmargan thought to himself,
He could poke Kuyale down,
In the same way as dealing with Salamart.
While Kuyale was by no means ordinary,
Having beaten lots of savage enemies,
She always turned the tide in plight,
And made contributions to the Kirgiz.

The steed of Kuyale named Gilgitbiz,
Could not been caught up by the wind.
The lance held in Kuyale's hand,
Was poisonous at the point,
Anyone wounded by that lance,
Would have no chance to survive.
As a highly skilled heroine,
She had never let any foe flee.

Kuyale and Surmargan,
A Heroine and a hero,
Fought each other with no mercy.
Such fierce fight scene was so rare,
That the soldiers of both sides were scared.
Thunderously they roared,
Waving their swords and spears.

Both heroes were full of valor and vigor,
The roars of soldiers made the hills totter.
Shouting the names of their own forefathers,
The soldiers boosted the morale of the heroes,
With sweat streaming down to their mouths from the foreheads.

The two heroes hacked with all power,
Sparks came out of the clashing helmets.
Spearheads impacted,
Twinkling,
Shafts impacted,
Deafening.
The dust shrouded the battlefield,
They fought from sunrise to sunset,
And did not stop until then.

The next morning at the crack of dawn,
The troops of both sides came to the battlefield.
Surmargan wishfully thought:
"Today I shall defeat Kuyale,
Would not it be nice to grab her as my concubine,
And let her bear a braver hero for myself?"
Then seized by a whim Surmargan rejoiced,
Urged his horse forward to the heroine,
And itched to grab her immediately.

Kuyale's steed Gilgitbiz,
Not vigorous like yesterday it was,
Stayed still as if having a sickness.

Surmargan laughed in his heart:
"Today her horse lacks its strength,
To get that woman I shall take the chance."
With the evil intentions,
Surmargan became much more ferocious.

Kuyale found her horse powerless,
"I should not be defeated on account of my steed,
Otherwise I would be too shamed to show my face."
She cheered up at the thought,
Shouted the name of "Aykoler",
And then flanked the enemy with great care.

Surmargan suddenly managed to dodge,
Rapidly turned his horse to pursue and attack,
And with the spear he thrust at Kuyale's hip.
Having Noticed Surmargan's intention,
Kuyale tried to turn her steed to avoid the hit,
While the steed was too sluggish,
And it did not make it,
The enemy's spearhead had pierced Kuyale's rib.

Kuyale laid on the horseback,
Gilgitbiz was stained with blood.
Surmargan reached for the bridle,
Intending to take both horse and her to the camp.

"Kuyale is in no way to be caught!
Otherwise we shall be disgraced."
Krichorao shouted and waved his whip,
The roar shook off all the leaves on the trees,
Gray Hare rushed forward at full speed.

The roar of the lion trembled the earth,
Surmargan lost his head at once.
Kuyale took the chance to straighten her back on the horse,
She held up the door-plank-sized Crescent Axe,
At Surmargan's arm she hacked,
And the arm was cut off by the sharp axe.
Sumargan rushed over upon seeing the attack,
Rescuing his brother to the camp in the west.
By the bridle Krichorao led Kuyale's steed,
And came back to the camp in the east.

Bakay Annihilated Enemies of Night Raid

In the troops of Sumargan,
There was a warrior named Tytalo,
Against whom no one dared contend.
He kept saying to himself:
"Sumargan and Surmargan,
Both are less competent than I am."

Overbearing Tytalo was wicked and merciless,
What he did today was extremely perverse.
Twilight was falling at that moment,
It was even impossible to discern others' faces,
Tytalo ordered to sound the drums and the horns,
Leading seventy thousand soldiers to march in the darkness.

Tytalo said these words:
"Set off,
My warriors,
We shall besiege the Kirgiz under the cover of night,
Do not let any of them escape,
I shall massacre them to the last man.

"The Kirgiz have five heroes,
I shall catch them all alive at this night.
Their leader comes to be the very first,
All his folks take orders from his mouth,
Only under his permission can they go for fight,
Otherwise they have no choice but to stay put.

The most fierce one of them,

Is on a gray fine horse.
The man on the Burule steed,
Sturdy, stalwart and superior,
That must be their khan.

"Kuyale who had come to fight,
Among women she is the heroine,
But in front of me,
She amounts to nothing.

"And there is also a youth on a dark brown horse,
Stout and strong as he is,
The boy is far from adultness,
Lacking of battlewise.
Though the Kirgiz warriors are dauntless and fierce,
They are not even close to flawless.

"Only the man on the gray steed,
Intelligent, ingenious and imposing,
With wisdom and strategies in his head,
Must be a remarkable chieftain.
It will be hard to win,
If we fight against him on one's own.

"We have seventy thousand warriors in total,
There are only one thousand of them.
As long as we rush forward as tide,
Launch the attack all at once,
And split as well as encircle the six of them,
How can they escape from our hands?
Before the darkness comes to the end,
We shall catch them all alive."

On the back of an elephant,
As a hillock Tytalo's stature was giant.
He waved the spear in his hand,
And set his mind on catching the Kirgiz chiefs.

Hearing the thunder of the war drums in the distance,
The Old Bakay started to speak:
"Semtay and Krichorao,
I have a premonition that something will happen tonight,
The barefaced Aytumsh may launch a sneak attack.
I have encountered so much like this,
To guard against their conspiracy is a must,
We have to prepare well on all accounts.

"You shall follow my arrangement,
Set a row of wooden men beside every yurt,
To confuse the enemies and entrap them.

"Semtay, Krichorao,
Salamart, Kuyale,
And the Lion Alemsarik,
You five shall stay in one yurt,
Take your turns to attend the fight,
When the enemy rushes forward.
The others shall beat the drums hard,
Letting them think there are hordes of troops.
Fight them to the finish by all manner of means,
Make sure to kill or injure their soldiers,
And do not let their leader escape.

"We are inferior in the size of the troops,
And will fall for their tricks if all stay put.
To defeat the enemies in large amount,
Requires using your wit as controlling the flood.

"I shall lead one thousand men,
Hide in the forest near our camp,
And then wait till the daybreak,
We shall launch the attack from the foes' back,
Letting none of them escape with their lives.

"Injured Surmargan is incompetent to fight,

And Sumargan is almost tired to death.
Aytumsh and Qingersh,
Will not attack us in join hands."
Facing the Old Bakay's arrangement,
Everyone agreed with no doubt.

One thousand soldiers acted together,
Upright they set one thousand wooden men,
Making no difference with real soldiers in the dark.
The one thousand warriors under uncle Bakay's guide,
Hid into the forest nearby,
Semtay led the five of them,
To stay and watch in one yurt.

At that moment,
The seventy thousand soldiers of Tytalo departed,
Ready to attack the camp of the Kirgiz.
The seventy thousand men fiercely went forward,
By encirclement they intended to wipe out the Kirgiz.
Seeing the large amount of soldiers around the yurt,
They rapidly besieged the camp from all sides.
Thirty-nine warriors with Tytalo as the head,
Rushed in the very front of the troops.

At the word of Tytalo's command,
Numerous enemies rushed into the camp.
Seeing the men outside of the yurts were all wood-made,
They were startled at once!
Was there any ambush inside the yurt?
They could not figure it out.
The enemies dared not rush into the yurts,
Besieging them separately and ready to assault.

The five heroes stayed still,
Alemsarik alone burst out.
Hacking the enemies with no sweat.
The sounds of the drums thundered,

And the flares of the firelocks soared.

The Lion Alemsarik had an uninterrupted success,
Ran toward the foes with sword in his hand,
Where there were more enemies,
There was his merciless hack.

Killing amid the crowd of enemies,
Alemsarik shouted the name of Manas,
As loud as being in an unpeopled land.
The blood dropped from his blade,
The earth under his feet was dyed into red.

He distracted Tytalo's soldiers,
At separate corners outside of the yurt,
Leaving them to the five heroes to fight against.
Seeing nothing in the dark,
Tytalo lost his presence of mind.

The soldiers realized that the situation went worse,
Turning around the horse heads to escape.
They had been driven here by Tytalo the very night,
Where there were only wooden men all around,
But it was too late to find that they were trapped.

Hearing the shout of Manas,
Tytalo was burning with impatience.
He craftily thought to himself:
"Why there is only one voice?
Apart from the one man,
Why there is no other shouts?
Had other forces escaped?
I shall burst into their yurts,
And figure it out myself."

Tytalo rode an elephant,
The tail of it was short,

Making himself more ugly and absurd.
He had an extremely high nose,
And there were blains on his dark face.
Even a carriage could drive through between his eyes,
And his brows looked like two goats.
The head huge as a yurt,
His hair looked like ropes,
And his breast was as big as a child.
Look at his leg muscles,
So strong like a one-year-old calf.

Tytalo stole on the yurt,
Under the cover of darkness.
He collided with Alemsarik by chance,
And the juvenile hero shouted:
"Who dare to enter the heroes' yurt?"

"I am Tytalo,
You have never seen my might.
I knew your soldiers have fled away,
You are the only one who stays and hides,
I am here to catch you alive."

Alemsarik roared:
"Listen,
You damn stupid idiot,
The Kirgiz people are dauntless,
It is our backbone from ancient times.
You such an impudent bastard,
Why did you disturb warriors at night?

"As for your dirty trick,
We have known everything about that.
The grave has been dug for you,
Waiting for your appearance.
If you are a stalwart man,
Then come forward to the fight.

I shall chop off your head and break your waist,
I shall kill you at first,
Then wipe out all your attendants."

Hearing the words of Alemsarik,
With fury Tytalo stamped.
Waving the spear in his hand,
Tytalo rushed toward Alemsarik.

Alemsarik roused himself,
To meet the attack and ducked the hit.
Alemsarik fought with Tytalo in no haste,
For knowing that,
There were four heroes waiting to succeed.

Tytalo stabbed once again,
Alemsarik shoved it aside.
Tytalo roared the name of his ancestor,
To pray for bless of his spirit.
And roughly waved his battleax.
Faced with the hill-like boar,
Alemsarik gradually felt overwhelmed.

The hero Salamart joined the combat.
He fought with Tytalo at all risks.
The spears flew and impacted,
The shafts broke into pieces.
At the sixth round of the fight,
The hill-like Tytalo went mad,
Leading a charge to Salamart.
Kuyale saw Salamart's strain,
And assisted from the side of him.
Tytalo was fearless and fiercer,
Attempting to beat down two heroes all at once.

Semtay and Krichorao did not act,
Until the coming of dawn break,

They started to fight back the intruder.
Semtay attacked Tytalo straightly,
He had the strength to destroy everything.
He cleaved with his sword with no mercy,
And beat Tytalo down within a round.

The thirty-eight attendants remaining,
Rushed at Semtay together.
Majestic Semtay waved the Achalbaris sword,
Which could extend automatically.
He killed ten soldiers by one sway,
And the thirty-eight wild dogs died at once.

At this moment,
Bakay with one thousand soldiers,
Came back to the camp from the forest,
And cut off the retreat of the enemies.

The Lion Krichorao,
The heroine Kuyale,
And Alemsarik as well as Salamart,
Into the enemy group they all rushed.
Heroes of the Kirgiz got together,
Killing the enemies courageously.

At the time of sunrise,
Seventy thousand soldiers of the enemies,
Left only fewer than one thousand.

Seeing the army defeated,
Sumargan were burning with impatience.
He urged the horse to rush forward,
And attempted to fight against Krichorao in despair.

The Kirgiz hero Krichorao,
Fought against him bravely.
To each other they showed no mercy,

And struggled in grappling for two days.
Sumargan was tired out,
He fled after a feign attack,
And Krichorao closely pursued him.

The loser fled rapidly in the front,
The winner urged the steed to chase after him.
With a cloud of dust raised following.

At this time came the voice of Bakay,
Krichorao was asked to backtrack:
"Do not chase after the fleeing foes,
Do not wipe your sword with the defeater's blood.
This warning was not compiled nowadays,
It is the admonition of our ancestors."
Hearing the call of Bakay,
The Lion Krichorao turned his horse's head.

Among the seventy thousand soldiers of Tytalo,
Only five hundred or so remained,
In panic the remnant soldiers fled.

Now,
Let us put this to one side,
And sing about the war between the Kirgiz and Kezriarip.

The Heroes Got Trapped Beside the Devils Lake

Sumargan Ran for Help

There had been seventy thousand soldiers of Sumargan,
Against the Kirgiz he led the troops to fiercely fight,
Suffering a crushing defeat and the whole army was drowned,
While unresignedly he started to run for help.

In the west of sunset lived seven giants,
Apart from Sumargan and Surmargan,
There were other five of them,
They had not the least idea that,
The flames of war flared up in the land of Sumargan.

Sumargan came to the door of Kezriarip[①],
Embarrassed beyond words and discredited to visit.
As utterly disgraced by the loss,
Sumargan threw his dignity to one side.

With the bow and arrows hanging on the neck,
He bent over and moved his feet,
Making a bow as a woman did,
To gave his regards to Kezriarip.
Red-faced Kezriarip asked:
"What brought you here in front of me?"

Sumargan started to pour out his woes:
"In the place of Aytubi,
There lives the khan Aytumsh,
He has a hero named Qingersh.

1 Kezriarip: Kirgiz term, "kezri"means red,"arip" means a hero and giant, and implys a red-faced hero in personal names.

"The daughter of Qingersh Qinekay,
Was a girl beautiful and gorgeous,
To marry her,
I sought a marriage alliance to Qingersh,
He asked for one thousand people as the bride price,
Thus I caught people all around by all means,
And one after another of them I delivered to him.

"There were five people coming from the east of sunrise,
I barely know anything of them.
These men escaped from my hand,
And ran to the place of Kirgiz.
To the Semtay Khan,
They reported this case.

"Semtay led one thousand warriors,
Across rivers and hills they came to the west,
Sending the envoys to our Khan at first,
To deliver the letter of challenge.
We were unwilling to obey Semtay's words,
And decided to have a big fight against the Kirgiz.

"I led seventy thousand warriors,
Aytumsh and Qingersh,
Brought as well quite a few soldiers,
Going forward with great strength to accept the challenge.

"I had well planned,
To destroy them in one fight.
Who would ever thought,
That the Kirgiz were such brave and battlewise,
As our troops suffered a crushing defeat.
Forty-six warriors died in the battlefield,
Surmargan was seriously wounded,
Could not even move at the last gasp.

"Oh, Kezriarip,

In the west of sunset,
There are more than me and you,
There live brothers Akem and Shakem.
Boronbay on the gray-specked steed,
As well as the strong man Haribek are on our side.

"As long as we fight in union,
And having you as our patron,
We shall defeat the Kirgiz people.
And I must marry the beauty Qinekay,
To put her at my side.

"Kezriarip,
There are something else,
On hearing of which I was greatly furious.

"Manas as the father of Semtay,
Had led the expedition to Begin,
Defeated Khitan and the Karamark people,
And taken their girls as wives.

"They also went to Afghan,
Bringing disaster to the land.
As long as the horses could reach,
They would rush toward the place.
Sart had challenged you twice,
While by the Kirgiz he was also killed.

"The bashful strong women,
Had no choice but also to follow them.
Once the Kirgiz defeat me,
You shall be the next to overthrow.
All the seven giants in the west,
Shall have no ways to escape."

With a vulture's tail Kezriarip,
Hearing the words of Sumargan,

In haste summoned forty thousand men,
And decided to lead the troops on his own.
No steed could carry a giant as him,
Thus he could only go to the battlefield on his feet.
Let him keep walking on the way,
And we will talk about how Sumargan ran for help.

Exhausted Sumargan,
Turned his horse's head to go ahead,
He came to Akem and Shakem's side,
And said every single word,
As what he told to Kezriarip.
The brothers Akem and Shakem,
Led sixty thousand soldiers to assist at once.

Cunning Sumargan kept forward,
And found Boronbay this time,
Tearfully pouring out his woes,
In the same words as he previously told,
With a mixture of truth and falsehood.
Boronbay was outraged by the words,
Leading forty thousand soldiers to attend the fight.

Boronbay had a bronze whip,
Which could split the stone in half.
It was a gift as a souvenir,
Given by the witch Kublegen.
He knew well the power of the whip,
And would fear nothing so long as it was in his hand.

Sumargan was such unpredictable,
As could across the rivers without wade,
And across the mountains without climb,
What exquisite magics he had!
He came before Haribek at last,
Still with the whip on his neck,
To the khan he showed his regards.

Haribek was brutal by nature,
Anyone who met him would mostly be killed.

Brutal Haribek was majestic as a hill,
He saw the coming of Sumargan.
And sat there without a word for a while,
All of a sudden he screamed:
"The son of Su, Sumargan,
Will you marry the beauty Qinekay,
Has she already satisfied your wish?

"Did you use human as the bride price,
How many people have you enslaved?
To Aytumsh and Qingersh,
How much misery have you brought?"

Deceitful Sumargan was weak at the knees,
Thinking that his last hour had come,
In haste he quibbled for himself:
"Khan Haribek,
I came here specially to pay a visit,
We should seize the chance of this day,
Who knows what tomorrow will bring?

"The khan of the Kirgiz, Semtay,
From thousands miles away he came to challenge me.
I led seventy thousand soldiers to defend,
And embarrassedly suffered a disastrous defeat.

"The Kirgiz people fought in every place,
They have occupied the whole east,
And now they dispatched troops to the west,
To those people I said your name,
But was cursed roundly by all of them.

"By the Kirgiz,
Aytumsh and Qingersh have been besieged,

The side of Shaytan Lake,
Was dyed with blood.
Making me deeply worried and depressed.

"The hearts of the Kirgiz have rotted,
They optionally slaughtered our livestock.
The world for us were more cramped,
And our lives even harder than ever.
That I rushed to pay this visit,
Is to tell you my innermost thought.

"Kezriarip Khan,
The two brothers Akem and Shakem,
As well as Boronbay who rides a gray-secked steed,
Knowing this news,
Have led their soldiers to march forward,
And are on their ways to combat the Kirgiz."
Sumargan finished his talk with a lump in the throat,
And lost his control to burst into tears.

"Stop crying,
You wild cur,
How dare you claim to be a warrior!
Who are Semtay and the Kirgiz?
You did not make it clear,
Tell me about it once again."

Sumargan straightened his back immediately,
And then bowed respectfully,
With these words he cried bitterly:
"Just now I dare not tell you explicitly,
This time let me speak from the beginning.

"After the my retreat for the defeat,
I was perplexed and disappointed,
The only thing I wanted was coming to visit,
And to weep out my grievances.

"Semtay who came to provoke,
Is the khan of the Kirgiz,
His father is the hero Manas,
The mane wolf having no counterpart.

"Previously he led an expedition to the east,
Then beat Khitan and Karamark.
The Kirgiz occupied Begin,
Trampled the land,
And governed the populace.

"Tashkent, Kokand and Kashmir,
Margoland, Kashgar and Khotan,
Including Kangayi in the north have paid allegiance to the Kirgiz.

"The khan of Urum, Orus,
Is the brother of Manas.
To avoid the diasater,
Urum also became a tribe of the Kirgiz.

"The son of Manas, Semtay,
Challenged the heroes of the time,
And one after another overthrew them.

"Now he started to challenge the west,
And took no account of you.
In their words you were inferior to their trouser ends,
And they are likely to invade the whole land."

Before Sumargan finished his words,
Evil-minded Haribek interrupted,
Exclaiming with a grim face:
"Sumargan,
Since you knew the bravery of the Kirgiz,
Why did you not ask me for help at first?
Now you have been driven so desperate,

That finally came to me for assistance.

With a vulture's tail Kezriarip,
Akem and Shakem,
Boronbay on the gray-specked steed and you two brothers,
All of you are under my protect.
I am your khan,
Why did you tell them first,
Instead of coming to me straightforward.

"Call them back at once,
Do not stand here as an idiot.
They should not be anxious to accept the challenge.
I am disinclined to see the sight,
That they are swallowed by the foes.
Stop them at once,
Before they may die in vain.
If they are all slaughtered,
I am the only one to revenge.
In the west there are few giants,
We must avoid to be wiped out.

"Before you arrive the battlefield,
If someone have died in the fight,
They deserve to be killed!
The one who disregards my orders,
And makes bold to join the fight,
Shall never appear before my eyes.

"I will make the rampaging Kirgiz,
Get to know how fierce I am!
In the world,
Including the people of Kirgiz,
No one shall disregard me.
I will lead my sixty thousand soldiers,
To combat against the Kirgiz."

Haribek still burned with wrath,
He did not invite Sumargan to sit,
Or even give him a bowl of milky tea,
Nor did he give him a piece of naan,
And like that he let him leave the yurt.

Relived Sumargan,
Was well-satisfied and wishfully thought:
"Today I am in luck that,
Haribek promised to fight by himself,
To the Kirgiz he will bring disasters.
And the other five giants also came to assist,
This time the Kirgiz people are doomed."

The Heroes Fought against the Giant Kezriarip

The red-faced giant Kezriarip,
Was a giant that no steed could bear on its back.
Thus could only go to the battlefield on his feet.
He led the hordes of troops and horses,
The soldiers never unarmed nor unsaddled,
Riding day and night and taking no rest,
Finally they came to the ensanguined front.

Kezriarip came to the battlefield,
The sun was rising in the east,
The piles of soldiers' bodies came into his sight,
Solemn and bleak.

Aytumsh and Qingersh,
Unexpectedly saw the hordes of troops,
The crowds moved with overweening arrogance.
Such a scene in front of them,
Made them startled and feel at loss.

They had no idea where were those soldiers from,
Thinking they were reinforcements of the Kirgiz.
"If that is the case,
Our deaths are at hand."

Both of them were in panic,
Rushing toward Surmargan's side,
"Ay, Surmargan,
You are our protector,
And you are our prop.

Although your arm has been cut off,
Now we are once again in trouble.

"There was a giant came into our sight,
With his hill-like stature tall and great.
He did not ride a horse but went on his feet,
And there were thousands of troops under his command,
Over forty war banners waved in the wind.

"The Kirgiz who previously came,
Have already ensanguined the land.
Now here come their reinforcements,
Our deaths are at hand,
The fear and disturbance are hanging over us."

Surmargan smiled and said:
"Aytumsh and Qingersh,
You two listen to me carefully,
What you have told is a good news,
Now I feel relieved and lighthearted.
Do not be frightened out of your wits,
Bestir yourselves and prepare for the next fight.

"We have not seen Sumargan these days,
He must planned to revenge against the Kirgiz,
Running all around to ask for help.
The walking giant as you just said,
Is possibly the red-faced giant Kezriarip.
As a hero unbeatable and unrivaled,
Any one who fights against him will be doomed.

"Go quickly up to him,
And sincerely recount as thus:
'The dead ones are all our soldiers,
With the murderers being the Kirgiz.'
Let him massacre the Kirgiz and wipe them out,
And give him the direction of the Kirgiz camps."

Aytumsh and Qingersh,
Went to welcome the walking giant at once.
Coming before the red-faced giant,
They jumped off the horses and made a curtesy.

The giant did not return a salute,
Grabbed them in his hands,
And asked in a rage:
"Who are you?
Do you have any idea,
That I am the giant Kezriarip!"

Aytumsh tearfully whispered:
"The dead ones are all our soldiers,
With the murderers being the Kirgiz."
Hearing the words of Aytumsh,
Kezriarip asked the troops to encamp.

An order was given by Kezriarip:
"Tomorrow morning you shall beat the war drums."
And he turned around to bid:
"Aytumsh and Qingersh,
Bring me the food at once,
I will eat up ninety wild boars.
As for my forty thousand soldiers,
To have one camel every ten people will be sufficient,
We will not take it as a free meal,
A camel will be paid with three horses,
Once we defeat the Kirgiz."

Facing with the commands of the red-faced giant,
Aytumsh and Qingersh had to obey with no choice,
They sent people to find boars and camels all around,
And drive them into the camp of the red-faced giant,
All those animals were eaten up in a moment.

And once again Kezriarip added:

"Aytumsh and Qingersh,
Do not return for the rest,
While the horses of the Kirgiz are left unattended,
Drive them here and they will be yours."

Aytumsh and Qingersh had their hearts broken:
"Damn Kezriarip,
Thought about eating up all our livestock,
Before fighting against the Kirgiz.
And ordered us to grab the Kirgiz horses,
Without affording us any redress.
Each of the day they eat six hundred camels and ninety boars,
How can we withstand such a load?

"Sumargan and Surmargan,
Eating human every single day,
Is it a reversal of our fate,
And what should we do in the following days?
We had better think about it.
It is said that there are still four giants on their ways,
Who knows what they are going to do?"

In low spirits they went back,
Difficult to tell about their sufferings.
Kezriarip had enough pork and camel meat,
And slept well with loud snores.

Kezriarip woke up as the day broke,
The troops beat the drums and blew the horns,
Rushing toward the campsite of the Kirgiz.

At this point,
The Old Bakay said:
"Warriors,
Can you see that,
The reinforcements of our enemies are rushing as floods,
As if to drown us into their tides.

The art of war is a key of fighting from the ancient times,
Do not make a move without the most careful thought.
Remember a few days ago in the fight against Tytalo,
While we were inferior in the numerical strength,
We fended against the foes and won victory at last.

"To my mind,
On this issue we can not let down our guard.
The night before yesterday,
Came a walking red-faced giant,
Moving as a hill on the ground.
The rarest giant in the world,
Leads soldiers as fierce as flood.

"This rival is different in my eyes,
Bringing me misgivings in seeing him,
You shall not underrate such a giant.
Do make full preparation for the fight,
And pull yourselves together to combat.
Be flexible in tactics with both mettle and wit,
And fight a pitched battle with the formidable foes."

The reverent Old Bakay,
Inspired others with his words,
The Kirgiz held aloft the red banner of Manas,
Going to fight against the powerful giant Kezriarip.

From the enemies' camp came out the giant Kezriarip,
As huge as a mountain,
And shaking the earth as moving his feet.
With his eyesight the waves of the lake would be raised,
Dense as jungles were his eyelashes and brows,
There was no arm in his hands,
While his stateliness still arouse fear.

Alemsarik demanded to battle:
"Grandfather,

Please let me fix this devil."
With permission,
He equipped an invulnerable armor,
And looked like a wings-spreading eagle.
Faced with the aggressive red-faced giant,
Alemsarik had no fears,
Rapidly he rushed up to the field.

Alemsarik shouted the slogan Manas,
And took his spear to thrust the giant,
The spearhead was glistening,
And it was aimed at the stomach.
Sharp fang spear,
Bounced like impacted a hard stone.

"I should stab his leg,
Instead of the stomach."
The spear penetrated into the leg deeper than four fingers width,
The giant acted like nothing happened.
Alemsarik stabbed from the left,
And from the right,
Continuously he hit five times.

Red-faced giant neither dodged nor fought back,
He just watched the active youth with his tilted head.
He stretched his arm and grabbed Alemsarik in the hand:
"Hi!
Kirgiz,
Is he your hero?
Look,
Here you are!"
The giant lifted him and threw him out.
In the air,
His body was struggling and rotating.

Lion Krichorao urged the horse on,
And before Alemsarik fell on the ground,

He caught him agilely,
And Alemsarik avoided a disaster being brought upon.

Aytumsh, Qingersh and all warriors,
Were scared by the scene.
"The hero on a gray steed,
Caught a man from the air,
Just like catching an apple.
How on earth mighty he is?
If I fall in his hands,
I can not survive at all."

On his steed Karate[1],
Salamart roared the name Manas,
He rushed up to the giant with a steel lance,
And thrust the giant's armpit and waist.
The giant swayed by these hits.

Since Kezriarip was known as a giant,
He never made a gaffe like that.
Kezriarip looked around with angry eyes,
With his eyeballs almost protruding out.
He saw a plane tree before him,
And uprooted it easily,
Just like pulling out a bunch of Achnatherum[2].

Kezriarip was like an evil-minded boar,
With the name of Manas he suffered the pain by the lance.
He was ashamed into anger,
And when Salamart started next attack,
He lifted the plane tree,
And swept to Salamart.

The plane tree was thicker than a man can clasp,

1 Karate: Kirgiz language, it means nut-brown horse.

2 Achnatherum: The name of a plant, Achnatherum splendens.

Salamart was hit by the branches,
And flew away like a bird,
He fell on the ground,
With his head down,
There were multiple wounds on his head,
And several fractures on his bones.

Seeing this, Kuyale rode forward quickly,
And took Salamart to the campsite.
An herbalist rescued him hurriedly,
Found some bile of vulture as medicine,
And took care of him day and night.

Salamart eventually waked up after six days,
He couldn't move for his serious injury,
And suffered the pain of his bones and muscles.
It was difficult to recover at battlefield,
So he was sent to Tales by ten soldiers,
To have better treatment.

Let's see the fierce fighting on the battlefield.
Resourceful heroine Kuyale,
Combated with Kezriarip for six days,
A fight after a fight,
Heroine Kuyale felt no fatigue,
Could anyone else has such limitless power?

Kezriarip was furious,
He waved the plane tree in bow step.
When Kuyale was turning her horse,
The tree hit her head.
Kuyale fell out like a flying hat,
And his steed Gilgitbiz,
Was crashed on a stone,
And lay down for his broken leg.

Just like an arrow,

Krichorao rushed up in front of Kezriarip,
Took Kuyale out of danger,
And had Gilgitbiz sent to the campsite.

Heroine Kuyale coughed slightly,
And called Alemsarik to her side.
"Child,
You tell the khan my words,
And ask for their idea.
Salamart was injured badly,
The arrangement of our khan is proper,
That had him back to home.

"Gilgitbiz fractured its hind leg,
It can not fight with me.
I will treat it carefully,
And let it return from injury.

"The situation will be really tough,
To go on the combat against Kezriarip.
I should not be hands-off.
Let me leave the campsite temporarily,
I will come back after my steed's recovery."

Before Bakay and the khan,
Alemsarik told Kuyale's demand.
Semtay and Bakay nodded:
"The words from Kuyale is sincere,
The decision she made is proper,
Her steed should be carefully cured."
Kuyale left the campsite with the steed.

Krichorao became furious,
He shouted the slogan Manas.
An iron belt was fastened around his waist,
Armed with a sharp lance,
He urged the steed to start a charge.

He thrust at the giant's waist for ten times,
And turned the horse's head to stick his back,
Turning around for ten times,
He launched another ten attacks.
For that the foe's throat was out of reach,
He could only stab the giant fifty times in the chest,
And another sixty times after turning around.

The damned red-faced giant,
Bled with skin cut open and flesh torn all of a sudden,
But these mere cuts and bruises,
Were nothing to him,
As a hill he stood still.

The soldiers watching aside had no idea of Krichorao's highly skills,
The man had the light of roaring flame in his eyes.
Krichorao had left his life behind,
With his rage knew no bounds,
He urged the steed again to rush forward.

The Lion Krichorao thought in his mind:
"It is hard to defeat the wild boar in a short while,
Piercing his arms and thighs is a must,
And his ligaments have to be cut,
In this way he will not able to stand up."

Krichorao took out his sword out of the scabbard,
With which waved in his hand he shouted and rushed forward.
The shouts would even split the stones,
While Kezriarip was unruffled as if hearing no sound.
No sword would touch the giants body,
His large palm stretched toward Krichorao's neck.
Krichorao promptly avoided the attack,
Frustrating the intention of the giant.

Kezriarip lost his balance,

His fist punched into the ground with his body swayed back and forth.
As he slowly drew his fist out,
A huge column of water shot upward from the ground.

Seeing the power of the giant,
The soldiers wet their pants.
While the soldiers of Kezriarip,
Yelled with extreme excitement.

The warriors shouted and the sand blotted out the sky and the land,
Krichorao and his steed was out of sight.
Semtay and Bakay were both worried,
Staring at the darkness for a long time.
The dust gradually fell at last,
And the Lion Krichorao and his steed appeared safe and sound.

Once more Krichorao shouted with the sword waved in his hand,
Kezriarip widely opened his eyes to watch with care,
Waited for the right time and stretched out his arms,
He held both Krichorao and his steed tight,
The death was coming to Krichorao's side.

As the saying goes:
"Eyes are the lights of a man."
Krichorao in the hand of the giant along with his steed,
Lost the light once sparkling in his eyes,
Semtay was burning with anxiety in seeing the plight.

The son of Manas, Semtay,
A fearless lion,
Shouted the name of his father Manas,
And urged the Burule steed on with the whip for rescue.
The soldiers of Kezriarip,
Hearing the earsplitting shout of Semtay,
Shuddered with fear and anxiety.

Waving the Sire Spear left by his father,

Semtay wounded the giant's arm,
The giant loosed arms with unbearable pain,
The Gray Hare touched the ground as sound as its man.

The arm of mountain-like Kezriarip was hurt,
Semtay as the son of Manas was extremely fierce,
He tightened the bridle and stab the foe's kidney several times,
Kezriarip bled and fell to the ground.

The unfortunate Kezriarip was enraged,
His whiskers quivered and nares bulged,
Planning to grasp Semtay and his steed.
He stepped forward with overweening arrogance,
The giant's head was like a stone,
With the lofty stature as a moving hillock.

Semtay kept a level head,
His Sire Spear did no miss the target in every attack.
He said to himself:
"It seems that the spear can not hurt his muscles and bones,
I shall use the axe left by my father,
To chop off the beast's head."

He took out the door-sized crescent axe from waist,
The battle axe which took the lame craft man Bolic,
One year to cast.
The helve was made of taylonrii,
And covered by elephant hide.
Semtay pursed his lips and wave the axe.
Raised his swords to hack Kezriarip.

At this moment,
Akem, Shakem arrived with soldiers to pitch camps,
Boronbay on the gray-specked horse came with forces,
The son of Sumargan, Su, also rushed over in time.

Sumargan shouted:

"The five giants from the west are all here,
You had better carefully listen to my words:
I will tell you the sayings of Haribek,
He said:
That all of you shall not launch a fight against the Kirgiz,
Before he reach to this place.
I have told you all his words,
You shall bear the liability,
If you ignore his warning and create disturbance."

Seeing Kezriarip bleeding and wounded,
Sumargan thought to himself:
"If Kezriarip die in the fight,
The Kirgiz will wipe us out.
What would happen,
If there is only Haribek at that time?"

To stop Kezriarip fighting Sumargan shouted,
Kezriarip was busy in turning himself around,
With his bones hurt and cracking.
He bent down to see the ground,
The loess turned into mud mixed with blood.
He trembled all over,
The lofty stature could not stand firm.
Semtay held the crescent axe,
Hacking toward his body with no stop.

Kezriarip set back into his concentration as hearing the shout,
Knowing that Sumargan was right with his words.
He started to make his requests:
"Ay,
Semtay,
I have been here fore more than ten days,
Fighting against five of you by myself alone,
I did not rest nor did I eat.
I can see that you are a real man,
How about giving me five days to feed myself.

"It seems that,
We will fight to the last gasp,
Neither of us would give up before on side loose,
Let us continue the battle after five days,
And I shall then peel off your skin and dry it on a rock!"

The son of Manas, Semtay,
Did not take any account of the giant Keziriarip,
Thinking the giant as inferior to his trouser ends:
"You stupid bastard,
Just go if you wish,
Come back here in five days,
Give your dying words to your children and troops,
And your wives and kinfolks."
After making the deal,
The two turned around and walked the opposite ways.

Kezriarip left the battlefield,
With his legs keeping bleeding,
He was distressed with fatigue,
As if his dooms day arrived.

Seeing the giant come back from the battlefield,
The soldiers came forth with a rush.
Standing in a row at his both sides,
That was how their tradition was.
Weakly Kezriarip shouted:
"Prepare me the food at once,
Let me fill my belly first.
Pour me sixty bowls of nice wine,
Kill forty livestock,
And also I shall eat bears, leopards and dogs.

"No matter how many livestock,
Or wild lives have you got,
Kill extra twenty wild boars,

For me prepare two hundred animals in total.
Oh, I shall eat one hundred naans first,
Bring me the naans before other dishes."

All the food was well prepared,
The one hundred naans were eaten up in a flash,
Cooked meat were being brought to the table,
And Sumargan walked into the camp.
Kezriarip finished the meat himself,
As if having not seen Sumargan,
And then drunk those sixty bowls of wine to the last drop.
He relaxed himself and prepared to have a nice sleep.

Sumargan walked to the giant's side:
"You would never have thought about the truce,
If I did not arrive in time.
While you were talking to Semtay,
You seemed weak as if almost falling to the ground,
You will die soon if you keep wayward,
It is me who has saved you,
And changed your destiny.

"You should not lie like this,
And have to think about the next step,
If you can not get up in five days,
Haribek will arrive at that time.

"The man on the gray-specked horse,
His power is known to the world,
Once you fight against him,
You will get luck if you are able to survive.

"It is because I take you as my family,
That I tell you in honest.
If you can recover in five days,
And stab Semtay from his steed to the ground,
You will be able to save yourself,

Otherwise you will die in the hand of Haribek.

"You are injured and scarred,
Your muscles and veins are damaged,
You will get swelling if you come to a rest,
Fluid accumulated in your stomach,
The disease will be beyond cure.
I have found six men,
For cure eat their gallbladder,
Bear, wolf, fox, eagle and vulture,
Apply their bile and rest to recover.
When you wake up,
You will be in fine feather.

"Giant Kezriarip,
My advice you should follow,
Think of the way to dominate,
Rash men are not for battle.
Use stone to attack,
Prepared two girdles,
Fulfilled with stone sixty patemans[①].
If throw at Kirgiz,
You should throw straight,
Should not be too high,
their knees should be aimed at.
Steeds will tumble under attack,
Riders will fall and die.

"Krichorao and Semtay may impact you,
Before they get close,
You should throw stones reckless,
Aim at their heads,
Lead them to death.

"Wipe out Krichorao and Semtay,

1 Pateman: Unit of weight in ancient times, about 180 to 300 kilograms.

Remain Alemsarik and Bakay,
To where their soldiers flee?
Can not stand your attack,
They have to retreat.
You should attack again,
Kill as much as you can,
Otherwise, they will keep their mind.

"If you dash into the enemies,
We will be your backup force.
Giants Akem and Shakem,
They will give you assistance.

"Khan Aytumsh and Qingersh,
They will not be onlooker.
Surmargan has recovered,
He will flank the enemy as well.
Boronbay who rides a gray spotty horse,
He will join in for trophies.

"Once Haribek arrives here,
I will be not allowed to engage in battle,
Nor will I be allowed to share trophies.
Haribek is wicked and merciless,
Before him if we take trophies away,
Our lives will be taken by him.
My family will be enslaved,
I can not get away.

"We must hurry up,
Before Haribek arrives,
Attack Kirgiz right along.

"Kezriarip!
I have the medicine I just mentioned,
And have preserved it for years,
Send someone to bring it if you need,

It is the panacea as a gift."

After Sumargan's words,
Kezriarip answered at once:
"Dear Sumargan,
You are my intimate friend,
I am always following your plan.

"It is beyond tolerance,
Really acute the pain is,
I did not know the wound would swell,
Please bring me this medicine."
They called an herbalist,
To treat Kezriarip.

Kezriarip instructed:
"I have taken the medicine,
Let me lie down and rest,
Apply remaining medicine on my wound.
A big girdle should be prepared,
Which is made from cattle hide.
Pile six patemans stone before the gate,
The big one like a horse's head,
The small one like a fist,
Before I wake up,
Get things ready."
After Kezriarip finished,
He lay down and fell in sleep.

Tricky Sumargan said to himself:
"Let Kezriarip lie down and sleep,
Waiting for Haribek to deal with him.
If Kezriarip can survive,
We can share the trophies.
However, in front of Kirgiz,
He is certain to be killed at first.
The death of Akem and Shakem is hardly to avoid.

Boronbay who rides a gray spotty horse,
His condition is difficult to predict.
If he survives by chance,
His life will be inglorious."

Sumargan was pleased with himself,
Just like his dream had come true:
"Then there will be only I staying with Haribek,
No one else can compete with me,
As my wife Qinekay accompany me day and night,
My life will be cheerful and dignified.
If Haribek is reluctant,
I can escape with her to Jurendo,
Anyhow my wish will be achieved."

Sumargan pondered deeply,
Planned to control Kezriarip firstly.
And was proud of his idea enormously.

Four Heroes Went into a Mysterious Valley by Mistake

Kezriarip spent one day to eat,
Four days to sleep like a dead pig.
On the fifth day,
After waking up,
The boar set out to battle at once.

Leather girdles were filled with stones,
Onto his shoulder he hoisted the girdles.
According to the appointed time,
He went towards battlefield with stones in his hands.

On the horse Burule,
Hero Semtay looked imposing as always.
Soldiers of Kirgiz saw him,
Thinking he must defeat the giant Kezriarip.

The boar Kezriarip,
He staggered on the road instead of riding on the horse.
With hill-like body,
He wore coat armor studded with Beluer[①].
Spear could not pierce it,
Battleax could not cleave it,
Arrow could not impale it.

He faced Semtay aggressively,
With no time to say a word,
Picked up stones to hit hard,

① Beluer: A Kirgiz term, a name of precious jewel.

The thrown stones roared.
A stone as large as a sheep head,
Hit the ear of horse Burule from behind,
The head of horse was severely injured,
Fell down and rolled on the ground.

Son of Almanbet, Krichorao,
Arrived hurriedly,
Just when he reached out for the reins,
His arm was wounded by flying stones.

Wild-eyed Kezriarip had gone mad,
Like an unhairing male camel[1].
He rushed into the troops,
Stoned hard the troops.
Soldiers had to flee to forests.
Alemsarik and Bakay,
Tried to avoid being seen by him,
Semtay and Krichorao,
Weren't in his sight luckily.

As the horse Burule fell down,
It was seen by Sumargan.
He was satisfied with his success:
"Semtay loses his steed,
I will take the chance to chop off his head."
He whipped horse to rush there.

Regardless of pains,
Krichorao did not stint his life at all,
Riding forward to stop him.
Alemsarik also rode forward.
Seeing two lions in the front way,
Sly Sumargan turned around to escape.

1 Unhairing male camel: Camels unhair and rut in spring. Rutting camels always attack humans madly, and bite humans and livestock even to death.

Alemsarik whipped the horse,
To fight against soldiers of Akem and Shakem.
Krichorao hurried to stop him,
Letting him turn his horse's head to return.

Wounded horse Burule could hardly stand,
Might fall to the ground at any time.
Old Bakay and Semtay,
Stayed by the horse and dare not go far away.

Knowledgeable and experienced Krichorao,
Took out a liquid medicine named "Kunu",
Dripped it onto wounds of the horse,
Stopped the pain at once.

Krichorao gave up his steed to Semtay,
Rode another steed with Alemsarik.
They led the horse Burule,
Rushing towards mountains.

Kirgiz had a fierce battle against giant Kezriarip,
Unexpectedly tough situation occurred.
Arm of hero Krichorao was broken,
Head of horse Burule was wounded,
Leg of steed Gray Hare was stoned,
It only could slowly limp.

Unfortunate omen befell the heroes,
The four famous heroes,
Had to withdraw from battlefield to mountains.

Oh,
Kirgiz people,
Listen,
The mysterious mountain,
Majestic peak reached to the sky,
Mountainside was surrounded with dark clouds.

A deep canyon was in the front,
No one could see anything in it.

Heroes climbed up along the valley,
Kezriarip ran after them,
But could not go through the narrowest place of the valley,
His arms were stuck in a narrow place.

Sumargan caught up at that time,
He grasped the mad Kezriarip,
Not allowing him to chase Kirgiz people:
"I have already known the place,
It is a road leading to death.
Anyone who enters the valley,
Never comes out alive.

"There is a lake named Shaytan,
And seven high plains in the valley.
Grass and trees grow very slowly,
In the snowy valley.

"Do not worry and just stay here,
Stray Kirgiz will come out sooner or later.
If they hide in the valley for a long time,
They will freeze to death."

Before Sumargan finished,
The letter from Haribek had arrived,
They were unable to escape in a dilemma.
The letter said:
"Son of Su, Sumargan,
And your brother Surmargan.
We know everything about you and your brother.
Akem and shakem are not very good either.
As for red-faced giant Kezriarip,
He seems to be as bold as a tiger,
If he fights against me,

He will be like a scarecrow.

"Boronbay on gray spotty horse,
If he loses his copper whip,
He will be just a shepherd,
Only herding sheep.
These are your situations,
Which one dares to come out and fight me.

"Aytumsh and Khan Qingersh,
Whether they are true khans,
You need to think over by yourselves.

"Why complain to me,
Why ask me for help?
And why alert Kirgiz and let them escape,
Without waiting for me?
I have told you the place names one by one,
If I can't see Kirgiz people,
I will kill you all.
Flattening your castles,
Your ends will be disastrous.

"Now you are all outside,
Never apportion tax or donation to subjects,
Never extort even a coin from civilians.
If I hear such things,
You will suffer severe punishments!

"You need to stay there for twenty days,
Hunting by yourselves to fill your bellies.
Find Semtay in twenty days,
If you do not find Kirgizs,
I will hang you!"

Haribek was not joking,
He was a tough bastard khan.

Four giants accused Sumargan together:
"It was you that let us arrive hurriedly,
To help you fight against Kirgiz,
Making Haribek angry."

They could do nothing,
But had to stay there for twenty days,
Trying their best to find Semtay.

Let them search,
Let us go on singing the situations of Semtay and warriors.

Four warriors moved up along the valley,
They walked a full day's journey.
In the front were snowy peaks,
On both sides were cliffs and mountain creeks.

In ravines between seven high plains,
Lake was surrounded with green grass,
Sky was covered with towering trees.
There was no path around mountains,
Not only humans,
But also wild animals hardly went through them.
Shaytan Lake was the name of this place.

The mountain was called Saberem,
Sorceresses and elves lived in the mountain.
Wolves that were fattened up enough in summer,
Would still die on the mountain in winter.
Swift goats,
Dared not to climb,
The snowy peak.
Vultures that wanted to fly over the place,
Were afraid their wings would be frozen.

In summer it would become heaven of animals,
Argali and antelope strolled by the lake in flocks,

Larks sung loud on branches,
Snow cocks crowed in cypresses,
On the lake wandered swans.
In the lake swam fishes,
In the water glittered otters,
In the sky flew birds.

Once leaves turned yellow,
There would be the winter's arrival,
Birds did not tweet anymore,
The cold would freeze all,
You could not find any signs of life.
Ancients had always known it,
So they called it Shaytan Lake,
No man dared to graze around.

This lake was changeable,
The climate there was terrible,
It was hard to live there.
The number of people dead there was uncountable,
It got a notorious name called Evil Lake.

Four heroes did not know the danger,
They walked into the lakefront of Shaytan.
It was at deep winter,
By snow the ground was covered.

Snow and ice glistened dazzlingly white,
They could not find a slice of black earth to step on.
The Old Bakay,
The Lion Semtay,
Alemsarik and Krichorao,
Such sinister place as four heroes arrived.

Kirgiz people!
"River is the mother,
And mountain the father."

You must know the meaning of the words.
Kirgiz was the offspring of Arat Mountain,
We are the offspring by the mountain and river,
Multiplying in ice and snow,
We cut the umbilical cord with ice,
And take shower in glacier.
We are the offspring racing on floeberg,
Expanding on jokul and grassland.

For those heroes who rolling around ice and snow,
How could the coldness of Evil Lake affect them a little?
They felt at home as wherever they were.

Let us put this to one side,
And have a look at our hero Kenainym.

The Young Kenainym Rescued Four Heroes

Sayikali Awakened the Soul of Kenainym

Kartkarlan and Jagurp were half-brothers,
Daughter of Kartkarlan was named Sayikali.
Sayikali was ever unsatisfied with Manas,
She hid in the crowd of Kangayi in a long term.

She fought against Manas for many times,
She wielded spear to compete with Manas.
They fought fiercely face to face.
But they had deep affection to each other.
When Manas passed away,
Sayikali went to mourn and cry earnestly.
She was an outstanding woman hero,
She could accurately predict future events.

Daughter of Sumargan, Bytoru,
Was a friend of Sayikali,
She could fly in the sky.
Bytoru flew to Sayikali,
Talking to her:
"Son of Ayikoler, Semtay,
Old man with white hair and beards, Bakay.
Son of Almanbet, Krichorao,
Young warrior Alemsarik,
The four warriors are in trouble now.

"They are stuck in the lakeside of Shaytan,
That is the confluence of seven rivers,
There is the foot of Saberem Mountain,
Now it is the winter of ice and snow there,

Resourceful and brave warriors,
They suffer hardship in shortage of food and clothes.
Red-faced giant Kezriarip blocks the mountain pass,
They want to return but have no way out.

"Salamart is badly injured,
Escorted by someone on the way back.
Kuyale leads the wounded horse,
Going through Janjubiz Gobi,
She is recuperating in Salt Lakeside Gobi."

After hearing the words of Bytoru,
Sayikali felt more worried,
She was too old to rescue them.
She knew from the divination book,
Among the descendants of Manas,
There was a Yellow-faced Death,
But she did not know who he was on earth.

Seytek had two sons,
Both were Yellow-faced giants.
Gulinar gave birth to Alemsarik,
He was stuck in ice mountain now,
Certainly not the Yellow-faced Death.
Kuyale bore Kenainym Sarik,
Sayikali only knew the event but never saw him.

In order to see Kenainym,
Sayikali disguised herself as a lonely old woman,
With an orphan.
Setting up a small yurt near the palace wall,
As a neighbor of Khan Seytek.

Seytek lived in the palace Manas left,
His son Kenainym only knew eating,
Unable to walk until he was six,
Spending three years to learn how to walk.

Kenainym just turned nine this year,
Always shouting he was hungry.
Cooks cooked for him from morning till night,
He shouted at the wall:
"Bring me my dinner!"

Cooks were upset with him,
When there was no people,
Burnt "Komuchy"[1],
And leftovers that others could not eat,
Were sent to him.
Without a word spoken,
Kenainym just turned around and gobbled.

The words of cooks were chilling,
"Do not just eat with lying,
Go up mountain to cut firewood."
"Ok,
I will go and cut firewood,
But I need to eat enough food."

Unware of the cooks' embarrassing words,
Kenainym neither got angry nor spoke a word,
He took a rope consisting of seven strings,
Going into mountain alone to cut firewood.

Sayikali looked carefully,
"He is the Yellow-faced Death,
Exactly same as descriptions in the divination book,
I need to continue watching,
Then greet him and have a chat after two days."

Sayikali thought to herself,
In the place that Kenainym would pass through,

1 Komuchy: A Kirgiz term, one kind of pastry. It is a roasted paste that is buried in the ashes of firewood.

Putting up a loom by the road.
The looms of Kirgiz people,
Always made trouble.

Young Kenainym was unable,
To distinguish between good and bad,
To understand what is losing,
Or what is profiting,
To know the kindness and evilness of people.

Kenainym just knew how to cut firewood in mountains,
He could uproot trees.
He had endless strength,
The firewood he cut was piled up large as a hill.

Kenainym walked by Sayikali,
He strode over the loom without damaging it,
Sayikali could not find a chance to have a talk.

Kenainym threw firewood on his back to the ground,
The firewood almost bashed the cooks' yurt down.
Tremendous sound was made,
Frightening cooks to rush out of the yurt.

They were surprised and flustered,
"He can carry so much firewood back,
He must be a giant after growing up.
We need to cook more meals for him,
Letting him go up mountains to cut firewood every day."

Kenainym went to cut firewood again on the next day,
Sayikali set up a higher loom,
Kenainym still did not knock it over.
He took ten ropes on the third day,
And carried more firewood back,
He went back fast on the road.

Sayikali called a child and said:
"Look, he carries much firewood today,
He will still pass here.
He must break the wool on the loom,
You need to catch up with him hurriedly,
Letting him stop and compensate."

Sayikali watched aside,
Wool on the loom was really broken by firewood.
The boy immediately ran forward,
Grasped the collar of Kenainym and shouted.
For compensation he cried,
But Kenainym did not say a word,
Just stretched out his left hand and threw off the child,
Unexpectedly the child fell to the ground and died.

Sayikali was not worried:
"The child is not a human,
But an elf,
He has escaped from here.
Now I have the chance to talk,
I will wake up the sleeping soul of Kenainym."

Sayikali went over slowly,
Saying some severe words:
"You are an idiot forgetting your ancestors,
You are a guy not knowing good from bad.

"You can't even decide what to eat,
Still going to cut firewood for cooks.
Are you a person begging for food?
Why are you so wimpy!

"You just killed my child,
It makes me very sad.
If you are really a hero giant,
Why not go to rescue your relatives?

"Your grandfather Semtay,
White-haired Old Bakay,
Your elder brother Alemsarik,
And your relative Krichorao,
They four are all stuck in ice mountain.

"Your mother Kuyale,
In order to cure wounds of horse,
She lives alone by a lake in the gobi,
Are you unwilling to rescue them!"

Kenainym heard these,
Placed the firewood slowly from shoulder to the ground.
Spark flickered in his eyes,
He looked around at the earth and landscape of Kankole,
The face turned energetic at once.
Sayikali saw all in the eyes.

There were twelve ropes nearby for tying colts,
Length of ropes reached the distance of a horse race.
Colts aged one to five were tied there,
Besides well-fed horses in flocks.
Kenainym went towards the horses,
He led a one-year-old colt,
To the area in front of Sayikali's house.
He asked no one for help,
Butchering the colt by himself.
Cooks kept their mouth shut,
And brought a cauldron to cook colt meat.

Kenainym put the horsemeat into a tub,
Offering it to Sayikali with both hands:
"Old grandmother,
I give the meat to you first.
The child,
Whether he is your grandson,

Or your slave,
Whether he is your nephew,
Or your neighbor.
I just touched his body lightly,
With no intention to hurt him.
He has died and can't resurrect.
Do not let sadness harm your body.

"Old grandmother,
I have some questions to ask,
Old Bakay and the Khan Semtay,
Hero Krichorao and Alemsarik,
And my mother Kuyale.
They met what kind of troubles,
Where are they trapped now?
Please tell me more details.

"Old grandmother,
I also want to know,
I broke the wool on your loom,
You took the opportunity to call me.
Have you already planned it all?
In order to awake my sleeping soul."

Hearing these words,
Much delighted Sayikali was.
Although she was old,
Her voice sounded like Kumuz:

"My child!
What you want to know I will tell you,
Do not know what your plan about rescue?
If you do nothing,
By enemies they will be killed.

"Your father Seytek,
The doughty warrior who is unrivaled.

No horse can bear him,
He has to walk in the vicinity."

"I have heard that at the direction of sunset,
People are suffering from evil deed.
These men who fled from the west,
Told me there are things about man-eating.
Your grandfather Semtay was indignant,
He led thousands of soldiers to conquer the west.
Old Bakay and Krichorao,
Alemsarik and Salamart,
Including your mother, they all accompanied."

"The place is called Aytubi,
The khan there is Aytumsh.
Our warriors win a series of victories,
Gave them a crushing defeat.

"At the west there were seven giants,
They got together to combat with warriors.
Red-faced giant Kezriarip,
Tall as a mountain he was,
He hurt Salamart badly,
Made him back home to convalesce.

"Steed Gilgitbiz broke its leg,
Your mother treated it at lakeside.
Steed Burule was hit by a stone,
Steed Gray Hare's leg was also badly hurt.

"Your four relatives encountered strong enemies,
They went wrong into mystic valley in difficulties,
And were trapped in the lakeside of Shaytan at the foot of Saberem iceberg.
Although they had not be threatened by enemies,
Their situation was dangerous.
Only you can rescue them,

You have to keep riding for ninety days."

Hearing the words of Sayikali,
Kenainym was burning with anxiety.
Walked to the horses of Seytek hastily,
He tried to ride in sequence,
But found no horse appropriate.
"Could it be said that like my father,
Having no horse to ride,
I can only stay at home?"
Kenainym was terribly worried.

After noontime,
From the forest of Karabra,
Came a group of Sart[1],
Driving lots of horses.
Those horses Kenainym carefully observed,
There were totally thirty-seven.

Had them disburdened these horses,
Kenainym tried to ride in turns.
Thirty-six horses,
No one could afford his weight.

The thirty-seventh horse,
Was a four-year-old tan colt.
At the moment Kenainym tried to mount,
Like talking the colt made a sound:
"Are you Kenainym?
I am seeking you all around,
It's lucky to meet you today.
But I am unable to be ridden,
Until I get recovered.

"On my back there are six abrasions,

1 Sart: Kirgiz language, the name of a Kirgiz tribe, it means merchant.

Bearing the saddle is grievous,
I can not run for the festers on my shoulder and waist.
If you have to ride me today,
I am too bitter to bear you
It also fouls my fame.

"My name is Kankura,
Please lead me to the manger of Arckura[1].
Treat me,
Feed me.
After half a month,
I will get well and gather strength,
I can bear you to anywhere you want."

Kenainym led Kankura,
To the manger of Arckura,
And tied it to the shelf near the manger.

Stayed by and looked after Kankura,
Kenainym kept close to it for half a month,
Watered it himself.
Fed it highland barley once and rice twice a day.
Fifteen days passed quickly,
The fur of Kankura showed good gloss like otter.
Its body was strong and healthy,
No one can hold his praise by a glance.
Experienced herdsman said:
"Faster than hawk such a kind of horse is."

Kenainym got a beloved horse,
But had no proper saddles.
He rummaged the warehouse,
Did not find the one he wanted,
So he put a blanket on the horseback.

1 Arckura: The steed of Manas.

Kenainym was dressed in worn pelisse,
The top of his blue boots pointed upwards.
He mounted the steed Kankura,
Urged it on to the west.
Sayikali watched him in the distance,
She did not saw Kenainym,
But God Koshaoyi.
She knew he was a powerful warrior
He could defeat ferocious enemies,
He could triumph and save heroes.

Kenainym rode westward,
There was a clear spring by the road.
Horse Kankura started to talk:
"Hey,
My hero Kenainym,
You have enough strength but limited wisdom,
Are you really unware that,
Here is the holy spring,
Where your great-grandfather ever bathed?

"Tie me on the roadside,
Bath yourself in the holy spring.
The road ahead is still very long,
You should wash dust and then rush forward."

Kankura added:
"Trail your hand in the spring first,
To feel it is cold or hot."
Kenainym bowed on the horseback,
To trail his hand in the spring water,
Feeling it was very warm.

Knowing the spring was hot,
Kankura felt at ease.
It told to Kenainym delightedly:
"Your ancestor, the Lion Manas,

Would always come to the holy spring,
Before each expedition.

"He trailed his hand in the spring,
To feel the spring was cold or warm:
Riding forward if the water was hot,
Turning around if the water was cold.
Now the spring is warm,
We can go with no worry after bathing."

Kankura carried Kenainym,
Climbing over mountains,
Along the road were fragrant flowers and pleasant sceneries,
Fresh breeze touched their faces.

They climbed over a daban[1],
The sun was setting and the night was coming.
Horse Kankura said:
"As long as you do not feel tired on my back,
I can keep running forward.
You need to grasp my manes,
Close your eyes and sit tight,
I can fly in the air.
When my hooves hit the ground simultaneously,
The place you want to reach will be in your sight,
Then you will know my abilities."

Kenainym followed its words,
Closing his eyes,
Grasping its manes.
The wind whistled in the ears,
Manes and tail of Kankura waved in the wind.
It jumped over mountains,
It went across rivers,
It ran through forests.

1 Daban: A Kirgiz term, the roads on high mountains.

It was like a flying arrow,
Birds also hardly followed it.
As if a large bird flew in the sky.
Taking three days to finish the three months' journey.

The horse Kankura able to speak,
Could fly fast in the air,
It was a gift from God to Kenainym.
With horse Kankura,
Kenainym seemed to have wings,
Contented without regrets.

Hooves of Kankura hit the ground simultaneously,
Kenainym opened his eyes,
Behind him was snowy Saberem Mountain,
Before him was a world of ice and snow,
Here was the lakeside of Shaytan.

Khan Semtay was trapped for a long time,
Overlooking around on the peak.
He used clairvoyant to overlook,
Seeing a figure coming from the direction of sunrise.
He hurried to adjust the clairvoyant,
Watching carefully with all his eyes.

He saw clearly,
The comer was Kenainym Sarik.
Semtay turned to Bakay and said:
"Uncle,
I use the clairvoyant to overlook,
Seeing someone is coming from east.
I stare carefully,
The person seems to be my grandson Kenainym.

"I am a little worried,
We have been stuck in the mountains,
For four months.

Seytek can't come to rescue us,
Kenainym is still a minor under ten,
He can't fight against enemies.
If he also falls into the enemies' hands,
Will the descendants of black mane wolf Manas,
Have no offspring?"

Old Bakay still looked fresh,
He said to Semtay:
"Semtay,
My child,
I will tell you something.
Your father was my bosom friend during his lifetime,
He ever told me:
Among our offspring,
There would be a Jalangchy[1] Sarik.

"The child will be different,
He is brave but unreasonable,
However, he is a strongman governing the world.
If Kenainym comes here,
He can not only defeat fierce enemy,
But also marry the girl Qinekay.

"Alemsarik,
You are his elder brother,
Hurry to pick him up.
Take Sire Spear Manas left,
To his hands.
Bring him to us.
If he refuses,
Do not be angry."

Alemsarik went hurriedly on horse,
Kenainym saw his brother,

1 Jalangchy: Kirgiz term, it means the Death.

No greeting or speaking.
Alemsarik said:
"Kenainym,
My younger brother,
You come alone from hometown,
Our mother Gulinar,
Our father Seytek,
How are they,
Does everything go well?

"You should see two grandfathers, Semtay and Kristan,
Besides the Old Bakay,
To greet and salute them,
To tell them carefully about the things of hometown."

Kenainym squinted at Alemsarik,
Seeming to regard him as an enemy.
"You are stuck in the mountains,
I come to rescue you,
Isn't this my salutation?"

As Kenainym turned to go,
Alemsarik hurried to say:
"Oh, my dear brother,
Please listen to me carefully,
How can you fight against enemies with no arms?

"This is the spear our ancestor Manas left,
Grandfather asks me to give it to you.
Do not worry,
You need to wear the armor,
And saddle the horse."

Kenainym continued to say:
"I do not need your saddle,
If Sire Spear is really so magical,
Why are you stuck in the mountains?

Do not get a lung clod,
Follow me quickly."

Kenainym rode the horse without saddle,
Wore a worn felt hat,
A tattered goatskin coat,
And a curled blue leather boots.
Instead of going to see Semtay,
He went into battlefield in no hurry.

Alemsarik felt wronged,
He told the words of Kenainym carefully,
To the three elders.

Old Bakay said:
"By the soul of Manas,
His prophecies are all fulfilled now.
We can't still stay here to hide,
We need accelerate to rush towards battlefield."

Bakay rode gray horse,
Hero Krichorao,
Young Lion Alemsarik,
Followed him closely,
All the soldiers set out together.

Kenainym Killed the Giant Kezriarip

Kenainym was riding the steed Kankura,
Just like racing with gale,
At the front of the troops,
He left them far behind.
Steed Kankura never felt tired,
Showing in front of them,
Suddenly vanished from their sight.

Malevolent Haribek,
Gave orders to six giants:
"You would not come to take commands,
Nor show me the trace of enemies,
I have nothing to do for four months,
Feeling annoyed and restless.

"You hateful Kezriarip,
Keep up your spirit and think seriously.
If you can not catch the group of Semtay,
I will kill you unhesitatingly.
Choose one between these two,
Otherwise,
I will wipe out your troops.

"Sumargan and Surmargan,
I know all your details:
You are both the son of Su,
You overreached to bout with Kirgiz,
Your soldiers were left not much.

"You went to battle without a notice,
The result is your nemesis.
It serves you right,
I am itching to swallow you idiots.
The people in your six cities,
I will give to others,
Let them live scattered,
Can never return homeplace.

"Giants Akem and Shakem,
In the shining armor,
You think you were powerful,
Without my permission,
You made bold to join the battle.
If you dare to neglect my orders again,
I will drink your blood,
And cut your hair to adorn my spear.

"Boronbay who rides a gray spotty horse,
You made friends with a sorceress,
Got a copper wipe from her,
Then thought yourself stronger than others.
How dared you to neglect me,
I will suck up your blood,
Do you still dare to move around on the horseback,
To break the rules,
To act on your own.
I will gouge out your eyes,
Exile you to the gobi,
Let you die in wilderness.

"I will punish you at first,
Then give a crushing blow to Kirgiz.
Not only kill these heroes,
But also start an expedition to Central Asia and Talas,
They will die out in shame,
The world will know my mightiness.

"Kezriarip,
Answer me within a month.
If you die in the battle,
The others should come and take my orders.
If you fight with Kirgiz,
Thinking little of my commands,
Do not blame my mercilessness.

"Aytumsh Khan,
Qingersh Khan,
Here is a stern warning:
You must follow my dispatch,
Or your people will be banished.
Jurendo who can build castles on the gobi,
The one that elected Aytumsh the khan,
Could not avoid being killed by me.
Khan Qingersh you shall listen:
I will marry your daughter Qinekay as my concubine,
If you dare to defy,
I will torture you to death.
If I can not do what I said,
The God will get me punished."

Receiving the letter,
Six giants consulted together:
"Fighting with Kirgiz,
It is proper in all angles,
However, if we go against Haribek's wishes,
Within a half day we will be put into death.

"May we plan like this:
Haribek gave us thirty days to answer,
Right away the battlefield we should enter,
Kezriarip unwilling to attack this hill,
Let us five guys fight together.
Anyhow we can not avoid the death,
Rather than die in Haribek's hands,

We prefer dying in the combat against Kirgiz!"

Kezriarip said:
"I have taken food for two days,
I do not need to eat and drink within thirty days.
What you said is correct,
If we make Haribek furious,
No one can escape from the misfortunes.
I can deal with those fleeing Kirgiz people,
Trap them in snow and ice,
At that valley they will freeze to death."

Making himself replete,
Kezriarip was ready to go next day.

At this time,
Yellow-faced Death Kenainym,
Came to the mountain top.
Appeared in his sight,
Bug-like soldiers was creeping across him.
Suddenly his partner steed Kankura talked:
"Kenainym,
My master!
You are strong,
But countrified.
You are strong enough to move mountains,
But lake of schemes.

"There are no weapons in your hand,
No coat armor on your body,
No shield on you back,
No cuirass on you breast,
You have no helmet to protect your head,
No boots to wear on your foot,
Only I can carry you galloping in the valley.

"Please memorize my words,

So that you can defeat enemies safely:
There are dense forests and tall trees in the front valley,
Layers of green,
For a large area.
You need to choose a sycamore tree,
And uproot it.
Put it across the saddle,
Let enemies know your majesty.
Towards many soldiers in the front,
Launch an attack rapidly,
Rushing and hitting fiercely.

"Going ahead is Kezriarip,
He is your first revenge target.
To let people know your power,
Better to defeat him at one blow.
Where there are enemies gathering,
I must run there at full speed.
Because I am your loyal Kankura."
After finishing its words,
Kankura rushed forward like lightning.

Kenainym on the horseback,
Kept the words of Kankura in mind.
He saw a sycamore tree in the front,
Got close to it in a flash.
He grasped the treetop and pulled hard,
The enormous tree with branches large as a sheepfold,
Was uprooted.
He put the sycamore tree across saddle,
Kankura seemed to grow wings.

The soldiers in the front,
Were led by Kezriarip.
In order not to offend Haribek,
They went to besiege the four people including Semtay.
Thousands of his troops and horses turned out in full force,

So as to eliminate enemies as soon as possible.

Even wind could not catch up with running Kankura,
It came to the enemy position a moment later.
Kenainym held the sycamore tree,
Like wielding countless spears.
The scene was earthshaking,
Frightened enemy soldiers had no place to hide.

Someone was hit by branches and died,
Someone broke his waist and cried,
Someone's limbs became bloody pieces,
Someone lay on the ground as a tree cut down.
All over the mountains and plains,
Dead bodies were found all around,
War was such brutal and tragic.

Rushing Kenainym,
Encountered with Kezriarip.
Kezriarip saw the menacing Kenainym,
At a loss,
With staring eyes.

Watching Kenainym approaching,
He also uprooted a sycamore tree without difficulty,
Wielding the tree and shouting loudly,
Kenainym fought against him face to face.

The newborn tiger Kenainym,
Fearless,
Overwhelming.

In the air two sycamore trees were colliding,
Leaves were drifting,
Sand were blowing,
Stones on the ground were blown into air,
Making harsh sound.

Kenainym broke the opponent's branches,
And lifted his tree onto the shoulder.
As he was about to pound at the head of Kezriarip,
Kezriarip stretched to block the tree,
And grabbed the branches.
Two heroes pushed each other,
The trunks thick as human waist were broken off.

Heroes fought one round after another,
The scene was intense,
The earth was shaking,
The story was spread by thousands of people till this day.

The teenager Kenainym,
Had never gone into battlefield before.
He was only nine,
Launching the first expedition today,
Having a tough fight,
Against such a powerful enemy Kezriarip.

Kenainym wielded the left trunk,
Hitting towards Kezriarip again and again.
Suddenly he hit harder at Kezriarip's face,
The bloodstream thick as a whip handle,
Sprayed from the cheek to the ground.
The boar should be dead,
With no helmet on his head,
But stood upright as if nothing had happened,
Like a stone man.

Young Lion Kenainym,
Let Kankura gallop back and forth,
Ten hit forth,
Ten hit back;
Ten hit from front,
Ten hit from behind.

Back and forth,
Left and right,
Up and down,
Hacking quickly and fiercely,
The enemy opened his eyes hardly,
Nose was slit and mouth was swollen badly.

The damned beast Kezriarip,
could not bear the raining of hit.
Helpless,
Overwhelmed,
He dared not to support himself barely,
Had to run away in a hurry.

Seeing the situation,
The other six giants dared not to make a move,
Only letting Kenainym chase and attack.
He swept with the trunk each time catching up with Kezriarip,
Until Kezriarip bled all over the body.

He ran with hiding,
He felt hopeless for his life.
He scurried,
And staggered,
He was frightened out of his wits,
And in his discomfiture.
One escaped and the other chased,
They sent away nine sunsets totally.

They were locked in pursuit,
Suddenly a burrow appeared in the front.
Kezriarip stretched out head and rushed into it,
Regardless of its size and depth.
But before the back of his head entered,
The trunk had pierced his nape.
Although the devil's forehead drilled into the burrow,
His body was paralyzed like a dead boar.

Kenainym jumped off the horse,
Rode on the back of Kezriarip.
He pushed the body towards the hillside,
Threw the head into the valley.

Kenainym took a break,
Then turned around and rushed back by the same route.

It is said until now,
Once it drizzles there,
Eye sockets of the devil will be filled with water,
Passing animals and beasts,
May accidentally slip and drown.

Kenainym Defeated Five Giants in a Row

"There seems to be four figures in the front,
Flickering,
Blurring,
Do you know who they are?"

"That is Semtay of Kirgiz,
They come over on the horses without saddles.
It proves that they have recovered,
And picked up themselves."

Giant Akem heard the answer of Qingersh,
"I will capture all of them!" he said,
Then whipped his horse,
Heading forward.
Without a word,
Krichorao whipped horse on,
To stop him.

Giant Akem got into a rage,
Thinking who dared to stop me.
He did not ask the comer's name,
But urged horse and wielded spear to fight,
Horse rushed into battlefield,
Stones splashed in the air.

Krichorao was always a hero facing the difficulties,
Giant Akem wasn't a man bullying the weak and avoiding the strong.
They wielded edge tools to attack each other,
The fight,

Was extremely fierce.

Krichorao hacked at enemy's head with a battleax,
Giant Akem tilted his head to dodge it,
Then turned around and stabbed Krichorao.
One side is aggressive,
With grim face;
The other is hideous,
In violent rage;
Sometimes they wrestled,
Sometimes weapons crushed;
The sounds of shout and neigh were deafening,
The scenes of fight were fearsome and shocking.
They fought from morning to night,
Then from sundown to dawn...

Seeing the sunrise in the east,
Giant Akem spat in mad,
He made a long roar,
Shouted the name of himself,
Once again he mounted the steed to charge Krichorao.
Wanted to stab the Krichorao's kidney,
He dashed with his spear.

At the sight of the Akem's vigor,
Krichorao felt a little nervous,
Nonetheless he turned the horse's head,
And met the attack with his battleax.

At this time,
A dust was raised in the west,
A youth on the horseback appeared like from the clouds,
He urged the steed and shouted,
The electrifying voice shook people's mind:

"Damn beast,
I am Kenainym,

You on the gray horse,
Get away from here,
If not,
The adversity you will suffer!"
Hearing Kenainym's roar,
Giant Akem turned his steed to encounter,
Krichorao took the chance to come to Semtay.

Wield field,
Parched by fierce sun,
Before the soldiers of Akem,
Akem and Kenainym,
Started to grapple once more.

At first they seized each other's clothes,
Then exerted all their strength,
Making their steeds dash down the hill.
They held each other's wrists,
To pull the opponents down from horse.
Two steeds staggered along,
They can not advance but wiggle.

Suddenly Akem found an opportunity,
He used the strength of entire body,
Aiming at the heart of Kenainym,
He stabbed with his spear fiercely.
Sharp-sighted Kenainym was,
Lowered his head to dodge,
Lay prone on the saddle,
He ducked away from the attack.
Akem could not stop the horse,
He had been close to Kenainym.

Kenainym seized the moment to act,
Suddenly he grasped enemy's wrist,
Grabbed his spear without extra effort.
Kenainym turned the horse,

Adjusted the spear and imparted a blow,
Aiming at arrogant Akem,
Akem was hit and fell,
Died under his horse.

Kenainym jumped off the horse,
Took off Akem's coat armor,
Picked off his shield and saddle,
Collected spoils and armed himself.
He thought the hammer was cumbersome,
So left it around body of Akem.

In this way,
Kezriarip and Akem,
They were killed by Kenainym.
Two powerful giants,
Vanished from the earth.

Kenainym led Akem's steed back,
Scrutinized the saddle of the horse.
As he took if from its back,
This boar's saddle was delicate,
Every part of it was well-made,
And fully equipped.

The front of the saddle was forged by silver,
The copper plate on the rear gave out light;
Both sides of it inset with steel,
Iron stirrups were hanging at flank,
Which were polished to dazzling.
The whole saddle was sturdy and durable,
Spears could not pierce it,
Bullets could not shot through it.

He equiped bare Kankura piece by piece,
It was neither too big nor small,
It was neither too long nor short.

The saddle looked like made for Kankura,
There was an ineffable delight in Kenainym's heart.

The beast's armor was made of three layers iron sheets,
Kenainym took it off and dressed himself in,
Fastened twenty-seven buttons.
Then picked up the beast's coat armor which had thirty-six buttons,
Shook the dust and put it on his shoulder.
Crescent battleax was hanging on his girdle,
The treasured sword was in the scabbard.
Wolf's fang spear was holding in his hand,
The young hero was well equipped,
Looked majestic,
And invincible.

Giant Shakem did not Sober-up at that time,
Nor did he come to the battlefield.
Until a guard came to report,
Told him the death of Akem.
Shakem fell in flaming temper on hearing it,
Immediately he mounted the steed,
And started a bloody battle with Kenainym.

They were fighting both day and night,
Hammer and spear ceaselessly impacted,
This hit by spear was dodged,
That hit by hammer was blocked;
One's coat was pierced,
The other's armor was punctured.

Metal were colliding and tinkling,
Emitted sparks like starlight were twinkling;
The trampling of hooves shook the ground,
In rumble sand and stones were flying.
In the gobi heroes had fought for two days,
And still locked in the fight.

Suddenly,
Akem lifted the hammer huge as a small yurt,
Into the air,
Shouted the name of God,
Hit hard the head of Kenainym.

He did not know,
The nine-year-old teenager before him,
Was a mighty hero.
His lifted wrist was grasped by Kenainym,
He felt pain as if his wrist was clamped by a pincer.

Kenainym snatched the opponent's hammer,
Turned around quickly,
Hacked at the head of Akem suddenly.
The opponent and his horse,
Rolled down to the ground,
Lost their lives.

Kenainym was really a heroic juvenile,
He showed no mercy to enemies.
All the enemies meeting him,
Could never survive.

The soldiers who fled to Haribek,
Told the news about the first man's death.
Before Boronbay mounted his horse,
Surmargan rode towards battlefield first.

A new one came after someone dead,
reckless and endless.

Surmargan excelled in fighting skill,
He defeated many heroes.
Now he got exasperated,
Brows were knitting,
Anger was burning.

He fell into rage,
Whipping his horse,
His red coat armor was blown by strong wind.

"I hear the comer is a teenager,
He must be lacking in tactics.
I must take out inherent skills,
Before he is prepared,
Spear him,
And strike him down from the horse."

He thought to himself on horse,
With ferocity in his eyes,
Meanwhile he opened wide his mouth,
Showing the reality that he ate raw humans.

Kenainym stayed calm,
Watched the moment that the spearhead approached,
Grasped the spear shaft like lightning,
Turned and pulled,
Had no trouble grabbing his spear.

The descendant of Manas, Kenainym,
Had quick movements like lightning,
He thrust the opponent in an instant,
With the taken spear.

The damned enemy Surmargan,
His armor was as hard as a rock.
With a crunch,
The spear was broken.

Wily Surmargan,
Drew a sword from his belt,
After a cleave attack,
Sword edge had come to the eyes of Kenainym.
Kenainym took it easy,

Used his battleax to block the sword,
With a clang,
The sword was casted far away.

Surmargan refused to bend,
Took the hammer again to attack towards Kenainym.
"Huh,
Let me see how many weapons you still have."
Young Kenainym laughed at him.

Insulted Surmargan fell into rage,
He lost his prestige,
Embarrassedly.
He tried desperately to lift the hammer,
Launching another attack to Kenainym.

Facing the hammer,
Kenainym blocked it with battleax,
He chopped off the opponent's fingers,
The hammer of Surmargan fell to the ground.

Arrogant Surmargan,
Had foreseen he would lose his life.
He thought, "rather than die of the opponent's axe,
I should try to escape to survive."

Then he turned around to escape,
Kenainym whipped his horse to chase.
He put his weapons away,
Seized the enemy's armor.

He took the six-layered armor of Surmargan,
To hang it under his stirrups,
And tie it to the tail of Kankura,
Letting the horse run on the open field.

Kankura dragged Surmargan and his horse,

Running fast over stones and rocks.
Surmargan was dragged like this,
Till he bled in the head,
And expired.

Enemies saw the scene,
All were in despair,
In panic.
As if the doom had come,
At a loss,
At sea.

"My younger brother died like this,
We must revenge him."
The elder brother of Surmargan,
Felt as if a knife pierced his heart,
Banging his head and stamping his foot.
He held spear and rode black horse,
Knowing he had weak force and no methods.
He got distracted at this time,
Bit the bullet and ventured to rush ahead.

Herculean Kenainym,
Could hardly be stopped by any powerful enemy.
With great momentum,
Hero felt the comer hardly matched his trouser end.
Letting the comer approach,
He never moved half step in the strife.

Sumargan burning with rage,
Regardless of fear,
Wielded spear to thrust,
Young Kenainym still stood like a mountain.

He did not lift the battleax and hack,
Until Sumargan wielded the spear again,
With crackling sound,

He hit the target,
The spear of Sumargan was broken into pieces.

Could anyone withstand the battleax of Kenainym?
Sumargan had been already spooked,
He scrambled towards the river,
Broke into a cold sweat.
Black horse under him gasped for breath,
Its mane and tail were as scattered as weeds,
Drifting away in the cold wind.

With his face lost and his gaffes exposed,
Sumargan hardly stood the pursuit of Kenainym.
Kenainym grabbed his clothing,
Preparing to tie it to his saddle.
Boronbay rushed over exactly,
His gray spotty horse was as fast as smoke.

"Kenainym from Kirgiz,
I will let you suffer a crushing defeat,
I will let you be utterly destroyed.
I will collect blood debt from you,
I will send you to death!

"What skill do you have,
Kenainym,
Only a battle can tell who is stronger.
I will burn you to ash like fire,
I will make you pee all over your pants.
I will let you know my power,
I will let my men be protected.

"I can swear to you,
If I can't revenge the dead brothers,
Let me die in the wild.
I have inquired about your details,
You are the descendant of Brute."

Boronbay shouted madly,
Stopping Kenainym from chasing Sumargan,
Wielding a copper whip to block his way.

Kenainym thought,
What did your cooper whip matter?
He stood quietly and ignored him.

Before the cooper whip hit him,
Kankura dodged swiftly.
The whiplash hit a jutting black rock behind the horse,
The black rock turned into black water immediately,
Flowing to a lower place and seeping into the ground.
On the yellow soil and sand that it flew through,
White smoke rose at once.

Boronbay did not give up for the failure,
He thought:
"Today I shall never let you off,
I must flog you to death here."
Suddenly he whipped again,
Towards Kenainym.

Seeing the alarming scene,
Kenainym knew the power and secret of cooper whip:
"The cooper whip can melt rock like fire snake,
It can scorch the person it falls on.
I must watch every step and stay alert,
Never letting him hit my body."
He thrust in a sudden with the spear,
Hit the opponent's arm,
The cooper whip was lifted and thrown far away.
Spear shaft touched cooper whip a little bit,
Heavy smoke rose instantly as if it burned.

Boronbay drove his gray spotty horse hastily,

Picked up the lost copper wipe fleetingly.
He waved the whip about sixty times,
Every hit was dodged by the youth deftly.

At this time Krichorao came to be assistance,
At the sight of this situation he was anxious.

"Kenainym,
Listen to me now,
I brought Sire Spear,
The treasure left by Aykoler Manas,
It had unbeatable magic and power,
Copper wipe could not break it a little,
It was as flexible as cirrus,
It was as hard as steel.
Once it touch the copper wipe,
The wipe will be twined,
Finally it will in your hand.

"Catch this spear,
Seize back Boronbay's magical wipe by it,
And make him lose the ability to compete."

Krichorao explained the origin of the spear,
Meanwhile, passed it to the young hero.

Boronbay also heard it beside,
Actually he had already known the spear.
Seeing its flashing cold light today,
He lost his nerve immediately.

"Damn Khitan slave,
He gave the Sire Spear to Kenainym,
Am I to lose the magic copper wipe?
Am I to surrender myself?

"The sorceress was well-informed and had gone around the world,

She told me that the copper wipe must be away from Sire Spear,
It was the artifact left by Manas,
Copper wipe will lose magic before it!
The sorceress was my friend,
Her warning must be reasonable."

Boronbay thought again:
"Manas had gone to grave,
Sire Spear may have lost its magic.
Before this arrogant youth who had red lips and green eyes,
How can I grudge my life?"
Thinking about this he shouted:
"Kenainym,
I will suck your blood,
I will take your life!"

Once more Boronbay urged his gray spotty horse again,
While speaking Incantation,
Waving cooper wipe,
Like a tornado wind.

He waved the copper wipe to the left,
It sounded like the roll of drums;
He waved the copper wipe to the right,
It sounded like the crack of guns;
He waved the copper wipe to the forward,
It sounded like the howl of bears;
He waved the copper wipe to the backward,
It sounded like the cry of wolfs;
He was waving the copper wipe in the air continually,
Anomalies appeared in the world endlessly:

Sometimes agminate camels were running,
Sometimes several lions were rising;
Sometimes in the air demons were dancing,
Sometimes on the earth fires were burning;
Sometimes water was rolling in front of us,

Sometimes the thundering and lightning sounded like earthquakes…

Seeing the power of the copper wipe,
Soldiers of giants knew its boundless might,
Thought it was hopeful to beat the opponent.

Boronbay shouted his name,
Waved the copper wipe back and forth,
Attacked Kenainym from both sides.
Kenainym, the spring of Manas,
Composed and fearless.
He thought the opponents were inferior to trouser ends,
This devil he determined to defeat.
Sire Spear left by his grandfather,
Was being held and waved by him,
The phantoms just appeared——
Drums, cracks,
Wolfs, bears,
Lions, camels,
Fires, thunders…
All disappeared in a moment.

Boronbay waved the copper wipe at that time,
It touched the spear by chance,
No fire neither smoke there was,
The copper wipe lost its magic.

Kenainym pulled it back,
The copper wipe was out of Boronbay's hand,
Flying away behind Kenainym.

Seeing the falling of the wipe,
Like an arrow Krichorao rushed forward,
He caught the wipe by the spearhead,
Made it can not perform magic any more.

"Here it is,

Child,
Take it!"
Krichorao passed the copper wipe to the youth.

"Use it to defeat enemy?
Depend on weapons to fight enemies.
Only coward believe it!
Grandfather,
I do not need it,
You would better keep it."

For the youth's reject,
Krichorao urged one more time:

"Look at Boronbay on the gray-specked steed,
He is fleeing like a cloud,
Why not you use his copper wipe,
To chase him and beat back?

"Kenainym,
Dear young youth,
Why you do not accept my words?"

Kenainym did not bring the copper wipe,
He followed at Boronbay's heels.
Boronbay ran up the hill,
He can not run off the chasing;
Boronbay ran down the hill,
He can not run off the hunting.
Whether flat or hills,
Kenainym kept chasing,
He would not let the enemy away.
Through forests and across rivers,
Over cliffs and around valleys.
One fled and the other chased,
Boronbay hardly got rid of the young hero always.

Without a stop or rest,
Without a grain of rice,
Without a drink of water,
They ran for a full forty days,
Circling the earth more than four times,
gray spotty horse was too tired to move,
Strong Kenainym still kept chasing.

"Now there is only one left way,
That is drilling into the ground."
Desperate Boronbay had no time to think more,
And no other method.

He performed incantation to work magic,
The earth opened,
He jumped down on the horse.
Watching the slit be closing,
Stubborn Kenainym wanted to follow him.

When he was about to whip Kankura,
Kankura started to talk:

"My hero Kenainym,
I have something to tell you,
Today Boronbay loses the cooper whip,
He can never come out to the ground from now on.

"Your elder brother Alemsarik,
Your uncle Hero Krichorao,
Especially your grandfather Lion Semtay,
And the old Khan Bakay,
Your purpose is to rescue them,
They are still in danger.

"Unless you rescue them from Haribek,
It will be hard to predict our prospect.
You may not be aware that,

Our distance is farther than a usual three months' trip.

"Black-hearted Haribek,
May still trap them in the original place.
To save their lives and get out of trouble,
They may be struggling to fight in turn.
You can never put your mission aside,
For momentary impulse.

"The three months' trip,
I can finish it in three days.
Because no one can know,
What disaster the enemy will take to them!
We must rush back to battlefield as soon as possible,
To rescue them,
Taking preventive measures."

Kenainym nodded after hearing this.
"You are right, Kankura,
Do not I launch the expedition from Talas,
To rescue them?"
He turned around to return before finishing his words.

Let us put this aside,
And let me sing about,
How Kenainym killed Haribek.

Hero Kenainym Killed the Devils Bravely

Four Heroes Fought Fiercely against Haribek

Haribek riding black spotty horse,
Was a vampire-like devil.
He came to the battlefield at this time,
Opening the mouth to yell,
With a lot of ravings:

"Hey,
Listen,
Boronbay and Kenainym,
Neither of them will come back.
Boronbay has instinctive slyness,
And resourcefulness,
He must succeed to cheat the silly boy Kenainym.
They will both drill into the ground,
Going on fighting in the dark world.
There are sorceresses from seven tribes in underground world,
They won't let Kenainym return alive.

"I do not want to wait for the message with no return,
Come to die, you guys,
Now have a final battle with me.

"If you feel humiliated,
Battle with me separately,
The latter ones can see how you are defeated one by one.
If none of you dares to fight first,
Come up together,
I will use my sword to let you leave the world together.

"What is a hero,
The answer is on my body,
Open your eyes and look!"

When Haribek shouted madly,
Old Bakay took the chance to look through battlefield.

Kunwuerbayi, Shipshaydar,
Nieskara, Muladle and so on,
Bakay watched all of them carefully before the battle.

Cyclops Madhan,
Nieskara and Zubatay,
Their abilities were under control,
After the observation of Bakay.

Those tall giants,
Those Herculeses that were too heavy to be carried by horses,
Such as Banus and Duo Khan,
The Herculeses Sokso and Sotoy,
Bakay had met many ones.
In the invasion of Begin,
Before lots of fierce battles,
Bakay had a set of observation experiences.

Beshkurak and Elama,
Madykole of Monget,
Sartbayi and other lunatics,
Bakay could see through them from the first sight.
He also could almost guess,
How many lamb legs and naans each one could eat in one meal.

Whether in the celebration of Kuocotoy,
Or at crowded rally;
Whether at the moment sun alternates,
Or at battle line;
Whether people as thin as a lath and as short as an ant,

Or people as strong as a horse and as tall as a mountain,
Bakay could distinguish every warrior,
No matter what changes they had made,
They could not deceive Bakay's eyes.

A Coward or a warrior?
A Schemer or a boor?
He could see through at a glance.
But it is the first time for Bakay,
To meet someone like Haribek.

The stature of Haribek was:
Thin legs,
And sturdy arms,
The feature of mightiness was obvious;
The low profile nose and the big round face,
Suggested he could keep working for three days,
With a little bit tiredness;
His limbs were muscular,
His body was vigorous,
He could travel for forty days,
Without a piece of weakness.

His forehead was prominent,
His eyes were deep-set,
He must be tricky and black hearted,
There was not a trace of humanity in his mind.
His had thick scapulars,
Slender short waist,
Long fingers,
And large wrists,
The strength of his arms should not be underrate.

Looking at his figure,
Bakay felt distracted:
"It is difficult to take precedence,
In the fighting with Haribek on a black spotty horse,

Even though surviving needs to take a chance."

It was the voice from Bakay's heart,
His worry and anxiety,
Would be shown to nobody.

Filled with the smell of blood,
Haribek was supercilious and arrogant,
He never took four heroes into account,
As blind as a bat,
Loudly shouting he kept.

Old Bakay thought to himself,
If Kenainym arrived right now,
He had enough strength to be Haribek's rival.
At that moment,
Alemsarik stood out,
Looked like invincible,
He asked Bakay for the assignment to battle,
Desiring the chance to get in the field.

Seeing the coming of a child,
Haribek was in a towering rage:
"They considered me to be ordinary being,
I will show them my mighty,
I will let those Kirgiz people know,
It is their doomsday!"

After Alemsarik's attack by the spear,
He pointed enemy's nose and gave a roar:
"I will let you die with no regrets!"
The Frightful Presence,
Looked like a hungry vulture.
He lifted his breasts and stared,
The eyes were as big as those of Bovine.

Young warrior Alemsarik,

Exceling in martial arts,
And looked like fearless.
He urged Totoru Steed,
Held the spear with both hands,
Led a fierce attack,
Towards the right shoulder of Haribek.

Damn bastard Haribek,
He twisted to duck,
And almost fell from the horse,
He sat up straight at once,
Thought to himself:
"It is not easy to deal with this youth."

Looked just like an eagle,
Young warrior Alemsarik gave a roar:
"Once again!"
He waved the spear,
Stabbed at the left of the giant.

Haribek was caught off guard,
He tilted the body to duck.
Haribek raised his vigilance after two hits,
Did not dare to relax,
He dealt it in a serious way.
When Alemsarik came from the front,
Without mercy,
He grabbed the shaft fleetly.
With a sudden effort he captured the spear,
Turned around it,
Stabbed to Alemsarik's chest.

Alemsarik blocked it by the battleax,
With a crack,
The spear was split into two parts.

Like an arrow the spearhead was flying to the air,

Hastily Haribek threw the shaft of the spear.
He raised his own spear,
Thrust at the youth,
Mighty and fierce.

Onlooking warriors almost lost their heartbeat,
About the grandson's life Semtay was more worried.

The offspring of Manas,
Alemsarik the young youth,
He had flexible tactics.
When enemy's spear was approaching his chest,
He lay on the saddle to dodge it.
It made Haribek's spear miss him,
Without a little bit hurt.

Before Haribek turned his head,
Alemsarik chased up him,
With the battleax,
He split and chopped.

Tinkling came out,
Battleax continually impacted the helmet,
Haribek could not get a sight on it.

Young hero on Totoru Steed,
Shouted the name of Manas,
He waved the battleax ninety times,
Did not hurt Haribek a little bit.

At last Haribek found a chance to counterattack,
He waved the spear upwards,
Lifted Alemsarik by the spear,
Just like a hat,
Alemsarik was thrown into the air and fell to the backward grassland.

"With one more stab he will die,

Young hero will lose his life."
Thought about it,
Krichorao urged his steed,
Rushed forward,
And took Alemsarik to the campsite.
Standing right in front of Haribek,
Carefully Krichorao sized him up:

His mouth spat raging fire like the hot sun in summer,
His eyes exposed fierce light like cold wind in snowy mountains,
His face looked cunning like a viper hiding in grass,
He rushed towards battlefield like a strong rutting male camel;
His shout was like the sound of surf,
His could make rivers flow back by stamping on the earth.

"No wonder he can govern seven giants,
He turns out to be a devil drinking blood."

Faced with Krichorao,
The eyes of Haribek spat red flame.
Flame burned his spear shaft,
With crackle,
And smoke.
No one could not be afraid in sight of the scene,
No one could not lose life in the battle with him.

Son of Almanbet, Krichorao,
Defeated so many heroes.
What did Haribek matter,
When fighting with Kunwuerbayi,
He made the opponent die.
He once fixed Nieskara,
Kezileuyok from Jafan,
Wasn't spared either.
He ever threw Qinkojo and Toletoy,
From the heaven to the earth,
Letting their heads hit the ground,

Letting their blood drain.

Battle-hardened Krichorao,
Saw the invincible hero Haribek,
Broke into a cold sweat.

He thought:
"I can't let his plot succeed,
Can't let him live in the world to hurt people again."
Krichorao wielded the spear,
Shouted the slogan of Lion Manas,
With his hot breath lingering in the mind,
Rushing ahead with heroic posture.

Two heroes with extraordinary fighting skills,
Wielded simultaneously spears,
Collision of spearheads,
In the air made sparks.
The watching soldiers,
Saw what was called the fight of heroes.

Two persons both fought bravely and resourcefully,
No one let the opponent win easily.

Krichorao had calmness and martial skills,
Harder gestures,
Faster motions,
He thrusted for several times,
Haribek showed no panics.

Heroes went on battling like this for three days,
The arm of Krichorao became powerless,
But Haribek fought more bravely.

Another round of battle started,
Haribek pressed harder and harder.
Suddenly he blocked the spear of Krichorao,

And thrusted hard to fight back,
The shoulder blade of Krichorao was stabbed.

Krichorao shouted,
Grasped the mane of his steed,
His buttock leaned on the saddle to one side,
His feet slipped off the stirrups of his steed.

Haribek was about to draw his sword,
Son of Aykoler, Semtay,
Pounced as if a hungry tiger came down a hill,
Lifting his spear to stop Haribek.

He shouted the slogan of Manas,
Like a ferocious lion,
Like swift Arip Bird,
He whipped the horse Burule to gallop,
Like a hurricane,
Unstoppably.

The horse rose into the sky,
With sand and dust blowing,
As if a general fell from the heaven.
He used Sire Spear from Manas,
To thrust the opponent hard.

The black spotty horse also leaped into the air,
Steel spear hit its front leg.
The black horse knelt for a moment and stood up again,
Unscathed Haribek still sat on the horse.
The spear missed the target,
Semtay felt extremely regretful.

"The damned world,
Full of darkness.
Sire Spear from my father,
Why not show your power today?"

Haribek felt dizzy like drunk for the attack,
Woke again suddenly,
Opened his eyes.

He asked Semtay loudly:
"Tall body like a mountain,
Huge ear like a shield,
Face color like blood,
In fine fettle,
Who are you, the hero?

"Sliver beard floating,
Two eyes sparkling,
Though in old age,
You are still handsome,
Who are you, old man?

"You are as majestic as Arat Mountain,
Making people hold a reverence,
Afraid to approach,
Who are you, the warrior?

"Your figure is vigorous,
Your spear skill is dazzling,
Please tell me your identity,
Where is your hometown?

"Which tribe do your people belong to,
Tell me clearly where you are from,
You are not an ordinary person,
It can be recognized from your appearance."

Semtay answered loudly:
"How can you not know your ancestor,
You are either a beast or an idiot.
Please listen and remember carefully,

Semtay is my name."

Hearing that "My father is Manas,
Do not you know who is your ancestor?"
Angry Haribek,
Fumed with rage,
Fury was rising.
Unable to find proper answer for the moment,
He could not help shaking with rage.

He drew his sword and grasped it,
Whipping black spotty horse to leap forward.
Raging fire came out from the eyes,
Angry roar could break stones.

"Arrogant Semtay,
You dare to boast yourself before me.
I will cut you into halves,
I will make your people wander;
I will flatten your Kankole and Talas,
Turning it into wasteland;
I will kill off the Kirgiz with white felt caps,
Making your tribe destroyed.

"You say your father is Manas,
Do you think I am afraid?
Can you really be my opponent?
You will die here,
Do you know!"
Before finishing his words,
Haribek had used his sword to cleave.

Semtay held his battleax,
Crescent battleax was as wide as a door.
He wielded it to block the opponent's sword,
The sword was cut into halves and flew away.
Before Haribek picked up his weapon,

Semtay hit his head hard,
Nine-layered helmet was broken into pieces.

With great pain,
Haribek lifted his hammer to fight.
He hacked the head of Semtay,
But was blocked by the battleax,
Hammer shaft was broken again.

After losing his sword and hammer,
Shamed Haribek,
Lifted his crescent battleax,
Risking his life to fight again.

Semtay whipped horse to fight,
Like gutting male camels.
They had a life-and-death battle,
All the soldiers stared their eyes.
Back and forth,
A close battle,
battleaxes collided,
Crash was deafening.

After dozens of rounds,
Suddenly the battleax shaft of Haribek was broken,
Meanwhile the battleax of Semtay fell from his hand.

Haribek wielded spear at once,
Thrusted hard at the opponent's waist.
It was too late for Semtay to avoid,
His buttock leaned on the saddle,
His legs slipped off the stirrups.

Burule Steed was not steady on its hooves,
So inclined down itself,
Semtay presses the ground by right palm,
But overexerted himself,

Broke his arm.

Before Haribek turned the horse to strike back,
Young hero Alemsarik,
Shouted the name of Manas,
Once again he went into the battlefield.
Krichorao did not stand by,
He gripped the bridle of Burule,
Put Semtay on the horseback,
And brought him to the campsite.

"He is the boy who came just now,
Who actually has a little strength,
If I can not defeat him in two rounds,
How I show my might?"
Thought about this,
Haribek mounted the steed with his lips zipped.

Alemsarik met the attack calmly,
He waved the battleax to block the spear.
Haribek felt shameful,
For his hit was blocked by a child.

He thought:
"I will kill this youth,
Make him disappear from the earth."
He drew another sword from the sheath,
Led a strike after a deep breath.

Alemsarik planned in his mind:
"By the battleax I will ward the sword,
Carefully I will grab the chance,
I must crash his head into pieces."

At that time Haribek waved the sword,
In hesitation Alemsarik did not ward it off,
The sharp sword heavily hurt his right arm,

Only a piece of skin that still connected.

Krichorao who was onlooking,
Urged his steed to come up,
Alemsarik was rescued,
Haribek was at his heels.

Krichorao just handed to Bakay,
Haribek's sword was approaching,
After looking back,
Krichorao ducked it swiftly.

He hung on the horseback sideways,
Dodged the sword completely.

Haribek hacked ceaselessly,
Krichorao dodged swiftly,
Not any attack hit him.

Haribek was powerful,
But had no choice here and now.
He was cranky and distracted:
"By my strength I will beat him out.

"Two of the four was injured,
That old man was easy to defeat,
Only Krichorao the son of Almanbet,
Could he be my matched opponent?"

He bit his lips,
Impatient,
Urged the black spotty steed,
Led a charge in full energy.

God do not show that sense to us,
Do not let the devil defeat Krichorao.
Seeing the condition was coming,

Old Bakay ignored his age.

I can not express the courage and wisdom of Bakay,
He rode the steed to the face of Haribek.

At the moment Bakay's steed was arriving,
Stabbed down Krichorao was being,
Sunglow looked like fire,
Around there a shocked roar of Manas came,
In red sky it was thundering and lightning.

If you want to know Haribek's fate,
Just listen to the following singing.

Kenainym Killed the Devil Haribek

In the most dangerous condition,
From the sky a young hero came,
Overhead the resonant voice of Kenainym said:
"Grandfather Bakay and Krichorao,
You get out of there and back,
I will teach Haribek a lesson!"

Hearing the voice of Kenainym,
Hearing the Manas' name,
Haribek was dizzy and weak,
Seized the chance Krichorao escaped.

Haribek turned to look,
All over the sky there was a dust,
Suddenly the sky darkened,
Sunlight disappeared,
Clear sky had gone.
Kenainym was coming on a horse,
Majestic and powerful.

Haribek regretted that did not kill Krichorao,
The darkminded bloodsucker,
Filled with anger like a frightened boar.

"Whether there was dusty sky,
Or turbulent flood?"
Seeing the nightmarish sense,
Haribek was frightened to soliloquize,
Uncleanly he said a lot.

Facing the coming Kenainym,
Haribek hated his guts,
And opened the mouth to shout madly,
Hoarsely,
Like a barking mad dog:

"Kenainym,
I am also a hero,
Of indomitable spirits,
Just like you.
You escaped for more than forty days,
Where did you go on earth?

"Red-faced giant Kezriarip,
Two giants Akem and Shakem,
Besides Surmargan,
I will revenge them!

"Son of Su, Sumargan,
Boronbay on gray spotty horse,
You need to find them for me,
Or I will have your head broken.

"I will use my bloody sword,
To punish you severely.
If I can't do this,
Let me disappear forever from the world.
To take your life,
I am willing to bleed,
Risking my life!

"I will drain your blood,
Semtay and Krichorao,
Alemsarik and Bakay,
I will kill them one by one.

"I will make your Talas suffer a bloodbath,

Flattening your cities.
I will slaughter your Kirgiz people,
Making them disappear from the world.

"I will make Kirgiz people homeless,
I will turn your women into bondmaids,
I will turn your girls into servants,
I will turn your men into slaves.

"I will kill all of your battle horses,
And seize your livestock.
Making you disappear from the world,
With forever humiliations."

The damned madman wielded spear,
Loud howl buzzed in the air.

"Even if Kenainym is a mountain,
I will overthrow him."
His spear came fiercely,
Kenainym stayed calm.
He grasped the opponent's spear swiftly,
The other end of shaft was still in the hand of Haribek.

They pulled each other endlessly,
"Boom!" spear shaft broke in the middle,
Heroes in the world had such extraordinary fighting skills,
They could not be praised enough.

Two heroes kicked horses,
Urging them to rush forth.
One hacked,
Wielding battleax as wide as a door;
The other cleaved,
Lifting sword as fast as lighting.
Jingling when axe cleaved helmet,
Gleaming when sword hacked armor.

Horses under them kept running,
Coats on them flew in the air.
They kept fighting day and night,
No one looked a little tired.

Soldiers assisted in fighting like tidewater,
Battle drums made deafening sound.
Everywhere were soldiers,
And continuous clunk of weapons.

As if the heaven and earth shook.
The earth opened,
The stones spouted,
Black water sprayed from cracks here,
Blazing magma flowed there.

Suddenly clear sky turned dark,
Earth was wrapped in fog,
Dust spread furiously,
Turbid air waved with stink.
Wind hardly blew away the mist,
As if mountains plunged into darkness.
The scene had never appeared,
Did it need the witness of heaven and earth,
To make a judgement?

Son of Almanbet, Krichorao,
He knew kinds of tricks of ghosts and devils.
He worked magic of Karamark people,
Making wild wind blow in the sky,
Followed by a heavy rain.
The sun broke through,
The sky turned clear,
Vast ground was bright,
As if it was washed.

Kenainym and Haribek,
Risked their lives to fight with no gasp.
Kankura and black spotty horse,
Ran with sweating,
To mountains in the distance.

Heroes threw weapons and grappled,
Grasping the opponent's arms on horses.
Pushing each other,
Dragging clothing.

They put reins under stirrups,
On a free ride,
Letting horse fly.

Two horses jumped over cliffs,
Over mountains,
Kankura and black spotty horse,
Did not fear mountains and races,
Running and leaping like antelopes.

Engaged in fight,
Two heroes had a close battle,
In pitch darkness.
They dismounted after horses were tired,
Competing with bare hands.

Heroes griped the opponent's belt,
Wrestling with each other.
With no helmet on the head,
And trouser legs rolled up,
The two men grappled,
Hitting the home of opponent.
Mouth bled,
Back sweated,
Bones hurt,
Muscle swelled,

The earth became small for their fight,
They almost grappled on every area of the battlefield.

It was also hard to tell who was better,
They rode the horses again.

Many arrogant warriors,
Looked like hills in usual,
But after seeing power of the two men,
They all felt ashamed.

At this time,
Haribek said:
"Kenainym,
Listen to me,
Since I left camp to fight against you,
Fifteen sunsets,
And fifteen sunrises have gone,
My stomach has growled,
I want to go on to fight after having a meal,
Do you think it reasonable?

"Since I set out from the castle,
I have never eaten.
Having a full meal,
And sleeping for thirty days,
It is my habit formed over years.

"Kenainym,
You are a hero born in Kirgiz,
You are the Yellow-faced Death having a close battle with me;
You are a peak that swans can't fly over,
You are a beast that can swallow everything;
You are mountains that can't be overturned,
You are a patron saint of sixty tribes in Arashi,
You are a respected hero.
In this vast world,

Only you can match me.

"Kenainym,
Red-faced giant Kezriarip,
Akem, Shakem and Surmargan,
It took you six days to kill the former,
And two days to kill the latter.
Though you are so powerful,
You can't defeat me.

"Now our weapons are damaged,
Coat armors are torn,
Steeds are thirsty and tired,
We are also exhausted,
With drinking no water and eating no rice.

"When I come back after rest,
I will swallow you!
I will sharp my spear,
I will mend my armor,
I will quench my sword,
And soak it in poisonous water,
I will cut off your head!

"I will fix up my hammer,
And gave you a horrible death,
At first get my battleax repaired,
Then send you into oblivion.
The shield and the helmet,
Should also be fixed.
In new helmet and armor,
I will fight with you to the finish.
Soon your head will be taken,
I will not let you live one more day!

"The Iron armor was made of nine layers metal cloth,
I will fasten its two rows of buckles.

After I get prepared,
I will show you my might.
What is superhuman strength,
What is insuperable hero,
From me I will let you learn it.

"I am going to see,
How powerful you are.
Go with me,
The food is free.
You should fill your belly,
Do not stand on ceremony."

Positively Kenainym answered:
"Haribek,
Go away,
Keep your word,
Do not break it and escape.

"Who wants to have your food,
My dog will not eat even if you give it,
You must ensure,
Rest and satiate for thirty days.
Come back after forty days,
Then let us fight a decisive battle.

"Now I allow you to leave,
For I can not stand your rave,
Keep back your nonsense,
Do not say I take advantage of your hunger.

"It is your last meal,
You must get replete,
Do not leave regrets.
Record your last words,
After that you will have no chance to say it.
Not an intimidation it is,

Come back soon,
Haribek!"

White beard Old Bakay,
Hero Krichorao and Semtay,
The four of Alemsarik,
Kenainym came and greeted them,
They got in the yurt together.
After a long war,
Kenainym was filled with hunger,
Likewise he was tired.
Finally he could have a meal relaxed.

From bile of livestock to that of fish,
The herbalist used forty kinds of medicine.
They lifted Kenainym,
Treated him,
Let him sleep.

They covered him with buffalo hide,
They applied medicine of tortoise liver to him,
Medicine Kirmarkzri[①] and Kaynatemalkara[②],
All applied to his wounds.

Old Bakay stayed at her side,
The medicine prepared by Kanikai,
Was all applied.

After a few days,
Kenainym's wounds were all healed up,
He was well fed and got enough sleep,
His body became stronger.
The venom inside him,
Had totally eliminated with sweat.

1 Kirmarkzri: Kirgiz term, name of medicine in folklore.

2 Kaynatemalkara: Kirgiz term, name of medicine in folklore.

Semtay's arm was also cured,
He was thinking of the revenge on the foe.

The deadline of forty days had come,
Forty bowls of wine Haribek drunk.
He was seized by a whim in inebriation.
Had his fellows prepared steed soon,
He was departing to kill his foe.

Damn beast went out to battle on his steed,
Majestic-looking,
Domineering,
The weapons were clinking,
Sounded like thundering,
The hoof beat was ringing,
The dust around the sky,
The trees were waving,
The earth was shaking.

His eyes emitted flame,
Like to burn the ground;
His mouth blew heat,
Like rolling flood;
He urged the black spotty steed to rush,
Like a screaming serpent traversed through the grassland.

Seeing the coming of Haribek,
Kenainym wanted to mount the steed and meet it.
Krichorao kept him at the moment,
Told him some words:

"Different from the past this expedition is,
There will be a lot of hardships and dangers,
You will step on the place elder generations have not been to.
There are flash floods,
Raging flames,

Ferocious beasts,
Mountainous enemies.
There are magics human never know,
There are unspeakable grotesques.
You may meet anything,
You should deal with them seriously.

"After you defeat Haribek,
Sumargan who have escaped,
Will come to fight back.
For his trickiness,
When you are chasing after him,
The damn boar,
You will meet unexpected difficulties.
You are the descendant of Lion Manas,
You should not do things by halves.

"Child,
Listen,
Carry the Alemabash Gun[1] with you,
It is the relic of your ancestor Almanbet.
Keep it on your back,
It will help you sometime or other.

"Hold Boronbay's copper wipe,
Use it to deal with witchcraft,
It is really assistant.

"I have in my hand a shirt,
You ought to wear it,
Remember my advice,
It will make you victorious.

"Kenainym,
You need to remember,

1 Alemabash Gun: Kirgiz language, means gun with apple-like muzzle.

The top priority,
Never forget.
It is Sire Spear your great-grandfather Manas left,
To your grandfather Semtay.

"It never bends,
Of the enemies it stabs,
None can survive.
Carry it with you,
When you return with triumph,
Send it back to your grandfather Semtay.

"My father Almanbet,
Ever got a white dagger,
From Jurendo,
Take it with you,
In the life-and-death moment,
It will be your powerful weapon to defeat enemies."

Krichorao told details of the weapons one by one,
Kenainym accepted all the weapons,
And remembered all the words.

He hung Alemabash Gun on his back,
He wore the shirt,
He held Sire Spear,
He carried the white dagger with himself.
He grasped the cooper whip of Boronbay,
In his hand.
About to set out with everything prepared,
Old Bakay and Semtay,
Came to pray for him,
Bless for him.

Kenainym mounted Kankura,
His prestige was higher than before.
Watching from behind,

His temperament was like white tiger.
Looking from front,
His air was like soaring roc.
On his side,
There was a dragon thick as mat tube;
And two ferocious lions,
Ran after Kankura.

The unusual scene,
Made people shudder with fear;
The signs showed,
Kenainym was the Yellow-faced Death.
He was the bane of enemies in the world,
No one could defeat him.

Haribek on black spotty horse,
Held his head high,
Wielded his spear to fight:
"Kenainym,
Come on!"
Shouting loudly,
With arrogance.

Kenainym came to fight bravely,
The lifelike dragon and lions,
Appeared around him,
Haribek saw them clearly.

"What's going on,
Do I also have the protection of sacred animals?"
Haribek looked around,
Seeing none of sacred animals.
Haribek kicked the horse,
With an unconvinced and confused heart.
He approached rapidly in rage,
Starting the decisive battle with Kenainym.

Haribek thrusted with spear,
Fiercely as wind,
Overwhelmingly,
Gleamy spearhead whirred,
But Kenainym was in no hurry.

"Even if he is a mountain,
I will overturn him!"
Haribek made up his mind,
His spear was extraordinary ferocious.

Kenainym stood as if nothing had happened,
Haribek fell into rage,
With murderous look,
He thrusted hard again,
Kenainym was almost struck down from saddle.

Iron battle coat seized from the giant Akem,
And the armor and battle jacket,
Were all punctured,
Fortunately the shirt of Krichorao,
Stopped the spearhead.

Haribek turned around,
Lifting his spear again.
Kenainym wielded cooper whip,
Hitting the spear hard,
The spear was broken into halves.

Kenainym grabbed cooper whip,
Wanting to lash Haribek,
The damned bastard wielded battleax,
Hacking at his wrist.
The wrist was almost cut through by battleax,
Cooper whip was thrown far away.

Krichorao arrived fleetingly,

Lifting cooper whip with his spearhead.

Kenainym said:
"Grandfather,
I do not need it,
Take it back!"
He had been enraged by Haribek.

He raised the huge battleax of Akem,
Hacking hard at the opponent.
Nine-layer shield of Haribek,
Was smashed by him.

Kenainym hit continuously,
Letting the opponent unable to rest and breathe.
Jingling,
Sparkling,
Five-layer helmet of Haribek,
Was suddenly broken into pieces.

Haribek lost his helmet and shield,
Armor and battle jacket of Kenainym were crushed.
They two broke even,
With a tie,
And their respective damage.

The decisive point of two heroes came,
Who would win,
Who would lose,
Watching soldiers opened their eyes wide.
Soldiers of Haribek,
Sent helmet and shield,
Helmet had six layers,
Shield had ten layers.
He thought:
"Swallow him this time,
With safer equipment."

Krichorao approached Kenainym,
Handing over a battle jacket:
"This is the battle jacket Chuwak ever wore,
I collect it till today,
You must wear it well.

"This is Sire Spear inherited from great-grandfather,
Now is the time to use it.
My child,
You need to keep this in mind,
This is my advice to you."
Krichorao left after finishing the words,
Kenainym had higher fighting will.

Rearmed Haribek,
Became more murderous:
He carried huge hammer,
His eyes seemed to bleed,
Rushing madly towards Kenainym.
Aiming at the head of Kenainym,
He lifted hammer high and hit hard.

Kenainym wielded spear,
Thrust upward,
And stabbed the opponent's arm.

Hammer of Haribek fell to the ground,
He did not achieve the anticipating goal.
Face of Kenainym turned yellower,
Wielding Sire Spear with more strength.

He boiled with anger,
Shouting at the opponent:
"Haribek,
You bastard,
Five days have gone after you finished your last super,

Come on,
Today I will send you to death!"

Kenainym shouted the slogan, Manas,
Head of Sire Spear spat fire,
Kankura ran as quickly as flash,
Wind rose and cloud flew,
Dust covered the sky.

He had murderous look,
With raging fire,
In his vertical eyes,
And smoke from his nose.
People seeing his figure would bleed with fear,
People hearing his voice would be frightened.

Haribek saw his majesty,
Getting alarmed and overwhelmed.
Kenainym came in the blink of an eye,
Terrified Haribek fought hurriedly.
He wanted to lift battleax but took spear,
No choice but to bite the bullet to ride forth.

Spears collided,
And spearheads met,
Sound was like a blot out of the blue,
Spark was like a lighting in dark night.

Misfortune befell Haribek,
His spearhead was split in half.
Young hero Kenainym,
Unsaddled Haribek with a stab,
Whom was strong as a boar.

Young hero turned the horse,
With the spear he stabbed enemy's heart hard,
Blood splattered after the hit,

Enemy's chest was pierced.
Kenainym carried the boar off upon his spear,
Under two giants,
Kankura could not move.
Kenainym threw the boar at the black spotty horse,
Made the horse unable to move for the broken waist.

Haribek's head was cut by knife,
A big hole was poked in the boar's lips.
He suffered from his own actions,
Retribution it was,
The arrogant bloodsucker,
Disappeared from the earth like this.

Semtay gathered soldiers of giants,
And people from Aytumsh,
Then told them:

"Red-faced giant Kezriarip,
Akem and Shakm,
Boronbay who rides a gray spotty horse,
Your evil ringleaders,
Have been killed by us.

"You innocent soldiers,
Let me tell you:
Get back to your homeland.
We will not plunder your livestock,
Do what you want.

"Sumargan and Surmargan,
Their soldiers have been killed to scatter,
Sumargan is nowhere to be found,
Surmargan has lost his head.

"Aytumsh and Qingersh,
Come a little closer,

In order to save you,
Soldiers of seven giants came to fight.

"You nine guys,
Desired to win but got disastrous defeat.
You may never think about it,
How to face this kind of result?
You would better come with Qinekay,
I will give you a safe and peace life."

After Semtay's words,
Qingersh hastily said:
"Semtay the son of Aykoler,
I will tell you the truth:
Sumargan could not afford Qinekay's bride price at all,
He was getting up to tricks.

"In order to frighten us to get the girl,
He made up the rumor of cannibalism.
Three days ago he came once,
He could swim like a fish,
He could fly like a bird,
That is all his ability.

"To know more about the bride price of Qinekay,
You should listen to me carefully:

"On the remote black island,
A magical roc lives,
If some can catch it,
I want to get it.

"There is an eight-thousand-year-old creature,
It has eaten the roc's egg,
Its upper body looks like a snake,
Its lower body looks like a rock,
It is Jurendo who can talk,

Cook its head for me to make dinner.

"Anyone who can make it,
Will get my Qinekay.
I will keep my word,
This is my promise.

"You told me to bring Qinekay,
Without any bride price,
How can I marry off my daughter?

"I am telling you Semtay,
Even if I agree it fully,
Qinekay is not here,
Who is going to take her place?

"I have told you,
Sumargan came here three days ago,
By violence he took Qinekay away,
Their whereabouts we do not know."

Semtay said angrily:
"Aytumsh,
We will go to your castle,
To find your daughter Qinekay,
Even if the remotest corners they flee to!"

The son of Almanbet Krichorao,
He was full of resources,
He took action decisively.
Arrested Qingersh without words,
Crackling sound came,
Qingersh was lashed dozens of times.

Jurendo had woven a net in those years,
And passed it to Almanbet,
Almanbet stored it with his wife Arukay,

Then Arukay gave it to her son Krichorao.

At this time Krichorao took out the net,
Qingersh could not get out from it.
They sent Aytumsh to carry him,
Then hung up him in the middle of the yurt.

Bakay issued orders,
Let Aytumsh guard Qingersh,
Alemsarik who lost an arm,
Kept watch on them aside.

At this time,
Kuyale and Salamart had come back to the camp,
Krichorao told them:
"You stay here,
Carefully nurse Old Bakay."

Semtay and Alemsarik,
They called Kenainym and said:
"Sumargan and Jurendo,
Their whereabouts is unknown,
We have to find them and finish them off.

"We will find Qinekay as well,
To make a good job of things about engagement.
If you marry her forcedly without bride price,
She may hesitate to live with you heart and soul."

Hearing grandfather Semtay's words,
Young Kenainym answered:
"What did you say my grandfather,
I can not bother you anymore for I am here.
You should back to home together,
It is human nature to feel homesick.

"I will run my own affair well,

Hand lobola to them,
Marry the bride Qinekay according to etiquette,
And take her to Talas.

"Go ahead,
Grandfather Krichorao,
Let us return to Old Bakay quickly.
Brother Alemsarik is injured,
Old Bakay is exhausted,
We need to send them back to hometown.

"Sixty people including you,
Had better set out next morning.
I will get the left things done,
You can be rest assured.

"Maybe you just reach hometown,
I will arrive with Qinekay.
Jurendo,
Qinekay,
Black Sea Island,
And the roc,
Where they are,
The Qingersh must know.

"Aytumsh has no sin,
Just for affording his family,
I will torture Qingersh again,
Letting him tell the truth."

Kenainym and Krichorao,
Came to Bakay and Semtay,
Told them again about,
The discussion of the two persons.

Semtay showed disagreement,
Followed by the words:

"We only torture Qingersh,
But do not look for Qinekay,
Such an approach is not right.

"If we can't find Qinekay,
If she can't stay with us,
How can we return to hometown?

"Soul of Manas lives forever,
Talas is the shrine of Kirgiz,
If we can't achieve our aim,
How can we face them?"

When Semtay spoke,
Krichorao touched the net lightly,
The net shrank immediately.
Qingersh could not bear the compression of net,
Nose was bleeding,
Limbs were cramped,
Rattling with pains.

Let us put this down,
And talk in detail,
About the story that Kenainym fought against Jurendo.

Yellow-faced Death Kenainym Fought against Devil Jurendo

When Qingersh screamed,
There was a bolt from the blue,
Hail fell with a crash,
Flood inundated the ground.

Son of Almanbet, Krichorao,
Guessed it was a magical trick,
He also worked magic,
Dark clouds dispersed and the sun came out.

At this time,
Sumargan on a black horse,
Appeared in the front.
He shot sharp arrows like rain,
And flying bullets like hail,
He also fired Jazayli Gun,
Putting the heroes in trouble.

Son of Almanbet, Krichorao,
He had courage and wisdom.
He checked a bullet carefully,
Neither lead,
Nor steel,
People wouldn't die if shot,
He knew it was also a trick of magic.

He shouted: "Kenainym!"
Handed over Apple-headed Gun his father left,
Kenainym took the gun and shot,

The bullets just like hail,
Disappeared before the heroes.

Son of Su, Sumargan,
Whipped horse on towards Kenainym,
Wielding spear,
Coming fiercely.

Kenainym thought:
"The guy playing tricks,
Can only use magic to cheat people.
He dares to be against me,
I will let him have no return."

He lifted the spear of giant Akem,
Blocked the coming spear,
Turned around,
Rushed again,
Sumargan was too frightened to resist.

"If Kenainym stabs me,
I will lose my life."
He turned around to escape with fear,
Like a fleeing boar.

Sumargan whipped the black horse,
Running off swiftly in panic,
His clothes danced in the wind,
Kenainym hunted him down.

Sumargan escaped with thinking:
"I need to flee speedily to Black Sea,
Across Black Sea and to Jurendo.
There is a mysterious tomb,
Fighting against him after getting there.

"I will occupy the whole Kirgiz,

After killing Kenainym,
I will kill all of them,
Leaving no future trouble.

Sumargan fled neither slowly nor quickly,
Luring Kenainym to keep chasing.
He used kinds of magic along the way,
But no effect could be seen.

They went through plains and mountains,
Sumargan planned along the road:
"Black Sea Qingersh mentioned,
Is the place where lobola can be found.
I needn't worry when reaching coast,
I can fly across the sea by a little magic.
If Kenainym hunts me down,
He must die in waves.

"Fish and turtles will bite him to death,
Each bone will be swallowed.
Even if he can cross the sea luckily,
He will find the island.
If I am the first to fly there,
How can he escape from Jurendo?"

Sunrises and sunsets,
Twenty-six days and nights,
Sumargan tried every means,
To lure Kenainym to the coast of Black Sea.

Sly Sumargan worried:
"It will be hard if Kenainym doesn't go to sea."
He shortened the distance,
Luring Kenainym to chase tightly.

When the distance was as short as a rope,
Sumargan first urged the black horse to jump into waves,

Unwilling to let him go,
Kenainym whipped his horse against waves.

Horse Kankura loosened his mane in the water,
Swimming on the vast sea,
As if a boat cleaved through waves.

Sumargan rode black horse and flew to the sky,
Shouting in the cloud:
"Kenainym,
Let me see how you can return to Talas,
Can your dead great-grandfather Manas,
Hear you complain to him?

"If you can land the island alive,
I will also let you bleed.
Let you be unable to return to your hometown,
Let your body rot on the island."

Sumargan finished his words,
Hid at once,
Could hardly be seen.

Kankura crawled and trod in the water,
As if an unsinkable boat moved on the water.
After eight days,
They landed a piece of land.

After running day and night Kankura felt exhausted,
Being soaked by sweat made the saddle looked heavier.
Seeing the fatigue of his steed,
Kenainym felt sad.
Without pity he urged his horse forward,
Moved on and kept chasing.

They came across a spring,
Kenainym kept riding.

Kankura talked suddenly,
Every word was genuine:

"Hey, my hero Kenainym,
You have only strength,
But lack of wisdom,
How can you match your muscular body,
With such simple mind?

"We have chased Sumargan all the way,
Walking on the ground for twenty-six days and nights,
Swimming in the water eight full days.

"I never stop my hoofs,
You never close your eyes,
It is time to rest,
Plenty energy secure your ends.

"Look at the spring,
It is sweet and clear,
Just wash away our sweat and dust.

"You should try to fill your belly,
Then take a shower comfily;
I will quench my thirsty as well,
Then eat grass heartily.
Isn't it better to move on,
After we renew our energy?"

Kankura's words just met Kenainym's mind,
He unbridled the steed,
Let it eat grass well,
And drink its fill.

After taking a shower by the spring,
Kenainym got dressed,
And belted up.

To wait his steed he lay alongside,
Going to his dream unconsciously.
Kankura stayed with him closely,
He drove wild animals away.
Without living a step he protected Kenainym night and day,
To guarantee the safety of his majesty.

After twenty-one whole days,
Kenainym woke up.
He was to drive Kankura to mount,
Coming a smell of stink.

He found the smell was from horseback,
Then took off the saddle in haste,
The horseback became hairless for decay,
In drops purulent blood was streaming.

Kenainym lost his head,
In the spring suddenly waves splashed,
A little white fish jumped out of the water,
Closely following a sharp sword.

When the sharp sword was cutting the fish,
Kenainym acted to help the weak,
He stretched out his hand,
Grasped the sword,
Suddenly the sword went up in smoke.

Unexpectedly the little white fish talked,
With clear pronunciation and mellow voice.
"The son of human,
My dear hero,
Thanks for saving my life.
For I can not stay out of the water,
Please come up to me,
I have some words to tell you:

"I am the only daughter of water god,
Who the son of water ghost wants to seize.
In order to shield each other's child,
Two kings started to fight.

"After six rounds of fight,
The seventh round was quite fierce,
My father found it is unable to defeat,
Neither can he ensure my safety.

"After water ghost wiped out my father's soldiers,
They tried to catch me endlessly.
I am too weak to escape,
Seeing the path here,
I ran into it at any risk.

"Nobody knows the spring had no lower reaches,
Water directly seep into the earth,
My doomsday was coming.
Water ghost was killing me at the moment,
I was so lucky to get your help,
So my life was saved.

"Fierce and cruel water ghost,
Has died in your hands.
The moment you grasped the sword,
Completely it went up in smoke.

"Please tell me who you are,
Why not grasped me but the sword?
Tell me directly without hiddenness.

"My father is the King Hannas,
My name is Janalis.
Please tell me your name,
So that we can know each other."

Kenainym made short of long:
"You are fleeing,
I am chasing my enemy.

"My great-grandfather is Khan Manas,
I come from Kankole Talas.
I am chasing my enemy Sumargan,
My name is Kenainym.

"I am not going to save you,
It is our tradition to help the weak and crush the evil.
In the waterside I saw you were fleeing in scare,
Behind you there was a sword so fierce.
I grasped it by nature,
I can not disregard its sinfulness.

"I am going to hunt Sumargan,
You said you are daughter of King Hannas,
I have no demand,
Neither am I going to bother you,
Quickly back to your palace."

During Kenainym was speaking,
Janalis became a beautiful girl,
She was slim and graceful,
Then she said:

"Sumargan the one being chased,
Is not far from here.
Go along the direction of sunset,
It takes less than three days.
"I know him,
I see Sumargan every day.
I also know,
With Jurendo he always keeps company.

"Six days ago,

I went to Jurendo's Ayinla,
I saw them colloguing.

"I overheard Sumargan's words:
'A while ago with Qinekay I came,
And took away your hail gun,
To fight against Kirgiz.
Bu I did not beat them,
So I flee to you again.

"'My black steed was in tiredness,
Kenainym was closely behind us,
On half way I wanted to put him in death,
In Black Sea drown both him and his steed.
If they were not killed,
I do not know where he is indeed.'

"Now I start to know,
You are the one chasing Sumargan.

"After half a day's journey on your way,
A tomb you will meet.
When you walk up to it,
Before you there will be a flame,
The fierce flame will make you difficult to move forward.
If you stifle it with water,
It will spread further.

"You have a Sire Spear in your hand,
Is it the relic of King Manas?
You should use it to stifle the fire,
Then the fire will go out.

"Before you draw back the spear,
Flash floods will come.
You should wave Boronbay's copper whip,
Then you can avoid its harm.

"Walking further along, there will be miraculous scene,
It will snow heavily on the muddy earth.
You should keep waving the whip when you go forward,
Then everything will return to original appearance.

"Keep moving you will meet a storm,
Which is violent enough to blow away rocks.
You should take out the Alemabash Gun from you shoulder,
To drive away the storm by your shoot.

"The sky will turn dark,
The earth will become frozen,
Total you will be in the snow world.
This time you should chop ice with your white dirk,
Immediately it will melt.

"Follow it will be some beasts,
They will rush to you fiercely:
Fierce tigers will stare at you when they are charging,
Cruel lions will dishevel their hair when they are jumping,
Rutting camels will roar when they are running,
Arrogant elephant will wag their tails when they are walking,
Hungry wolves will howl when they are assaulting,
Poisonous scorpions will gnash when they are crawling.

"Kenainym,
Do not panic,
You should hold your Sire Spear,
Stab it into the tiger's mouth,
Then all beasts will take to their heels.

"Then some giants will rush towards you,
With venom sprayed from their mouth,
And fire spat from nose.
You should undo the buttons,
Show them Krichorao's shirt,

At that time they will stop their movement,
Turn into low hills,
That is the end of the magic.
These giants will become mountains,
People will call it Dodoby Mountain.

"To the tomb you must ride on your steed,
There will be a copper lock as big as a horses' head,
By which the tomb's door are locked.

"Before you,
Someone had been there already,
They could not open the lock,
Did not get in,
So they did not touch the treasure in it.

"There were someone who had been driven desperate,
Suffered endless pain,
Did not achieve their aim,
But lost their lives there.

"At the right side of the copper lock,
There is a high niche,
In the niche is a box,
In the box is a slip.
Remember,
Only on your horseback,
You can reach the slip.

"When the slip touch the copper lock,
Automatically the lock will open.
The tomb's door will open towards both sides,
In it there will be a bright light just like sunshine,
These are twinkling gems.

"You should walk in without your steed,
Then you will meet another gate.

Hold the slip,
Use the same way to open it.

"If you keep going straight,
Take a look at both side of the road.
You will see something,
Jurendo's pots and pans for cooking human flesh,
Piece by piece are set up on there in sequence.

"You will meet a few doors,
All of them can be open by the slip.
After getting through three doors,
There will be a beautiful swing bed.

"With the slip you should touch the swing bed,
The girl on the bed will wake up in response.
She will talk to you,
But what will happen next,
I do not really know that.

"The things that girl tells you,
Strictly you should follow.
I am the only daughter of water god,
That all I could tell you.

"Hey, hero Kenainym,
Please wait here for a moment.
Thank you for saving my life,
We are already good friends.
I will report to my father,
He will give you imperative gift,
Please receive it before you go."

Janalis jumped in the water,
Then jumped out in a moment.
She looked down at Kenainym,
Sent a piece of fish to him,

And give him some words:

"I just met my father,
He has conquered all enemies,
Has retaken his throne,
Has regained his dignity.

"Kenainym,
If you eat this piece of fish,
You will not feel hungry and thirsty,
Without eating for forty days,
It also can clear your throat and lung,
Prevent you from coughing.
It is Sagenkor fish,
Ordinary people could hardly find it."

She sent two pieces of leaves as well,
Then carefully explain the function.

"Kenainym,
This pair of leaves contains a yellow one and a green one,
You should know its secret.
With green one if you feed your steed,
It can run for ninety days without fatigue,
Hunger and thirst will not exist.

"The back of your steed is rotted,
Some of its fur is hairless.
If you cover the horseback with the yellow leaf,
You will find extraordinary curative effect.

"It can cover the whole body of your steed,
On Kankura's back,
Glossy fur will reappear.
Steed Kankura will become as strong as before,
Like the wind,
Run and jump.

"Please accept our hearts,
Water King is willing to offer your services.

"There also is a bottle of water,
Please drink it.
It will bring you good health and a long life,
Wish you have a baby boy soon,
May he become a peerless hero like you,
May he become more powerful than you."

With both hands,
Reverently Janalis delivered the fish, the leaves and the bottle,
Kenainym put all that into his robe.

He took out a leaf first,
Walked over to Kankura,
Fed his steed the green leaf,
In no time Kankura swallowed it,
Immediately became plump and sturdy.

He put the yellow leaf on the horseback,
At once the leaf turned larger,
And covered the whole body of the steed,
Rotted fur and flesh disappeared,
Beautiful new fur came out.

Kenainym had a bite of Sagenkor fish,
Drank the bottle of water.
Then decided to set forth,
At that time beautiful girl came and said:
"Kenainym,
Please tell me if you need help anytime,
As long as I can,
I will make it for you.

"I still have something to give you,

It is more magical:
When you need us,
You just do what I am telling you,
There immediately we will appear.
We will follow your demand,
Try the best to help you.

"All things on earth,
Are at my fingertips,
But we water clans is no that strong,
Can not fly neither walk on the ground.

"If you have no clue,
About the enemy you are chasing,
Just tell me,
Maybe we know something.

"No matter he flees to the sky,
Or escapes to the ground,
We can track his movements,
And tell you all details.

"If it is over my ability,
We will message clearly.
Young hero Kenainym,
Please carry it with you."

Janalis drew out a piece of dorsal fin,
Passed it to Kenainym:
"When you need my help,
Just stroke it lightly,
Whenever and wherever,
I will appear in front of you immediately."

Kenainym put these gifts in place,
Fared forth on his strong horse,
He went across hills and rivers,

Keeping pursuing forward.

By noon of the third day,
There appeared a tomb before his face.
Just like what the daughter of water god said,
He fell into scenes of strange phantasm.
It was unfolding in front of his eyes.

He urged Kankura slightly,
Came up to the tomb quickly.
Intended to walk into it,
He got off the saddle nimbly.

He stretched the hand to the habitacle,
It was out of his reach;
He put pieces of stones underfoot,
Its distance became farther;
With battleax he wanted to smash the copper lock,
At the moment,
The platform became higher.

At the time of sunset,
He remembered the words from the angel of water clans.
He mounted his steed Kankura,
The habitacle was reached.

From the box he took out the slip,
Stuck it on the habitacle,
The first door opened with no difficulty.
With Kankura he got into it,
Seeing treasure in every room.

The second door was before him,
In it flames were dazzling,
Human skeleton scattered on the ground,
Raging fire was burning.

He came close to the third door,
Stuck the slip on it as well,
The door opened slightly,
Just like waiting for his arrival.

There was a swing bed in the room,
On what lying a beautiful girl.
Seeing no movement on the bed,
He did not know her life or death.

Slightly with the slip he touched the girl,
Made her wake up from her dream.
She opened the moist eyes,
Speaking with smooth clear voice.

"The son of Kangkoer Kalakok[①],
You finally woke me up,
Do you know my gaunt heart,
Do you know my dangerous plight?

"Either you know me from others,
Or you break in here yourself?

"I had a dream last night,
Someone told me some words in it.
He said Kenainym will come the next day,
I should repeat my words to him,
Completely I have to remember this.

"I can not get out of the bed,
Keep no others can get close.
His words I will repeat,
You should move quickly,
Be sure to take action at once.

1 Kalakok: Kirgiz language, it means dogged fearless warrior.

"He said in the room behind you,
There are seven iron sticks.
Two white sticks are at both sides,
At the middle a gray one was.
Do not touch anything else,
Just take the gray stick,
Do not come to me first.

"There is a door before you,
You will see more things after you enter it,
A monster is sleeping in.
Who has the head of snake,
A black rock his lower body looks like.

"There is burning fire under its feet,
You should put the stick into it.
The human skeleton and firewood beside,
No matter how much that,
All put into the flame.

"Clearly remember,
After heated the stick will turn red first,
Then black,
Finally white.
At this moment,
Stab the monster's navel with it,
Use all your strength,
The stick is never to be slipped.

"The monster will open its eyes,
Roar with his loudest voice,
Gather its fellows.
However they are all afraid of the white stick,
No one dare to come close.

"At this time,
It will turn dark all round,

You can not see a thread of light,
There will be only stinking dense fog,
The whole world will be covered by it.

"Instead of eluding it,
You should stab its navel with your iron stick,
If you open your mouth and cover your noses,
You will also be burnt out by the stick.

"Then there will be strong wind,
Heavy rain will follow it.
You should disregard all this,
Nothing can harm a hair on your head.
The sky will become clear finally,
Sunlight will come to the earth.

"At that time,
The monster with snake heads,
Will talk to you.
You should never follow it,
Do not underrate it.

"You should cut its heads,
Eat its tongue.
Take its heart out to me,
And apply its blood to the swing bed,
After you do all that I can be rescued from pain.

"The roc is stuck now,
You should feed it the monster's lung,
The magic that traps it will expire only in this way,
Then the roc can get free.

"Sumargan will come then,
He will do magic to block you.
You must keep his feet away from the ground,
He will not submit you once he lands.

"I am the daughter of Qingersh Khan,
Qinekay is my name."
Qinekay finished all that in one breath,
In her sight Kenainym trotted away.

Kenainym entered the second door,
Took the iron stick away.

When he came to the tomb,
The sun was near setting,
However, when he looked out,
It looked like just afternoon.
As the result of the magic,
Every room changed a little bit.

He came from the room,
An odious smell filled his nostrils.
Remembering Qinekay's words,
He advanced in wide steps.

Before him he saw raging flames,
Beside that was human skeleton and firewood.
He put the iron stick into it.
And added the skeleton and firewood,
Making the fire hotter and larger.

Then he looked around,
There was the monster with snake heads.
Its feet were in the fire,
Its eyes were widely opened,
Without blinking,
Just like an old ox that freezes to death.

The lower part of its body was black rock,
It was as huge as a hill.
Kenainym took a second look,

Its navel looked like a hole,
The place occupied by its butt,
Was as huge as a sheepfold that could hold three hundred sheep,
Its body was fetid,
Even flies could not bear it.

Kenainym watched the iron stick,
It had turned white in the fire,
He took it out carefully,
At the monster's navel he stabbed fiercely.
Holding the stick with both hands,
He kept increasing the force on it,
The monster could not move for being nailed on the ground.

Its pain was unbearable,
With his mouth opened the monster was screaming.
No one dared to help it,
Like scorching sun the fire was burning.

Within moments the sky turned dark,
The ground was shrouded with dense fog.
The monster did not make a sound,
Until the fog dispersed:

"My name is Jurendo,
I am turning to a devil,
But you find me before I come through.

"If you are Kenainym sarik,
Please listen to me patiently:

"I have lived eight thousand years,
Innumerable heroes like you,
Lost their lives in my hands.

"I came to Changbai Mountain,
Crossed the sea,

Landed on an island,
And lived there,
I send messages out:
To receive some votaries as my apprentice.

"It was this act,
That led me a lot of troubles:

"I was too arrogant,
That I made Alemabash Gun,
It can invalidate my magic.
Then I forged a white dirk,
Only it can cut my head,
It can drain my blood,
Completely it can destroy my life.

"Apprentices came from all directions,
They were all offspring of khans.
There were six hundred children,
From Kakanqin only.
Most of them died before long,
Soon there were only sixty left,
However, at the end,
Only six left.

"There was a city in the west of Guandong,
It was called Beneyton,
Khan Sorandik lived in there.
Khan Sorandik's son was called Childe Su,
He was one of these sixty apprentices.

"I received a letter one day,
It said Khan Sorandik was badly ill.
I sent Childe Su back to visit his father,
He might get stuck without anything in his hand.

"I had a pair of white dirks then,

Without enough thinking,
I presented him one of them.
The dirk can endanger my life,
How could I present it to others easily.
I do be possessed by ghosts,
It was the most stupid thing,
But it was too late when I noticed it.

"A few years passed,
Karamark people became stronger and stronger,
Their force was approaching Khitan.
They compel Khitan to cede territory,
The supreme leader of Khitan Aisan Khan,
Ceded Tongxia to Karamark people,
That was the territory of Khan Sorandik.
From then Karamark people Kunwuerbayi,
Became the really leader of Khitan.

"The son of Sorandik came back to homeland,
He asked Aisan Khan to resume the land,
In ignoring Aisan Khan refused.
Childe Su fought with Kunwuerbayi himself,
Finally fled from Tongxia for lacking of soldiers.
He allied with Manas in Arashi,
Changed his name into Almanbet.

"Manas became a matchless hero,
He and Almanbet led a hundred thousand soldiers,
Captured the city of Begin aggressively.

"Everyday I was informed of many messages,
Conditions about all parts of the world were in my hands.
Because of the loss of my dangerous white dirk,
I dared not to go on a long journey,
I could only stay in the isolated island.

"I brought Qingersh from Kangayi.

Then made him stay in Aytubi,
In order to know more details about Almanbet.
I heard that Almanbet was dead,
So I lived here by myself relievedly.

"You are called Yellow-faced Death,
Aggressive your vigour is,
The white dirk around your waist,
That is the only weapon that can take my head,
In thrilling how can I stop staring at it.

"I have some secrets to tell you,
Stay here and be my apprentice.

"Do not eat my tongue,
It is deadly poisonous.
Do not eat my heart,
My blood is mixed with venom,
Only a drip of that can kill a person.

"Please do not kill me,
The gold and silver I can give you will cover the ground,
Please let me live,
I beg your mercy of setting me free."

With wailing Jurendo begged piteously,
Determined Kenainym had no mercy.
He knew it from Qinekay,
Jurendo was a heinous fiend.

He waved the white dirk,
Cleaving at Jurendo's head,
The movement was as quick as a flash.
Blood splashed the dirk,
Head separated from body,
At once the culprit's life came to an end.

Kenainym lifted the devil's head,
Cut the tongue and ate it.
Before he swallowed it into belly,
He had understood what birds and beasts talked,
At the same time,
He could tell the meaning of voice from flowers, trees, sands and rocks.

He took out Jurendo's heart quickly,
Made his blood flow out.
In no time he came back to Qinekay's room,
Painted the blood on the cradle,
Then Qinekay was rescued.

When Qinekay rose up and stood,
There was a sudden storm,
Floods flowed everywhere.
Followed a gust of wind,
Countless rocks which as huge as a small yurt,
From the air dropped to the ground.
The sky was dark at that time,
The earth was shrouded in darkness.

Kenainym took out Alemabash Gun,
At the air decidedly shot.
The fog started to disperse at that time,
Sumargan on a black horse,
Appeared in the sky with a hundred thousand giants.
Just like chestnuts,
Giants came down from the sky with great momentum,
Seeing this kind of scene,
Anyone would think about death.
Kenainym thought,
It was only Sumargan's trick,
Then held the Sire Spear from Manas,
Waiting for Sumargan's landfall.

At the moment Sumargan was landing,
Kenainym waved Sire Spear which can pierce the rock,
It aimed at Sumargan's bladder,
At once Sumargan breathed his last.
To every direction giants fled,
Pushed and shoved,
To hide themselves.

Kenainym took out Jurendo's lung.
"I have to save the roc,
But do not know where it is?"
Kenainym thought to himself,
With no result after finding,
He had no choice but to seek help for the angel of water god.

Janalis the angel of water god said:
"Look at the snowberg,
It is the magical roc,
The two icicles that meet the clouds,
These are the roc's wings.
You should distain the snowberg,
With the blood from Jurendo's heart,
Then the roc will get recovered."

Kenainym distained the snowberg with blood,
Suddenly the mountain quaked,
Snow and ice avalanched,
The huge roc appeared:
Its body was tremendous,
Looked like a high mountain.
The roc swallowed the lung and kidney,
Stretched its wings,
Flapped,
Got back to itself.

"Kenainym,
Thanks for your help,

I have been stuck in the snow,
For three thousand years,
If you do not come to rescue,
I will be the meat in the dish of Jurendo."

The roc ate the lung of Jurendo,
Immediately got recovered,
Pretty mighty it was.
The roc waved its wings to fly to the air!
Let us put this to one side,
And sing how Kenainym married Qinekay.

Kenainym Chased Qingersh and Married Qinekay

The roc landed back to the side of Kenainym and said:
"Come back quickly young hero,
Take all of them,
Anything of Jurendo you want,
I will send you back to Semtay.
I am six hundred years old,
I want to greet to Old Bakay."

Kenainym answered:
"Anything From him I do not want,
I would go back myself now,
It is no need to bother you."

The roc repeated:
"Kenainym,
Time flies,
You have separated from them for long time,
It is really far from Aytubi,
You can not even reach there in three months.

"You crossed the Black Sea,
Without being swallowed by it,
The magical shirt on your body,
Is it sent from Krichorao?

"Kenainym,
For long it was enshrined by Kakanqin,
From Jurendo Almanbet knew its magic.
When he fled from Begin,

He took it with him.

"When Almanbet led the expedition to Begin,
He left it up to Arukey,
Arukey treasured it all through,
Until Krichorao was born.
When Arukey left,
She gave it to Kanikai,
Finally it was passed to the hands of Krichorao.

"Krichorao know its background and secret,
So he let you wear it,
Do you know its occult power now?

"Within a moment,
I can send you to the place three months from here,
If I can not arrive in the time for a meal,
Since then my wings will rot away."

Kenainym asked:
"Look,
Kind-hearted big bird,
There are Kankura and Qinekay,
The three of us want to go back together,
How can I give trouble to you?"

The roc answered:
"Honored young hero,
You do underestimate my ability.
You thought you three are big and bulky,
Actually you are as light as my feathers.
Do not decline again,
I will carry you home safely.

"I will stretch my wings first,
You three stand on my back,
Then sit under my feathers idly."

Kenainym did not say more words,
They get on the roc's wings,
Just like walking on field.
The roc got up slightly,
It seemed that wings did not flap at all,
Kenainym was still waiting,
Suddenly he heard the bird's talk "here we are".

So great power God gave to the roc,
Several days trip,
It could arrive in a moment.

The roc greeted Bakay,
Then met other people friendly.
When it bowed farewell to Kenainym,
A feather was presented to him specially.
It said:
"Kenainym,
When you are helpless of the problems,
Please roast the feather in the fire,
Gently call my name at the same time,
Then I will fly to your side."

Seeing his daughter Qinekay,
Qingersh entreated:
"Kenainym,
You fulfilled your task,
But you let the roc go.
Where is the head of Jurendo?
How can you find it out?"

Kenainym threw Jurendo's head in front of him,
Qingersh did not find the tongue.
So he said again:

"Without the tongue the head is useless,
The one who eat the tongue will know all languages in the world,

The one who only eat the head will lose its life.

"Let me go home first,
With me Qinekay needs to go,
After we take two days off,
You can take her away."

Hearing the words of Qingersh,
Krichorao felt a little strange.
However, Semtay turned and said:
"Let them go,
Let Qinekay go with him."

He said to Qingersh again:
"You should keep your words,
Get back after two days."
With Qinekay,
In a hurry Qingersh left.

Two days passed in the blink,
Not the least trace of Qingersh was found,
There came a foreboding,
It haunted in Krichorao's mind.

Semtay called Aytumsh,
Asked him the condition of Qingersh,
Aytumsh answered:
"Qingersh has come home already.
His hometown was in some place near Texitow Mountain,
People live there are all in red robe,
And showing their breasts.
There was a red palace made of seventeen lays of copper walls,
That is the place their chieftain live in.

"Unwilling to go with him,
Determinedly Qinekay ever stood up to him.
He put the cuffs on Qinekay's wrists,

And used his magic:
He changed Qinekay into a bottle of water,
Then turned into a big bird himself,
With the wings flapped,
He flew his homeland.

"He advised me to assassinate you before he went,
Persuading me to put venom into your soup."
While I treat everyone the same,
Whithout the malevolence to poison anyone."

Semtay was in rage after the words:
"I will not get back to Talas,
Until I catch Qingersh."

In hurry Kenainym said:
"Let me go to Texitow Mountain,
Those people who are showing their chest in red robe,
I will find them.
I will catch Qingersh alive and put him in the net,
Then bring Qinekay to the city of Talas."

Old Bakay said then:
"Child,
Kenainym,
Use the present from the roc.
Call it to come here,
I have some words to tell it."

Kenainym took the feather in hand,
Slightly calling the name of the roc,
Immediately the roc was beside him.

Bakay talked to it:
"Big bird,
You are the amazing creation of God,
You are the most respected god bird Aripkara.

"The Lion whose name was Aykoler Manas,
Is known to all his devoutness.
Now you are here,
You are together with the offspring of Manas.

"Because of being framed by Jurendo,
You were imprisoned for years.
Today it is the blessing from God that we meet.
Qingersh is our common enemy,
With Qinekay he fled to his homeland,
The place where Texitow Mountain is.
He lied to us that he would got back after two days,
But he broke his words.
Now Kenainym is going to find his enemies.

"We have heard some situations there,
It is said there are seventeen layers of copper walls;
People there are all in red robes,
Showing chest,
Closely protecting the place.
Qingersh was brought up there first,
Then he went with Jurendo to do evils,
Now he came to our place.
How far is Texitow Mountain from here?
Do you know more about that place?"

Calmly the roc said:
"Distinguished Old Bakay,
In this world,
There is nothing I do not know.
Going to Texitow Mountain,
Travel by land,
It needs seven years,
If Kenainym and his steed,
Get on my back to go,
It takes only seven days.

"In different places people have different lifestyles,
Custom of people in there is quite different,
There are many kinds of people and things in the world.

"After Kenainym arrives there,
I will guard him from the sky,
Stay with him all the time.

"If Qingersh still wants to escape,
He will flee to the three islands around Qinmaqin.
There are all vipers on the islands,
More dangerous than Texitow Mountain.

"Qingersh will transform himself into different shapes,
To Kenainym it will lead a lot of troubles.
Damn Qingersh,
Let me catch him alive,
Then let Kenainym punish him for his crimes."

The roc finished its words,
Let Kenainym and Kankura get in his wings,
And flied up to the sky.

Without a break they flied,
Day and night,
Finally they arrived,
And landed on a daban.

Mounted on Kankura,
From the daban Kenainym overlooked the south.

Seeing many people were crawling,
He thought: they were all human,
Why they walked in this way?

He approached them,

Found that they were crawling by their limbs,
There were beads around their necks,
Which was made of thousands of pebbles,
The voice kept coming from their mouths:
"Burhan[1], Burhan..."
Step by step they crawled forward.

Kenainym asked one of them:
"Who are you?
What is this custom?
What are you doing?
Why are you all crawling?"

Kenainym did not get any answer,
Everyone was doing their own thing.

Someone beside him lifted up the voice:
"Ask me if you want,
I can answer your question.

"In the place two days from here,
There was a luxurious red palace.
Someone lives in it,
He is the chieftain with matchless wisdom.
There are also attendants in robes,
They all serve for the chieftain.

"In order to hear the voice of the chieftain,
From distance people come to worship him.
At the place three days from there,
People start to crawl on the ground.
If anyone dares to stand or walk,
Rigorously it would be punished by the chieftain.

"They come from the Kara Mountain of Kangayi,

1 Burhan: the God whom Karamark believed in.

To show devotion they cross hills and rivers.
You asked them on your feet,
How could they answer it.

"Do not make the chieftain angry,
Leave your horse right away,
You should not meet the chieftain like this.
Be careful of being beaten and insulted."

Kenainym answered:
"I will not crawl on the ground,
Neither do I know your chieftain,
My enemy fled to there,
To seize him I come here.

"If they are not willing to hand over my enemy,
I will crash the palace and kill them,
Including the chieftain they believe in."

Hearing Kenainym's words,
Suddenly the man took offence:

"You do not respect the chieftain,
You look down upon these attendants,
You are full of stupid talk,
Who are you? Where are you from?
There came a new attendant,
He is unparalled in the world,
Who are you? How dare you offend him.

"If you scorn the red wall,
You are scorning our chieftain.
There also is a big bird Kurikak[1],
If you bother it,
You will have a rough time.

1 Kurikak: A big bird of legend.

"If the chieftain hears your rave,
And knows your purpose,
He will bury you alive,
Even animals will not eat your meat.

"Your rave makes me sad,
Now I am going to meet my chieftain,
To complain about your arrogance.
To be responsible for my lord,
To wash away my sin,
To get his forgiveness and reward,
And pay a visit to the new attendant as well."

The man turned around after finished,
Got on a yak's back,
With delight,
Hastily,
As if he was going to get reward.

Formerly Qingersh lived in the east,
Where he felt disappointed,
He turned into a blue pigeon,
Flied to the west to seek a livelihood.

Although he lived in the west,
He would back to hometown every three years.
Frequently traveled between two places,
He was familiar with the surroundings.

He could command the chieftain,
All People there were familiar with him.
With that bottle of water,
Qingersh came to the red palace in sudden,
Anyone who saw him thought he was abnormal.

Qingersh was about to approach,

No one dared to look squarely at his face,
To welcome they surrounded him.
People said to themselves:
"It is not the time he comes,
There must be something for being earlier."

Qingersh said:
"I come here to seek asylum,
From the place I was attacked by Kenainym.

"From my hand,
They took out the castle built by Jurendo,
In the west seven giants fought against him,
No one was left alive.

"It was not enough,
Jurendo was killed and been eaten the tongue by Kenainym,
What makes him stronger now.
From humans to insects,
From trees to flowers,
From mountains to sands,
He can understand all languages.
It used to be Jurendo's skill,
After he ate Jurendo's tongue,
He obtained the unmatched power.

"I am really nervous,
Whether he will catch me?
If he does not know my whereabout,
He might go the wrong way,
And get lost;
If he knows I am here,
In two days he will come.

"The roc has become his best friend,
If he gets my hiding places from it,
He will come here directly.

"Once he comes here,
Our world would become smaller.
Should not wait for death helplessly,
We had to do some prepare.

"If he comes to kill at this place,
Blood will saturate the earth.
Will he take away Kurikak,
Or will he destroy the red palace?

"I applied magic,
Changed Qinekay into a bottle of water,
Will he find it?

"Should I go to Indicney,
The home to snakes,
Let them help me?

"I really have no idea,
My mind is empty,
I am always fleeing,
Without a moment of rest,
My eyes were too fatigued to open."

Hearing Qingersh's words,
Beside him the chieftain,
And these attendants,
Answered in one voice:

"Think it over Qingersh,
Is what you just said really important?
You were born here,
Your old name is Kate,
Jurendo came here that very year,
And named you Qingersh,
Then brought you to his residence.

"You grew up here,
Here is your powerful backing.
If Kenainym comes,
We will negotiate with him,
Sound him out first.

"It does not matter if he is disoperative,
We will bury him alive,
And pee on him.

"Look at the red copper palace with seventeen layers walls,
That is the castle built by yourself,
For you there is a throne prepared by Jurendo.

"You are our khan here,
Do you have any regret?
Is there anything we can make it?

"Enough soldiers we have,
Kenainym is all by himself,
how can we lose to him?

"Everyone of us here,
Will never pass you to the enemy,
We will fight to the bitter end,
Bring his life to an end.

"How could he take Kurikak away?
How could he recoganize the bottle of water?
How could he know it is Qinekay?"

When they were haranguing,
A messenger on a yak came to the palace.
Around the gate a guard enquired him,
He jumped down the yak,
Went down on his knees,

In tears,
Complained sadly:

"My leader sent me to prob the pilgrim,
To see who dares to rebel chieftain.
I saw them all in the direction of chieftain,
Kowtowed and prayed,
Crawling with bowed head.

"Then someone came,
On a large gray horse.
He asked me after dismounting from the steed,
And roundly cursed the chieftain.
His disobedience,
Totally surprised me.
Having no time to deal with those worshipers,
Immediately I come here to report,
Please transmit it."

The guard transmitted it to attendants,
All people including Qingersh,
Fell in fear at once.
They knew it was Kenainym,
Then sent six attendants to greet him.

They wanted to inveigle Kenainym,
To lead him into the trap.
In red robes,
Wearing stone beads,
They met the attack just like prepared for wrestle.
Rolled up their sleeves,
Fastened their belts,
Meditated "Burhan, Burhan..."
Walked to him sometimes on feet sometimes on knees.

Seeing Kenainym,
They were lying on the ground without an action,

Greeted him for showing respect.

Kenainym thought:
"I should follow them first,
Stay calm and collected,
Raise my claim after entering the palace,
Ask them to hand over Qingersh.
If they disobey,
I will kill them out.

"I should go with them in obedience,
Gain their trust at first,
After I find out all details,
I will trim the sails,
Defeat these enemies."

Kenainym was extraordinary,
He had prepared solutions in his mind.
He pretended knowing nothing,
Followed these attendants,
Observed closely when walking.

Those attendants thought:
"This idiot,
So foolish,
He still does not know our trick."
They laughed at him in their hearts.

Qingersh had already made a plan,
He disappeared after settling down.
Led by six attendants,
Kenainym came to a place,
Where surrounded by high walls,
Which were totally made of stones.
An attendant asked:
"Why do you come here?
Now tell us the truth."

Kenainym answered with his head erected:
"Let me tell you the truth,
Kenainym is my name!
In the place Aytubi,
Lived an evil cannibal,
I heard that he fled to here,
I am going to catch him!

"Hand over Qingersh now,
Let me take away Qinekay,
Give me the bird Kurikak as well.

"What do you mean that Qinekay is not here?
In this way how can I go back?
If you can not accept my requirments,
Send your warriors,
And duel with me here!"

After Kenainym's words,
Qingersh gave an order behind the scenes.
They threw stones by mangonels,
And increased many soldiers,
They charged Kenainym like floods.

Those damned men,
How could they match with Kenainym,
They would lose their lives in vain.

Brave Kenainym,
On the back of Kankura,
Showing the presence of dignity.
They shot Kenainym again,
Kenainym can not bear for any time,
In violent rage,
Holding the spear,
Overwhelmingly,

He charged the enemy.

He waved the spear left and right,
Killed forty or fifty people with just a hit.
Like mowing.
He sent those people in red robes to the heaven,
Stained the whole castle with blood.

According to the chieftain's orders,
Seventy thousand soldiers walked away from the palace,
Two warriors with iron chain around their body,
Led by two thousand soldiers.

Just like two wild dogs,
Two warriors grinded their teeth,
Barked without a cease.
Their hands were digging,
Their shout sounded like rutting bulls.
The shouting made rocks rolling,
The air was filled with dust.

Soldiers pointed at Kenainym,
Released the two warriors from the crowd,
The two men were homicidal with angry eyes,
To Kenainym they swooped down.

Qingersh was satisfied with the action,
Firmly he sat aside,
Jaunty and happy,
He wanted to see kenainym die in front of him.

The two men who were charging,
One held an iron hammer,
The other waved an iron stick.
The one with the hammer,
Smashed three mountains in passing;
The one with the stick,

Looked strong and fierce.

The iron stick,
Had twelve angles,
About four or five feet.
Totally the man pierced it into the earth,
Then pulled it out,
With a loud shout,
He was extremely arrogant.

Seeing these two guys' might,
Soldiers all filled with delight,
"Do people who encounter them,
Really have chance to escape?"
Behind the two guys,
Followed fifty wolf dogs,
Each of them was sabre-rattling,
One was more furious than another.

Soldiers in red robes thought:
"Kenainym was waiting for his death,
Here he is certain to lose his life."

Kenainym was in no hurry,
When the two guys was approaching,
Kenainym stretched his hands,
Just like seizing a five-year-old child,
He seized the two guys in his hands.

He got the two guys by the neck,
Iron hammer and iron stick were fallen;
Kenainym bumped the two guys,
Let their head impact hard.
The blood flowed from their noses,
Their brains were out of the head.
Kenainym threw their bodies to the ground,
Fifty rabid dogs were battling for them.

At this time just like a gust of wind,
Seventy thousand soldiers surged forward.

Kenainym looked around,
There was a plane tree in short distance,
The tree higher than an iron tower,
Had no smell of urine,
It was the tree god worshiped by people in red robes.

Kenainym pulled out the plane tree,
Waved it from side to side,
Swept away all enemy troops.
Their adoring leaders suffered misfortune,
By Kenainym his life was taken.
However people in red robes became more stubborn,
No one was afraid of death or fled,
They put up a strong resistance,
Summoned up all their courage.
Everyone was follow by a wild dog,
Howling with their owner.

The wall was surrounded by blood,
Kenainym rushed out.
He charged to the red wall,
Kankura ran faster and faster.
Soldiers who wanted to catch Kenainym,
Do not dare to approach him,
Instead, they all dodged him to two sides.

In the seventeen lays of walls,
In the castle,
Attendants in red robes filled the place,
Qingersh also hid in it.

Other people guarded the outside of the wall,
Layer by layer totally thirty layers.
It was extremely tight,

No one could rush into it.

Kenainym picked the iron hammer,
Fastened the belt on Kankura's stomach.
There was an iron coat armor taken from Akem,
In the fight against Haribek,
It had been thrown for being broken,
Already he lost it.
Now he was in the coat armor of Haribek,
The one could only keep out rain and wind.

He urged Kankura Steed,
Shouting the name of Manas,
Valiantly he charged into his enemy.

These obstinate people,
Did not dodge,
Neither felt scary,
Kenainym could only fight more mercilessly.

In front of the red wall,
He was filled with wrath,
His eyes emitted sparks,
His hand waved the iron hammer,
He thumped it hard,
The red wall shook time after time,
Seemed to crash in no time.

Seeing this kind of scene,
Qingersh was shuddering in fear:
"If he hit a few more times,
Yellow-faced Death, the offspring of Manas,
Will destroy the red wall.
If the red wall were destroyed,
It world spread to the world,
My infamy will be known by all.
I would better leave here,

To preserve the red wall."

He gestured,
To make people scattered,
Then he turned into a blue eagle,
Carrying the bottle of water which was turned from Qinekay,
Fled to the land of nowhere,
Even the bird Kurikak was left.

Before Qingersh left he drove others to the hell,
Made all people here disappear in a sudden.
When Kenainym's next hit fell,
There was only an empty city wall.

Kenainym left Kankura Steed,
Walked into the wall to seek,
There were only gold statues,
He found no living person.

"Where is the bird Kurikak?
The bottle of water turned from Qinekay,
Is it still hiding here?
Where did Qingersh flee to?
Where should I go to catch him?"

Kenainym was really worried:
"My folk are waiting for me,
I would better ask the angel of water clans,
Which place Qingersh fled to?"

Thought about that,
Kenainym took out the dorsal fin and stroked it lightly.
Suddenly,
The door of the red palace was open,
Beautiful Janalis appeared.
She reported to Kenainym carefully:
"Qingersh with Qinekay,

On his way fleeing to the sky,
Has been caught by the roc.

"Qingersh lied at first,
He said we got the wrong man,
He kept lying,
Until we found the bottle of water that was turned from Qinekay.
The bird Kurikak was trapped in hell,
We have to save it from the portal of dark."

Before the angel of water clans finished the words,
The roc has come.
He was already controlled by Qingersh,
And put him into the net from Krichorao again.

Once the net was touched,
Forcibly it would shrink,
In terrible pain Qingersh gave a cry:
"I am Qingersh,
Let me get out!"
He repeated it ruefully.

Kenainym took it,
The bottle of water that was turned from Qinekay,
By force he threatened Qingersh,
Made Qinekay change back to what she really is.
The bird Kurikak was rescued from hell as well.
Survivals in red robes and showing the chest did not know,
By the net Qingersh had been caught.
The roc carried those people:
Kenainym, Qinekay, Kankura,
Angel of the water clans and the bird Kurikak,
Brought all of them to Bakay.

In public they burnt Qingersh to death,
Made Aytumsh back to the throne,
They helped the people there,

Let them live a peaceful life again.

The people said:
"Our people was Kirgiz-Arashi,
Our hometown was Kankole-Talas."
Semtay said to the roc:
"Dear friends,
The roc and the angel of water clans,
You can go back to your homeland,
My roc,
Please adopt the bird Kurikak,
Let us get back to our peaceful life."

Semtay,
Bakay,
Alemsarik,
Kenainym,
And herculean Salamart,
With triumph,
They brought Qinekay to their home Kirgiz.

Crossed mountains and river,
Defeated numerous enemies,
That is proud Kirgiz people.
Finally they came to Talas,
After a long separation they met their family.

Led by Seytek folks shook hands with each other,
Women kissed each other's hand.
People of Kirgiz came from all directions,
To pay respects to them,
To greet them.
After four or five days,
For Kenainym and Qinekay,
They held a grand wedding.
Old people took leave to each other after that,
Then came back to their home.

Kirgiz people's life was calm,
Peaceful,
Happy.

Let us put this to one side,
And sing Kanikay, Semtay and other three heroes,
About how they went back to heaven magically.

Semtay and Other Four Heroes Passed Away

Bowed to fate,
No one could predict the future.
Young hero Alemsarik,
Got badly hurt in the fight against Haribek,
He lay in bed all day,
Could not get out of bed totally.
They sent someone with double steeds,
To invite Momintjan[1] at top speed.

After overhaul Momintjan told the family:
"His injury,
Could not be cured,
There was venom on the sword that hurt him.
The venom can decay human's skin and flesh,
It has spread to all his body,
Four hundred and forty-four of his joints were hurt,
Three hundred and sixty-six vessels were injured,
His blood was drained,
His vessels rotted.

Momintjan had excellent medical skills,
But he was not almighty.
Grievous news came after several days,
Twenty-one-year-old Alemsarik,
Lost his life sorrowfully.

1 Momintjan: A famous folk doctor, at an advanced age, he cured Krichorao's shoulder blade.

The son of Manas Semtay,
Became thinner day by day.
His face was sallow,
And his eyes dull.

Folks asked Momintjan for advice,
Momintjan answered readily:
"It could be cured,
However, it needs time,
Forty-five days it will take to give meticulous treatment.
But to treat him there is something I need,
Where could we find that?"

He said then:
"During the day,
Bag of tiger skin is needed,
Pour the milk of wild horse into it,
Then put the patient into it to take shower.

"Mutton of red sheep should be taken as food,
Kumiss with honey is necessary,
Remember to put a spoonful of bear gall,
The temperature must be appropriate when he drinks it.

"If all things we need can be well prepared,
No doubt he will get better.
He is honorable,
We should jump into action for his health.

"When they were stuck in Shaytan Lake,
It was he who looked after the Old Bakay,
He gave the old man his coat armor.
It was dampproof and warm,
So that old man was safe and sound."

Momintjan's words were surprising,
No one heard of that before,

They did not know what to do.

Semtay's daughter-in-law Kuyale said:
"As long as I am alive,
If my father need it,
Every day I will go to hunt tigers."

Krichorao said:
"I am going to find the milk of wild horse."
Kenainym continued:
"As long as my grandfather needs it,
I do not mind fatigue Kankura my steed,
I can deliver all things day in and day out."

Red sheep were in the livestock of Kirgiz,
Hunters always kept the gall of bears,
It was the custom of their ancients,
Momintjan said both stale and fresh gall was effective.

It was the season that wild horses produce milk.
Effortlessly Krichorao finished his work.
Riding on the steed Gray Hare,
He drove the wild house to the cliff,
Made Gray Hare guard outside,
He juiced the horse and fastened the bag.

Kenainym went to help his mother Kuyale,
Packed living tigers on the saddle,
He delivered prey every day,
Without a stop for forty-five days.

During the day Semtay was soaked the mare's milk,
Which turned into black in the evening,
Even tiger skin could not withstand the erosion of the black milk,
Leather bags were almost eroded.

Forty-five days passed,

Semtay got recovered.
After a few days,
They slaughtered many animals,
Made the round of anywhere horse can reach,
Summoned all tribes of Kirgiz,
Gathered all of them in a rich pasture in Kankole.

Kazakhs came in groups,
Uzbeks, Tajik,
Badak Mountain and Balik,
Buhara, Samarkand,
Tashkent and Kokand,
People of there all came together,
It was really bustling.

Khorasan, Afghan,
Lahm, Keyba, Shankay,
And remote Yulkenichy,
Every tribes were here.
Khotan, Yarkant, Kashgar,
Lop Nur, Barkol, Turpan,
Kirgiz people of there all arrived.

There was somewhere else,
Please listen to me,
The tribe Sayikali belonged to,
Was living in Aziq and Arele,
With no one left they all came here.
Atebash, Naryn, Chumgale,
Katmandob, Namangan, and Aush,
Kotmaled, Tokmak, Kaimin.
From all of these places,
Kirgiz people were gathering.

Host treated his guests lavishly,
During the two days staying in there,
Guests ate slices of fat meat,

Drank fresh mare's milk.

Semtay on the horseback,
Accompanied by Khan Bakay, Krichorao,
Kanikai and Ayichulek,
Came together to all guests.
Seeing their behavior,
Kirgiz all felt very strange.

At this time,
Hero Semtay,
Said his heartfelt words:
"Dear folk,
Kirgiz people in white felt caps,
All tribes in Arashi,
To tell you I have some words.

"Tajik, Uzbeks,
We all share woe and happiness,
We are all in the same box,
Our friendship is higher than mountains.
The five of us before your face,
It is our time to back,
You, We will take a leave of.

"You should unite as one,
Only unity is strength,
Then life can be happy,
Rich can be long.

"If enemies invade,
Want to plunder livestock,
To occupy our treasure,
Here is Seytek to defense.
If it needs to start an expedition,
There is Kenainym on his steed.

"We have been allowed by god,
It is time to seclude.
All my folk,
Take care of yourself.

"Remember:
Do not internally conflict.
Karamark and khitan,
and tribes in Kangayi,
they are all threatening you."

After these words,
Semtay with his uncle and mother,
Accompanied by his wife and younger brother,
In the sun left his Kirgiz folk,
Faded away,
Disappeared.

All present people were crying:
"Only death can separate people forever,
Disappearing alive,
It is too strange,
It is not real,
It can only happen in dream."

All people fixed their gaze,
Turned to search something around the tomb of Manas,
They were crowded,
But found nothing.

Kirgiz people burst into a rage of tears:
"Merciless world,
How could you allow our hero leave alive!"

Kenainym Fought With the Khan of Karamark Qiktay

Khan Qiktay Invaded Kirgiz With Allied Forces

Day after day,
Year after year,
No one knew how long it took.
In broad Talas,
Malaria broke out.
Both young and old,
Difficult to cure once got infected.
The homeland of Kirgiz,
Enveloped in grave disaster.

In misfortune hero Seytek was dead,
Bitterly people hold the funeral.
Faced with the irony of fate,
People had no choice but to obey.
Father died,
Children became orphans,
Children died,
Parents were sadder,
Damned merciless world,
By illness people of Talas were tortured,
Struggling in bitterness,
They were filled with sadness.

Semtay and other four people were disappeared,
Of an illness Seytek also died,
People of Kangayi got the news,
They were brewing up an attack.

They discussed:

"Since we met Manas,
We never gained any profit,
It is the opportunity to rob Brute,
We will kill all of them,
Seize the territory of Samarkand."

Among the chieftain of tribes in Kangayi,
Qiktay of Karamark was their head,
Sotolle, Doryte and Tetke always followed him.
Four chieftains got together,
Plotted their dirty tricks.
They never surrendered to khitan,
In the fight between Qinmaqin and them,
They had never been defeated.
Bakburqin led his troops,
Fought with them several times,
But ended with failure each time.
The north of khitan,
Occupied by the leader of Karamark,
No one could overcome him.

The four of them never had been to Talas,
They also never heard of Kenainym.
They were so arrogant,
As to want to invade Brute.
"Hurry, hurry" they shouted to each other,
Led their army to the battlefield.

They had sixty thousand soldiers,
Ammo and provisions were packed by camels,
The dust was blowing,
They started the expedition,
Up hill and down dale,
In great vigour.

They came to a daban in Altay,
Got stuck by warriors of Kazakh,

And defeated them in the end.
They murdered and robbed in mad,
People of Kazakh were almost exterminated.
Only few people in remote,
Escaped by sheer luck.

They threatened Kazakh,
Drove them to the place near Ili.
"You must get away from Arashi,
We should make progress together,
In Talas Manas is our target,
We will start an attack,
And glut our revenge."

In Ili people heard the news of invading,
Then they passed it to Kirgiz.
Kirgiz and Kazakh,
United with people in Ili,
They also sent messengers to get through Kaimin,
And informed Kenainym the emergency.

Grievous news was known by all Kirgiz,
Everyone felt ill at ease:
When disease was spreading,
Enemies also came to invade.
Decisively Kenainym came to a decision:
In order to protect the tribe of Arashi,
He would meet the enemy alone.
Kenainym mounted the steed Kankura,
Set out himself.

Departed from Talas and Kirgiz,
All the way he had no cease,
Hoofs were tramping.
He came to the hill of Elibin,
And surveyed the trace of invader.

With lashes Qiktay drove his soldiers,
Shouted "hurry, hurry!"
He was in a tassel hat,
On which gemstones were inlaid.
Around the waist he wore a long belt,
A pair of thick cotton boots were on his feet.
In arrogance,
He dared to fight.
And managed the people of the land.
On the throne of khan,
He claimed Koktukat as their capital,
And reigned over the place.

He went to the Yellow Sea in winter,
And came back to the prairie in summer.
He made kumiss from mare milk,
And took great pleasure in it,
He was always in drunkenness.
Sometime when he felt lonely,
He would went out for joy.

There was a peninsula at the east of Changbai Mountains,
People lived a good life there.
Qiktay always seized their property,
What made them in fear and trembling.

When he was angry,
He would went to Guandong in the northeast,
To invade the people of Kakanqin,
It made their family broken up,
Their lives were hard to continue.

From the Black Rock of Xinxingxia in the southwest,
To Kangayi and Ice Sea in the north,
Extensive grassland and mountains,
By him all forcedly occupied.
He was arrogant and autocratic,

He levied exorbitant taxes and levid on people,
Had no respect for civilian,
Knew only pleasure,
And doing evil.

Qiktay's troops fought along the way,
Arrived in the broad prairie in Elibin.
Kenainym came to meet the attack,
A gold-rimmed banner of Manas,
By him was stuck on a hathpace.

Seeing the banner,
Qiktay's face turned gray:
"Is that man a lunatic,
How dare he stick the banner alone?

"Who is he,
Where is he from?
Send someone to scout,
Can it be Arashi people dare not to resist,
And show their surrender to me in this way?"

He said he would send some scout,
But no one responded.
He had no choice but to order a kazakh,
And a karamark,
To do the scout.

Faced with Kenainym,
The kazakh between the two,
Reported the intention of Qiktay:

"The crowed soldiers,
Are commanded by Qiktay,
The three men followed him,
Sotolle, Doryte and Tetke,
They are all well-known heroes.

"Faced with the team of four of them,
No one could compete with?
Kakanqin and Qinmaqin had been against them,
Finally they retreated in defeat.

"Qiktay also said,
'Semtay who protect all Arashi,
Maintaining the safety of Kirgiz;
Seytek who protect sixty tribes,
Maintaining the safety of Arashi.
One was disappeared in the scene,
The other was already dead.

"'I would revenge myself on Kirgiz,
My troops were weak once,
Now I have strong soldiers and sturdy horses,
It is a good opportunity to send troops to revenge.'
He sends me here to scout,
Who is the one stuck the banner?
He asked whether you are meeting the attack,
Or representing Kirgiz,
To show your obedience?"

After these words,
Kenainym was filled with furious anger.
He asked the karamark to stand,
Said to the Kazakh:
"Semtay was disappeared in the scene,
Hero Seytek was already dead,
Could it be that in Arashi there is no successor?

"Sacrilegious Karamark people,
Do they dare to invade Kirgiz?
Strong enemy come to plunder Talas,
I, Yellow-faced Death Kenainym,
How can I stand aside?

"The king of Kakanqin Aisan Khan,
The khan of Karamark Kunwuerbayi,
To the Khan Aykoler Manas,
They swore,
They would never invade again,
Nor stir up any trouble.

"After Aykoler Manas died,
The arrogant Kunwuerbayi broke his promise,
Having the audacity to invade Talas.

"He was defeated and fled,
Nieskara,
Muladle,
And Aureker lost their lives.
They signed another treaty that year,
Peace remained for another six years.

"Once again Kunwuerbayi played tricks,
He invaded Arashi with his troops,
This time he paid a heavy price,
He lost the life himself under Krichorao's lance.

"Karamark inveigled Kazakh,
Made them move to Kurpplerdok,
Against Karamark Semtay fought to the bitter end,
Let kazakh can come to their homeland.

"From that time,
Karamark did not dare to make trouble.

"Who is he to say Seytek was already dead,
Who is he to say who is making trouble here,
Stupid Qiktay,
Does not he know my name Kenainym!

"There were seven giants in the west,

Red-faced giant Kezriarip,
Haribek and someone else,
I cleared away all them;
Jurendo who lived more than eight thousand years,
Was killed by my own hand.

"In the red palace which has seventeen layers of walls,
Surrounded by seventy thousand of half-naked soldiers in red robes,
The insufferably arrogant Qingersh,
Was defeated by myself,
I even rescued god bird Kurikak as well!

"Karamark people,
Go back and tell Qiktay,
I am not his servant to slaughter livestock,
I will not be his defeated opponent,
I also will never be his obedient slave.

"Tell Qiktay not to court death,
Let him keep my name in mind,
Kenainym in Arashi,
Unrivalled well-known Yellow-faced Death.

"My father is Seytek,
Is there anyone not knowing his name?
My mother is Kuyale,
The world-renowned peri.

"Over-confident Qiktay,
I never owe him anything.
Did not open his girdle,
Did not steal his silver;
Did not scythe his wheat,
Did not loot his horse,
Did not insult his dignity,
Nor did I invade his troops.
Why he lead his soldiers,

Invade us Kirgiz?

"Tell him not to act rashly,
Tell him to think before action,
If he dares to be against me,
I will kill him immediately!
If he goes back honestly,
I will forgive him with no chase."

Kenainym continued:
"Kazakh,
Do not go back again.
Once you return there,
They will torture you into the disabled."

Frightened Kazakh person was in a dilemma,
Leaving,
Or staying.
He thought to himself:
"They have sixty thousand soldiers,
And four Herculeses;
Kenainym is alone,
But extremely brave,
With heroic momentum.

"If I return to Karamark,
Gods will punish me;
If I stay here,
How terrible the consequence will be,
Once I fall into their hands!"

After a long while,
Kazakh person thought he had better return.
Regardless of punishment from gods,
He turned around to the homeward journey.
Kenainym did not stop him,
Thinking he would know the consequence.

Karamark person ran back to the camp,
His clothes waved in the wind.
He told the leader,
All the words of Kenainym.

Then Kazakh person arrived,
Pleasing them with a smiling face:
"I do not defect to Kirgiz,
And still think you are better."

Qiktay got angry suddenly:
"Is Kenainym so powerful?
Let me see his ability.
I will punish Kazakh people severely,
Can he rescue the people from my hands?"

There were fifty Kazakh people as guides in his camp,
Qiktay gathered them together.
He issued an order to his men:
"Smash their skin,
Lash their bones hard!
Kenainym says he is a hero,
How powerful skill does he have,
To rescue them?"

Qiktay tied Kazakh people together,
Held them down,
Two attendants against one Kazakh man,
Letting the attendants keep lashing,
The flesh of Kazakh men were battered,
The secen was extremely brutal.

At this time,
Kenainym shouted the slogan of Manas,
Rushing over with saying:
"Karamarks who ought to enter your fathers' graves,

You are unhuman,
Never kill captives,
It is the convention from ancient times.
No one commits murder like you,
I can never forgive you scoundrels!"

When he rushed to fight,
The people with sticks in their hands escaped everywhere,
He seized seven people,
Asking them to untie Kazakh people.

Tetke came to stop him:
"Fearless stranger,
How dare you resist the order of khan?
Hurry to state your name."

Kenainym said to him:
"My father's name is Seytek,
My name is Kenainym,
You should remember them from now on.
Where are you from?
Say your name."

Tetke continued:
"I am a hero of Kangayi,
Tetke is my name.
People dare to compete with me,
Never go back alive.

"You howl right here,
I sentence you to death today.
These Kazakh people,
I can hand them to you first.
If you really have abilities,
Fight against me alone!"

Fifty Kazakh people were rescued,

They got to the opposite side together.
Below the battle flag of Kenainym,
They sat down to rest and watch.
Hero of Kangayi, Tetke,
Held spear,
In rage.
He wore double-layer armor coat,
Risking his life,
Urging horse on.

Hero Kenainym,
Stayed calm to fight.
He blocked the spear from the opponent,
Fighting back bravely.

Agile Tetke,
Never let Kenainym succeed.
They fought and struggled,
Tireless horses under them galloped like wind.

Both sides tried every means,
But could not stab the opponents,
Buttocks of both sides stayed on saddles,
Weapons lost their effects.

Both sides threw down weapons,
Grabbed each other's wrist,
With the power of steed,
Pulled each other hard.

The two men collided like rams,
Both were battered badly,
Palms peeled,
Lips ruptured,
Hands interlaced,
The scene got mightier.

Sunset and sunrise,
After two days,
They had a close battle,
Still fighting hard,
No one looked a little tired.

Descendant of Manas, Kenainym,
His yellow face suddenly turned wane.
He lifted Tetke from the horseback,
Pulled towards the saddle of Kankura.

Soldiers of Kangayi saw the scene,
Rushing towards,
Like wild bees.

Kenainym raised the arm to throw him away,
And gave him a kick,
Heart of Tetke spewed from his mouth,
Falling a shoot range away.

Among the twelve thousand soldiers of Tetke,
Those daring to resist were killed or driven by Kenainym.
Qiktay, Doryte and Sotolle,
None sent troops to support them.

Steeds of enemies fled everywhere,
All were stopped by Kazakh people under battle flag,
Horses with complete saddleries,
Fell into the hands of Kazakh people.

Hungry Kazakh people killed fat horses,
Their stomachs were all filled,
They admired Kenainym,
As a fierce hero in the present world.

Khan Qiktay issued another order,
Asking Sotolle charge,

Fighting a decisive battle with Kenainym.

Sotolle was an invincible hero as well,
Soldiers dared not to look directly at him.
His beard would erect in anger,
His clothes would wave in the wind.

Cold wind whistled on his face,
His beard stuck together like frozen.
His eyes sprayed fire,
His mouth spat smoke,
His spear came with sound,
None of the people against him survived.

His body was as strong as a hill,
His eyes were like a pair of holes,
He had a bull-like neck,
And a pair of boar-like ears.

The upper body was huge and wide,
And lower body small and short,
He had an appearance of mighty giant.
He wore iron helmet,
Rode black gray battle horse,
His horse ran like flying,
Swishing against the wind.

Sotolle rushed over on horse at this time,
He gritted his teeth in rage.
Kenainym also urged Kankura,
Holding spear to fight calmly.

Sotolle thought:
"If I want to strike him down,
I must find his fatal flaw."

He looked Kenainym up and down:

"He is stronger than Haribek,
It is really remarkable.
He could not be beaten easily,
It is difficult to conquer him."

Sotolle rushed towards him without a word,
Nor did he announce his name,
He waved his spear to stab,
It was blocked by Kenainym.

Directly Kenainym hit back,
Shouting the name of Manas.
He bypassed the parry of Sotolle,
Stabbed his waist with the spear.
Unexpectedly Sotolle did not feel it,
He stayed there without moving a hair.
My God,
Did not let people see the following scene.
Kenainym overexerted,
His spear was broken.

The boar that just got a stab,
Renewed his spirit,
He waved the crooked handle hammer,
Smashed to Kenainym whom just turned.

Kenainym dodged it sideways,
Like a hawkbill he gripped the wrist of his enemy,
After a sound of "cling-clang",
The hammer fell to the ground.

The two heroes engaged in fierce battle,
They had disregarded their lives.
Sotolle lifted his battleax again,
Once more they fell in a desperate struggle.

The grip of battleax was broken,

The head of spear was damaged,
The sword lost its blade,
The merciless fight was continued.

They did not stop for a moment during the day,
Nor did they have a break at night.
In danger they fought mercilessly,
Their lives were on the line.

Without weapons,
They seized each other's collar,
Pulled and dragged,
No one could get ahead;
Then they wrestled,
Still were well-matched.

After midday,
Sotolle refreshed his energy,
He looked for the chance to win continually.
He fastened his belt,
Again and again he tried to hold Kenainym's waist,
Wanted to crumb his kidneys.

Kenainym refused to admit being inferior,
With cautious mind and sharp eyes,
Valiantly he fought back.
When his foe pounced on,
He bended at once,
Aiming at his enemy's crotch,
He smashed with his knee.

With the right foot he kicked his foe's bladder,
Damn Sotolle can not withstand a single blow,
Tumbled on the ground.

Kenainym straightened his waist,
Gave no chance to his foe to breathe,

Aiming at Sotolle's rib,
Kicked again.
Sotolle's rib was broken,
His urine in bladder spouted out.
Arrogant Sotolle,
Lost his life,
Breathed his last.

Proud Qiktay khan,
Felt alone and unprotected.
Faced with the dangerous situation,
He called up Doryte:

"We always share weal and woe,
Like a blazing fire once the four of us were,
No one dared to invade us.
Around Changbai Mountain we wandered,
We lived a carefree life,
In the broad world.

"Jafan in short clothes,
Who lived in an island,
We have blocked their trade caravan,
Looted their property and cargo.

"We have intruded Kakanqin,
Plundered their gold and assets;
We have pressed Qiney,
Let them send tea and chinaware as tribute.

"When we were angry,
We attacked Qinmaqin and Kakanqin,
We grabbed flocks of camels,
Made them pack silk and tea,
To the direction of sunset,
Making money in business.

"We had nothing to fear there,
We looted and stored property everywhere,
We threatened other people at will,
Always we made trouble.

"We thought Semtay had disappeared in the scene,
Seytek was already dead.
We decided to march on Kirgiz,
Let the sixty tribes in Arashi,
Suffer the trials of life.

"We also wanted to occupy Samarkand, Tashkent, Namangan,
All six cities and Andijan,
To make up lost ground,
Then took over them for long.

"Damn Kenainym,
We never heard about him.
We did not expect,
He would appear here——
Fighting against us in Ili.

"Tetke and Sotolle,
Tall and strong,
They were heroes dominating a locality.
They were patron of people in Kangayi,
Now unexpectedly died in the hand of Kenainym.

"By luck the two of us are still alive,
It seems doom is before our face.
If we fight alone,
You and me will lost our lives both;
If we escape,
Certainly Kenainym will chase us.

"We should interact with each other,
Attack from all sides,

Rush forward,
And throw nets to Kenainym.

"If we make him fall into the snare,
And kill him,
There will be none of Kirgiz people,
Having the ability to resist us."

Doryte nodded,
He agreed the idea of Khan Qiktay.
Khan Qiktay waved the whip,
Both teams rushed forward.

Descendant of Aykoler, Kenainym,
He was brave and invincible,
On the back of Kankura Steed,
Looking as imposing as Oboler Mountain.

The spear seized from Sotolle,
He grasped it,
Staying calm,
With inaction.

When the enemy approached,
He whipped horse to fight.
He shouted the slogan of Manas,
With towering heroism.

Horse Kankura under him,
Ran with bowing legs,
And erecting ears,
As if raging waves swept.

Facing ten thousand Herculeses,
Khan Qiktay issued an order:
"Let Doryte tackle first,
Stare behind and wait for a chance,

To rush up in crowd,
It needs working together to cast steel net.
If God blesses us,
Kenainym will be caught."

Before going to fight back,
Kenainym told first,
To the fifty Kazakh people:
"Horses losing their owners,
Have gone to you,
Now is the time for you to fight.

"Karamark people are unkind,
As crafty as devils.

"If they cast steel net on me,
Stay away from me,
To avoid making trouble in chaos.

"If I fall into the net,
Never think I will be caught,
Never run away everywhere.
If you leave the battle flag,
You will be surrounded by the enemy."

Towards the crowd of Karamark,
Kenainym rushed to fight.
He was a single person,
The enemy was a mighty force,
A sea of people.

"I will kill all of enemies!"
With the faith in heart,
He wielded spear to thrust.
Spearhead came out,
Blood flowed,
Spear shaft went back,

Earth shook.

He thrusted by a downhill,
Fifty enemy soldiers fell down dead;
He thrusted again behind,
One hundred enemy soldiers were defeated.

He swept hard,
One thousand enemy soldiers staggered.
He kept fighting tirelessly,
Wanting to kill the enemies all.

Seeing such a cruel scene,
Doryte trembled with fear,
Unable to even say a word.
But he refused to fail,
Then mustered his courage,
Held black crescent battleax,
Hacked at Kenainym.

Just in the moment,
One thousand Herculeses of Karamark,
Rushed forth in crowd.
They casted steel net on Kenainym,
Doryte near him also fell into the net.

Qiktay shouted,
Rode fast to the two people:
"Come on,
Pull the net rope,
I will drag Kenainym away,
Convict and execute him,
Send him to death."

Kenainym dismissed it,
Kept calm,
And resisted strongly.

Qiktay took the net rope,
Tied it to the stirrup,
He wanted to drag Kenainym to death,
Whipping horse with all his strength.

One thousand Herculeses and one thousand lantern rings,
Kenainym was caught by three hundred rings,
Six hundred rings went to Doryte,
The other one hundred rings totally failed.

It occurred to Kenainym that,
There was a sword on his back,
It was the sword seized from Jurendo,
Able to cut anything,
Its edge never rusted.
He drew the sword to cut off steel ring,
Stood upright again,
Steady as a mountain.

As the Old saying goes:
"If you want to dig a hole for others,
Jump to measure it by yourself,
In case you are stuck in it."

Qiktay dragged Doryte away,
But thought it was Kenainym,
Still ran wildly on thorns and stones.

Many Karamark people behind him saw it clearly,
Gabbling anxiously,
Shouting madly:
"Kenainym is not in the net,
Why do you drag Doryte to run?

"What's wrong with you?
Are you courting death,
Or losing your head?

"A loser,
A blind man,
How can't you separate enemy from ourselves?"

Qiktay heard the abuse,
Drew rein quickly,
Dared not to raise his head in shame.
People let Doryte out at once.
Qiktay stood in a daze:
"What magic does Kenainym have,
So powerful?"

Kenainym turned around,
Went back to the fifty Kazakh people,
Ordering aloud,
In a resounding voice:

"Karamark people are defeated in panic,
Goods they leave are all over the mountains,
Take what you want,
Then hurry to return to your hometown.

"Tell the folks,
Kenainym Sarik appears,
Arrogant Tetke and Sotolle,
Both are defeated and killed by him.

"You have seen other matters,
Tell what you know,
Tell the truth.
Never waste time again on the way,
Go back to your hometown quickly.

"If some enemy soldier stops you again,
Go on your journey without offending him,
If meeting the fleeing Karamark people,

You can loot their good horses.

"Brothers of Kazakh,
I will protect you here,
If some people dare to harm a hair on my head,
Their ends will come."

Solving problems for Kazakh people,
Making them go to the hometown in Altay.
Kenainym held the road,
Looking for strategies to tackle Qiktay.

Doryte was pulled out of the net,
He was filled with anger,
Falling into rage:

"Crazy Qiktay,
Do you hide a secret plot in heart,
Do you want to kill me,
In order to occupy Kangayi exclusively?

"When Kenainym made slaughter,
When Tetke died,
When soldiers were defeated,
You looked indifferent,
As if nothing happened.

"Your former actions are suspicious,
Your current actions are clearer,
Your good intention need not be justified,
Your evil intention has been exposed.

"Faced with Kenainym,
You were worried I wouldn't give you help,
Then told a load of crap in an indirect way,
So as to make me work for you willingly.

"You had someone put me into the net,
Then urged your horse to drag me out far away.
Did you think I was already dead,
So you pretended to get me out,
Made as if you apologized to me?

"If you have real abilities, Qiktay Khan,
You should split Kenainym's stomach,
If you can not do it,
You would better die in his hand without return.

"If you die in his hand,
Do not worry,
Nor are you sad,
I will revenge you."

Doryte could not cool his rage,
He shouted to make an order,
Withdrew the soldiers of Kangayi.

Not only did people of Kangayi abandon him,
But also Karamark in Qiktay's troops,
Wanted to flee dispersedly,
Since what Qiktay did,
Suddenly they fell in doubt.
Qiktay was unconvincing at that time,
All his dignity as a commander was missing.

In order to see what is next,
Doryte and his soldiers did not act for a moment,
One after another soldiers of Kangayi left,
No one intercepted them in the front.
From then on the alliance of four tribes disintegrated,
Their dominance was difficult to happen again,
Just like loose sand in gobi desert.

Things like uniting and separation,

Had been clarified by old men:
"If six men have ulterior motive,
They can not keep their horses;
If four men unite as one,
They can pick up stars from the sky."

Proverb left by ancient,
Is always absolute truth.

Kenainym came to the battlefield,
Noticing the reduce of the number of people,
He thought,
"Whether Qiktay was playing a dirty trick,
Sending his troops to harass people?"
He thought again:
"I should not think too much for present urgency."

Kenainym said to Doryte:
"Doryte,
Do not flee instead of fighting this time,
You arrogant guy,
How dare you to ambush me,
I am definitely not to let you off this time!

"Qiktay entangled you into the net,
You were almost killed by that,
On purpose I gave you a chance to live,
Let you take to your heels.

"For a hero to live in the world,
Integrity is the most important thing.
Otherwise when you were wrestling,
I would take the opportunity to cut your heads.

"Our ancestor said,
When enemy is in danger,
We should not take the advantage.

Even die bravely,
We should fight fairly.
If not,
Even triumph will be a tarnish of our ancestor."

Hearing Kenainym's words,
Doryte was ashamed into anger,
Immediately he waved the spear,
Rushing to Kenainym.
The words he said to Qiktay,
Completely had been ignored,
Without a pin of care.

Hero Kenainym and Doryte,
Started a long desperate fight.

One hit the other's shoulder,
One stuck at the other's head;
Shields of two sides were broken into pieces,
Helmet of each other was shapeless for being struck.

Listen,
Battleax was tinkling on the helmet,
Look,
Robes of two sides were torn into pieces.
The noise of battle headed into the clouds,
The impact between spears sparkled and smoked.
This one grinded his teeth hard,
That one sputtered to fight back.
Just like a couple of rutting male camels,
Fought at outrance,
Without mercy,
Rolling and crawling,
In revolving world.

Doryte seized a chance,
Aiming at the rib cartilage of Kenainym,

Stabbed hard by his spear,
As thick as little finger,
A steam of blood sprayed from his waist.

After the hit,
Kenainym's rage was burning,
He thought:
"You are not the force to be reckoned with,
How can I be defeated by you easily."

He was foam with rage,
Stared his enemy angrily,
Tightly he held the lance from Sotolle,
Wanted to fight back,
Just like a roaring tiger.

Seeing the anger of Kenainym,
Doryte readjusted his armor.

Just like a hungry lion,
In a flash Kenainym leaped at Doryte,
Aiming at the place behind the ear of hill-like Doryte,
He stabbed with his spear fiercely.

Stabbed in at left ear,
Out at the other.
When the spear was withdrawn,
Hill-like Doryte,
Immediately fell from the horseback.
Insufferably arrogant Doryte,
Lost his life.

Seeing this scene,
Doryte's soldiers,
Rushed to Kenainym,
Like a flood that had burst the dam.
Descendant of Aykoler, Kenainym,

He never knew what was fatigue,
Faced the coming soldiers,
Picked up the sword of Akem.

With great momentum,
He whipped Kankura hard,
Where there were gathering enemies,
He would rush there.
He was relentless to enemies,
Intent on fighting against them,
And driving them away.

Let us put this part of story aside,
And go on singing about,
The battles of wits and courage,
Between Kenainym and Qiktay.

Kenainym and Qiktay Took Turns to Attack

Khan Qiktay of Karamark,
Did not go to the battlefield,
He saw the scene that blood flowed like stream,
Racking his brains for the next action:

"It is improper to revenge Doryte now,
Everyone knows that,
It is they that separate from me and leave battlefield first.

"After I kill Kenainym,
After I drive Kirgiz people away,
After I occupy all their livestock,
It will be the time for me to dominate the world.

"Then I will look for Kangayi people,
Their fates will be up to me.
I will make them become slaves,
Drive them away from their own villages.

"I will allocate all the Kangayi people,
To every house of Karamark,
Asking them to work for Karamark people."

Planning in this way,
Dreaming in that way,
Ambition of Khan Qiktay expanded,
With an itch to occupy,
All the places of that four tribes.

He did not have Kenainym,
At his heart.

Kenainym was unwilling to stay here for long,
He waited for Qiktay to have the final combat.

Khan Qiktay came to the battlefield at last,
Kenainym said to him:

"Khan Qiktay of Karamark,
You are always sly and crafty,
With tricks and plots,
The three leaders following you to intrude,
Have already died.

"Seeing so many casualties,
You still shut your ears.
Remaining indifferent,
You are irresponsible to your subordinates,
You have lost your consciences.
You have already lost the people's hearts,
Your end is not far away."

After hearing the words of Kenainym,
The arrogant Karamark,
Was like an irritated boar,
could not wait to swallow Kenainym,
He rode out of the camp with roaring.

He had a bald chin,
With no beard,
Big and fat,
Short and low.
He wore a helmet,
Looking more like a block of meat.

He carried an arrow box,

Held an iron bow,
Each arrow had been immersed in poison,
He believed he could defeat enemies with these.

He thought:
"As long as I shoot him,
Kenainym must die.
Even if I shoot any part,
Poison will spread all over his body,
Death will be inevitable."

Qiktay held an arrow in his mouth first,
Then put the arrow on bow rack,
Started to tell Kenainym:

"Kenainym,
Let's not battle with spears,
Let's shoot each other in turn,
I will shoot the first arrow to you,
You will shoot the second arrow back to me.

"Do you take the bow today?
Take it out and let me see."

Kenainym was not unprepared,
It was impossible for him not to take the bow,
What was taken on him,
Was the bow left from Krichorao.

He drew the iron bow out from waist,
Held it tightly.
At this time,
Qiktay looked this way clearly.

He ever heard,
In the archery contest,
Held in the fiesta of Kuocotoy,

Almanbet was the winner,
The magical Zoygala Iron Bow,
Fell into his hands.
Sipshaydar of Khitan,
Lost every game,
With empty hands in the end.

What he saw was the iron bow,
Qiktay felt flurried,
Fear emerged.
But he still struggled,
To draw the bow in his hand.

"I need to aim at his head,
If I can not shoot his eyes,
I can also shoot his helmet.
Once his helmet is broken,
Even if he does not die,
He will be stunned.
Then I rush to hack with battleax,
If his weapons are all damaged,
No one can complement him in time."

Qiktay thought so,
With right hand releasing the arrow,
That flew to the breast of Kenainym.

At that moment,
Swift Kenainym,
Bent to dodge at the sound,
With the whole body close to the mane.
Gray shadow of the arrow flew by him,
With a whistle.

"If he shoots an arrow,
I must die,
The magical arrow of Zoygala,

Will not spare my life."

When thinking about this,
Qiktay held his battleax,
Shouting,
Rushing towards Kenainym.
Kenainym said angrily:
"You are a Karamark inferior to a woman,
You are a bastard,
I will gave way to your attack first,
But you break your promise!"

Kenainym held spear,
When Qiktay hacked with battleax,
He blocked it with spear.

Qiktay had to take spear as well,
When Kenainym thrust with spear,
He also blocked it with spear.
Spears collided each other with clangs,
Two heroes were showing their remarkable skills.

One was hardened bandit in Kangayi,
The other was an up-and-coming hero of Kirgiz,
They drew out their swords,
Hacked their opponents fiercely.

After a while they waved their battleax,
Chopped the opponents valiantly.
Then smashed with war hammers,
Without mercy,
Without retreat.

They used all weapons they brought,
To duel on the vast land of Ili.
Without a moment of stopping,
Ruthless fight lasted two nights,

And two days.
With weapons the battle hung in the balance,
So they seized each other's wrists,
Shoved around,
But it is still evenly matched,
No one was willing to concede defeat.
Even their steeds were overexerted,
As to sink their hooves in the dirt.

Like a sly fox,
Qiktay thought up another trick:
He planned to lead massive forces into the battlefield,
To escalate the war,
So that he can take the chance,
To flee to the mountains of Sallerbard.

If he can flee to the sidehill of Sallerbard Mountain,
The place close to the hometown of Karamark,
He could get food from Alemate,
And conscript soldiers from Kangayi,
By what he can go on a more ruthless war.
"I will use my wisdom and intelligence,
Perplex this Kirgiz at first.
If I get stuck,
At least my Karamark soldiers,
Can run across Sallerbard Mountian and flee to Koktukat.

"If anything untoward happen to me,
These soldiers would fall in Kazakh's hand,
The result was unbearable to contemplate,
It would meet the wish of Kirgiz.

"Kakanqin and Qinmaqin,
I have brought them six disasters.
If they heard my misfortune,
Definitely they will mock and curse me,
Belittle my ability!

From here people of Khitan was the closest,
They will occupy our hometown."

Qiktay was scheming when he did battle,
He stayed after he fled to the edge of the battlefield.
He waved his whip to the soldiers,
Fifteen thousand of Karamark people,
Thought it was their khan's order.

At once they rushed forward,
Just like a swarm of turbulent bees.
At this moment Qiktay turned to escape,
He seized the chance to sneak into chaotic soldiers.

Massive Karamark soldiers,
Rushed ahead around Kenainym,
Just like mad dogs out of cages,
Scratching and biting,
Waving their hooves and claws.

Kenainym had no fear,
This kind of chaotic mob,
Would be defeated without striking a blow.

On the Steed Kankura,
He met the attack with ease,
He held the Sire Spear,
Continually stabbed and poked.

He advanced toward the flow of enemy soldiers,
The blood of them was flowing like a stream,
They screamed and shouted,
Fifteen thousand of recalcitrant Karamark,
Almost had been wiped out by him.

There were some remaining soldiers,
Along the hillside of Altay Mountain,

Towards Koktukat,
They fled to the direction of Kangayi.

Towards the direction Qiktay fled,
Kenainym kept chasing.
The foot of Sallerbard Mountain,
Was Qiktay's destination,
He escaped with bare life,
And arrived there at last.

"Kenainym will not come here,
Once he stepped on this land,
It is hard for him to back alive."
Qiktay thought to himself.
Stayed there for eight days,
He could hardly retain his composure anymore,
Unchangeable nature drove him hit out again.

He wanted to invade Kazakh in Altay,
Looted their livestock.
Caught their young persons,
Sent them to Khitan,
To exchange weapons and horses.

Next he wanted to invade Talas,
To bring disaster to Kirgiz.
When he was mounting his steed,
With some Karamark soldiers,
Kenainym appeared before his face.

"You futureless Karamarks,
Are you clouded in your mind?
Where are you going to flee to next,
Are you going to scourge others?

"Do not escape,
Do not get afraid,

We have got used to fight.
Do not think I am weak,
As heroes we should fight to the end,
I will not stop before victory."

Seeing the figure of Kenainym,
Hearing his stern and just words,
Once again Qiktay went to battle with the lance.

His hair was fluttering behind the head,
His feet was coverd by a pair of ragged caligae.
Just like the goat that was chased by hunters,
He was out of breath in embarrassment.

He rode his horse,
In untidy clothes,
Iron shield was wobbled on his back,
He waved his lance towards Kenainym,
Kenainym also waved the spear to fight.

From the right side to the left side,
Then from the left side to the right side,
Damn Qiktay Khan,
He cunningly dodged when he urged his steed.

In the battle in Ili,
By Kenainym he was defeated.
This time he disregarded his life,
Racked his brains,
To find some way to retaliate.

He stamped with fury,
Tightly held the lance,
He got into a rage,
Like a rutting male camel.
He went on the rampage,
With wide-open eyes,

Like a viper jumping out the hole.
These were the two stubborn heroes,
Who started another life-and-death fight.

They kept wielding spears to thrust,
Making deafening sound.
The power could overturn mountains,
The momentum was like hurricane.

Birds in the sky could not fly,
Beasts on the ground could not walk.
Animals in soil climbed out of the ground,
Afraid of losing lives when the earth cracked.

Dust arose all round on rivers,
Waves went up and down in lakes,
Earth shook,
With sharp roar.

Qiktay banded horsetail,
Keeping wielding spear to hit hard.
Two spearheads collided,
Several sparkles flashed.

Qiktay suddenly found a chance to attack,
Towards the shoulder blade of Kenainym,
Rushing forth to hit hard.

At the moment of crisis,
Kenainym got close to the horse,
Turning over and slipping.

Spear of Qiktay missed,
Battle horse hardly stopped.
When the person and horse went away like wind,
Kenainym remounted his horse,
The horse ran steadily again on the battlefield.

Kenainym caught up with Qiktay on horse,
Wielded spear to thrust his buttock.
Qiktay also avoided the spear,
Kept himself from being stabbed.

When Kenainym raced by him,
Qiktay whipped horse again to chase.
Watching spearhead was about to stab him,
Swift Kenainym,
Wielded battleax to block it.
With a bang,
Spearhead of Qiktay was broken into pieces,
Falling to the ground under hooves.

Qiktay drew battleax to hack,
Kenainym turned around like a windmill,
Lifting battleax to fight.

Battleaxes collided,
Sparkles flashed,
Troops and horses on both sides were sweaty,
Soldiers watched the battle with fear.

The tiger-like hero,
How could not I sing about.
Heroes like Kenainym,
Grew up in defending justice.
People were proud of having such heroes,
Heroes wrote a heroic chapter,
For repaying the care of people.

It was not easy to protect the interests of people,
It was more difficult to find shelters for people.
For the peace of Kirgiz,
Kenainym fought on lots of fronts,
At the risk of his life.
Horse got exhausted,

Hero felt tired,
For the happy and peaceful life of people,
He fought bravely outside alone.

Qiktay and Kenainym battled for days,
With respective magical power,
Day and night.
Horses under them were too tired to move,
Helmets and shields were broken into pieces,
Swords lost edges,
Spears lost heads,
Battleaxes lost shafts,
Crossbows lost arrows.

Shameless Qiktay repeated his trick,
He wanted soldiers to rush into the battlefield,
To surround Kenainym,
To let himself flee in chaos.

He waved the whip to his soldiers,
Soldiers had understood his order.
They came up in crowd,
To besiege Kenainym from all directions.

Sly Qiktay,
Dived into the army in the chaos.

Kenainym was burned with rage,
Like a lion jumping out of forest.
Karamark soldiers saw his angry face,
All trembled with fear.

Kenainym wielded spear,
Rushing into the enemies to thrust around.
Karamark soldiers hardly took the strike,
Fleeing everywhere,
As if monkeys scatter when a tree falls.

Kenainym got braver with fighting,
Chased and killed the fleeing enemies.
Qiktay escaped to a low mountain slope,
Feeling extremely depressed with the scene.
He thought:
"Now I can not go to fight again,
Or grapple with him.
No matter how I struggle,
I can not avoid being caught by him.

"Now I can only hide in the dark,
Aiming at the chance to attack Kenainym by surprise.
Or I will only be shot and die."

Vicious Qiktay hardly changed his nature,
He took the shotgun on his back,
Determined to ambush for the sneak attack.

He held the shotgun,
Loaded it,
And started to kneel and aim,
Prepared to pull the trigger and fire.

Watching Karamark people flee everywhere,
Kenainym stopped wielding spear,
Thinking:
"These people are mostly civilians,
If they do not revolt,
I can't make them bleed,
Or lose their own lives.

"My enemy is Khan Qiktay,
I need to trace him hurriedly,
No matter where he escapes,
I will find the fox demon!"
Kenainym kept whipping horse,

Going through hills and highlands,
Searching for the trace of Qiktay.

When the distance between them became six small dabans,
Kenainym came into the sight of Qiktay.
Qiktay refused to miss the chance,
Hurried to aim with gun.

Kenainym was unware,
Still urging horse on,
Muzzle of Qiktay aimed at his knee,
Just after the trigger was pulled,
Evil bullet came out from muzzle.

Hero was shot in the knee,
But galloping Kenainym felt no pain,
He stayed calm,
As if nothing had happened,
Urging horse on as before.

Qiktay felt annoyed:
"I can not fill a shot after the miss,
Or I will be stabbed to death,
If he finds me.
He will take out my viscera."

So he hurried to mount the horse,
With no time to look around,
With no courage to turn back,
Fleeing towards Koktukat.

Lion-like Kenainym suffered the ambush,
Wounded right leg started to shake,
But he still did not stop whipping horse,
Kankura bowed its legs,
Got to a low daban in the blink of an eye,
It was the place where Qiktay fired.

Kenainym looked around,
Saw there was a fire before him,
Ashes were as large as a small yurt.
He looked carefully at the footprints around,
Places which horse hooves stomped turned into pits,
Showed the direction of enemy.

Kenainym felt pains after he stopped,
Looked at his right leg,
The wound under the knee was bleeding.

He put the wounded leg on horseback,
Tied it to one side of the saddle.
He continued to pursue Qiktay,
At full speed.

Qiktay Sought Help Everywhere After a Series of Failure

Qiktay who was escaping,
Ran up to some higher ground,
With a clairvoyance he looked around.
Suddenly he found the figure of Kenainym,
Terrified Qiktay was shocked.
He dare not even rest a moment,
So continued to flee with his steed.

Kenainym felt a pain in his right leg,
Like jumping horse his vessel beat ceaselessly,
There was not any enemy in his way,
With left leg he kicked the horse's stomach to urge it.

There was a great pain in his right knee,
His injured right leg was swelling,
Looked as thick as a pail.
His condition became worse,
The region of swell extended to the waist,
It was unbearable that having pains all over.

Unexpectedly he found two pups at roadside,
Kenainym was confused:
"Where are the two pups from?
How did they come out here?"

He leaned over from the horseback,
Picked up the two pups,
Put them into the bag beside the horse.
Hero Kenainym felt exhausted,

He was unable to back to Talas.

The bullet shot by Qiktay,
Had been soaked in dense venom,
Poison started to spread to the whole body,
The region of swell extended to his chest.

Various kinds of herbs grew up at boundless gobi desert,
One of them was breast grass.
After Kenainym swallowed the tongue of Jurendo,
He understood all details about plants.

Finally he found a breast grass,
But when he was leaning over to pick it,
He fell down from the horseback.

After lying on the ground for long,
He woke up,
Ate the herb beside him.

What a pathetic fate,
Even a hero can not escape it!

With a huge sound of crash,
Dark clouds were flowing,
Lightning was flashing,
It started raining and pouring,
Floods were raging.
Rocks rolled by waves,
Around him debris flow was roaring.

With fractured right leg,
And swollen body,
Kenainym could not move at all,
Nor could he avoid it.
Suddenly,
Opposite him a peak fell down,

Sand and rocks rolled down towards him,
Kenainym had no time to escape,
By a rock his left leg was also crashed.

It was the will of God,
He had to endure sufferings.

The two pups in the bag beside the saddle,
Making the voice of purr at this time.
It was found that a group of jackals was approaching,
They had come to the side of Kenainym.

Jackals were wildly laughing,
When they were moving around,
Their voice sounded like that of enchantresses.

The steed of Kenainym Kankura,
Was the most intelligential in animals.

It bit a jackal that was approaching,
Threw it into the distance,
Stamped with front hooves,
Then kicked hard with behind hooves.
That jackal could not stand up after falling down,
It lost its life after a whine.

More wolves came in flocks,
Kankura could feel the urgency,
And erected its ears,
Its attack became fiercer.

When Kankura was jumping to attack,
Its body rubbed against a rock.
The belt used to fasten the bag of pups,
Was hooked by the rock.
And thus broke,
Two pups fell to the ground.

The pups barked to wolves,
Made them run away in fright.

The place Kenainym lived in,
Was a valley named Tiran,
There was uninhabited,
Only wolves and beasts haunted.

Go upward to Arat Snow Mountain,
Go downward to cliffs.
Around mountain slope where beasts haunted,
There were peaks and valleys.
The top of mountain slope,
Was covered with pines and birches,
Wild willows and poplars.

Wild goat always grazed here in flocks,
Wolves came to harass them at times.
Leopards came to wander sometimes,
To carry off a gazelle by waiting for a chance,
Frightening gazelles fled in all directions.

At the turns on soft land,
Wild bears always haunted and dug holes.
There were wild apple trees and walnut trees,
Countless fruits,
Bent branches,
Wild bears often slept there soundly after they were full.

On the treetops of pines, poplars and birches,
All kinds of birds tweeted every day,
Singing together,
A lively heaven for birds and beasts.

Low cloud and soft wind,
Swaying branches,
Mountain breeze blew along flowing water,

Fragrance of plants drifted along river valley.

Kenainym ate the herb to reduce swelling,
Lumps on his body were dissipated day by day.
The two dogs caught a marmot to eat every day,
Getting big heads and fat waists.
Sometimes they went to hunt gazelles,
Jumping and playing leisurely.
With wounds not healed,
Unable to get up,
Hero suffered intolerable loneliness every day.

Gazelles that the dogs scared away,
Came to the hillside someday.
Kenainym was unwilling to be lonely,
Drawing a bow,
Shooting an arrow.
A half-dozen gazelles fell to the ground,
Rolled down the hillside.
Two dogs and Kankura ran over,
To pull the prey towards them in time.

Fat gazelle meat,
Smelled sweet,
Kenainym only ate its breast meat,
To accelerate wound healing,
Strength was growing.
After ninety whole days,
Hero stood up finally,
Like a tall and straight poplar.

Horse Kankura grazed freely every day,
Full of fat after recovery like a zebra.
Two dogs stayed by his side every day,
Accompanying day and night,
Like bodyguards.

Hero recovered for another fifteen days,
Spending one hundred and five days totally in mountains.

The revived Kenainym,
Swore and shouted to the mountains,
"Khan Qiktay,
As long as you are alive,
I must take revenge,
Tear you to pieces!"
With hatred in his mind,
Kenainym arose and whipped horse on,
Towards Koktukat.

Everyone says that one can't avoid one's enemy,
Kenainym on the road,
Just ran into Qiktay,
He was leading an oncoming team of soldiers.

In the small mountain valley of Koktukat,
Qiktay rested for ninety days,
Never seeing the movement of Kenainym,
Thinking:
"Does he get any illness,
Or do I really hit him,
Why doesn't he pursue me?

"That is the bullet immersed in poison,
Has Kenainym already died a painful death in wild,
With a swelling body?
Or does he return to hometown Talas,
With severe injuries?

"I must set out for Talas at once,
To strike the Kirgiz people with white felt caps,
Making them flee to all directions,
With destroyed families.
Even if Kenainym hasn't died,

He should be dying,
None of the people hit by my bullet,
Can escape from death!"

Qiktay never expected that,
Kenainym was still full of heroism.
Then he gathered troops and horses,
Fifty thousand soldiers in total.
Ten strong Herculeses among them.

The place where the two enemies met,
Was a board plain.
There was a river named Orlhun in the middle,
Water was flowing,
Waves were shining.

It was a secluded plain,
Kenainym stood alone at one side.
Qiktay leading huge forces,
Suddenly appeared on the opposite hill.

Two warriors were both safe and sound,
But hardly covered up hatreds burning within them.
Kenainym shouted in rage:
"Hey,
Karamark,
Where are you going,
So fearfully?
You could not stand the wrestle,
Running away in panic,
Now you lead thousands of soldiers again,
It must be to challenge me.

"Do you think I have already been dead,
Your imagination is always absurd.
If I want to burn up,
Today I will send you to death."

Words of the hero were all truth,
Qiktay was struck dumb in a flurry.

No time to care about shame and no power to resist,
Qiktay had only shocks.
He had no choice but to face the troops,
Making a gesture to issue orders.
The ten Herculeses,
Mounted and launched an attack at once.

A person named Bartak among them,
Overestimated himself and thrust with spear.

Hero Kenainym blocked the spear bravely,
Then fought back,
Spearing the opponent.
Bartak hurling himself into the net,
Was thrown far away like a child and fell to death.

Then another Karamark Hercules,
Came forward,
Shouting:
"You are Kenainym,
I am Seter,
If I take actions,
No one can survive.

"Today is my fortune,
To have a chance to compete with you on spear.
When you die here,
Gold and gemstones of Qiktay,
Will be the gift to me.
Life on earth,
Just seeks for money.
Gaining gold and gemstones,
Is the desire of my life."

Seter risking his life for money,
Wielded the spear in his hand,
Shouted the slogan Burhan,
And thrust straight at Kenainym.
He seemed to believe,
He could strike Kenainym down at one blow.

Kenainym was unflinching,
Kankura also showed no weakness with galloping.
Battle horse with open mouth was foaming,
Blood of Kenainym was boiling,
Anger was burning.
He shouted the slogan Manas,
Thrust hard with spear,
Struck the hill-like Seter down at the spot.

Seter was sprawled on the ground,
Kenainym grabbed the spear,
Waiting next opponent to come to die.
Seeing the end of two Herculeses,
Qiktay forgot the death.
Mountainous Qiktay,
Rushed out of troops,
In a towering rage.
Shield on the back and iron rod on the belt,
Armor on the shoulder,
Helmet on the head,
Spear in the hand.

Frowning with worry,
Stamping with flurry,
He was as fierce and brutal as a hungry tiger.
Like the Death Azireyli as well,
Livid face,
Glowing eyes like awls.
Fire came out of his mouth,
Tears flew from his eyes,

He was still roaring madly:

"Kenainym,
Here isn't the territory of Kirgiz,
But the place where Khitan and Karamark formed an alliance,
Here will also be your burial ground!"

Cunning and shameless Qiktay,
Asked again to strike in turn,
He asked for the first strike as well.

"Since he asks to strike in turn,
I will let him strike firstly.
When it comes to my turn,
I will never let him survive."

Thinking of this,
Kenainym straightened up waist pole,
Waiting for the opponent to attack,
He kept calm face,
Filled with king style and heroism.

Qiktay thought proudly:
"He falls into my trap finally,
I need to kill him by a preemptive strike.
No matter how much strength he has,
With no chance to fight,
What can he do to me!"

Qiktay was approaching,
Towards buttock of the steady hero,
Thrusting hard with spear.
Spearhead pierced his outer coat,
He twisted the coat immediately,
Then a click,
The spear had been broken.

Hero Kenainym,
His body tilting,
His feet slipping out of stirrups,
Almost fell down from horseback.

He tried to grab the neck mane of Kankura,
And kept the body balance.
Protection from the souls of Manas,
Made him sit tight again,
And retrieve his vigor.
He turned the horse around,
Straightened the spear,
Could not wait to stab Qiktay to death.
He shouted,
"Qiktay,
It's my turn,
You will feel my spear."

Heroic Kenainym,
Burning flame was flashing in his eyes,
He was like a dragon shooting out of the water,
A tiger coming down a hill.

Qiktay saw the majesty of Kenainym,
Then rules on the battlefield had been ignored.
To preserve his humble life,
He forgot the promise and dignity,
And wielded the battleax to fight.

An idea came into Kenainym's mind,
"I can not have direct combat with him.
He uses sharp battleax,
Which will cut off my spear.
No one can offer me another weapon,
My attack will be to no avail."

Strategy was changed,

To avoid the cross cut of battleax.
He aimed at the upper arm muscle,
And thrust it hard.

The muscle of Qiktay ruptured in a sudden,
Blood was flowing,
Like flushing water.
Pain was intolerable though bone was not broken,
The battleax in his hand fell to the ground.

The half alive Qiktay,
Still understood in his mind:
"If Kenainym launches another attack,
My life will be lost."
He used the usual trick again,
Making chaos,
And surviving in chaos.

But with dry mouth,
He made no sound by smacking the lips.
Had to wave the horsewhip to soldiers,
To motion them to rush over.

Fifty thousand soldiers moved forward together,
Dust rolled up and covered the sky,
Qiktay took the chance to mingle with soldiers,
To hide himself in the enemy.

He was still thinking the idea:
"Fifty thousand soldiers,
And eight Hercules,
Let them bleed and fight against here.
I must come up with a safe and secure method,
To leave here and find a shelter.

"When the hero Manas was alive,
In the battle of Aranick,

There were four leaders around:
Duo Khan, Banus Khan, Sokso and Sotoy,
Were their names.
Manas took Aranick back,
From hands of the four persons,
And renamed it Andijan.

"At that time,
After Sokso and Sotoy fell in battle,
Duo Khan fled to my side,
With two kids,
Who were said to be the descendants of two decedents.
With the son of Duo Khan,
They all have grown up to be heroes now.
But while I was khan,
Little attention was attached to them.

"It is said that the Big ears Chounalep,
Iron overcoat Shalekmat,
Copper navel Kekmat,
The three persons are reliable.

"I need to look for them at once,
Gather their troops,
And lead them here,
Then the alone Kenainym must be stomped heavily."

The despicable Qiktay,
Racked his brain to figure out evil plans.
The places in which the three persons lived,
Were called Byetik and Sarikum.
Qiktay turned the horse to face south,
And urged it toward the places.

He moved forward day and night without a stop,
For twenty whole days,
Reached the Kuran Beach of Byetik finally.

At that moment, the three persons gathered there,
Deliberating something.
Qiktay got the news from passerby,
And came to the front of them.

None of them had knew Qiktay,
Except for some minor information.

Qiktay had long been exhausted,
His steed was skin and bones as well,
Lice on its body were fatter than skylark.
He was a mere skeleton,
With pale face,
Could hardly wait to show the purpose:

"I am the descendant of Karamark,
Qiktay is my name.
I heard that,
Kirgiz People and Karamark People,
Have a feud lasting several generations.

"I thought Seytek had been dead then,
And Semtay also passed away.
I assembled fifty thousand soldiers from Kangayi,
And three warriors, Sotolle, Doryte and Tetke,
Making them fight with me.

"I wanted to strike the castle of Manas, Talas.
I wanted to defeat the enemy, Arashi.
However, I never expected,
The descendants of Manas in Kirgiz,
Made a comeback,
Strong as tigers and lions.

"As we got to the ridge of Elibin,
We encountered the Kenainym of Kirgiz.

I was full of confidence,
Camped there,
And raised the flag.

"I woke up the sleeping tiger unexpectedly,
By a momentary impulse.
I underestimated the power of enemies,
Thinking they were easy to be conquered,
Like Kakanqin and Qinmaqin,
And troops could be withdrawn successfully.

"In that battle,
Sotolle, Doryte and Tetke,
All were defeated,
Dying in battle.
Struggling to fight fiercely with Kenainym for six days,
I was still unable to withstand his attack.

"No choice but to take a chance to escape outside,
I guessed he must chase after me,
Then ambushed in Sallerbard.

"I mixed gunpowder with poison,
And put them into gun barrel with bullet.
I stared at his route,
Waited him to approach and shot him,
But instead of falling down,
He continued going forward as if nothing happened.

"I had to escape again,
To hide in the valley of Koktukat.
I stayed there for three months,
After another thirty days,
There was still nothing about his news.

"So I guessed Kenainym was hit by me,
Had already died in desolate wasteland.

I led fifty thousand soldiers and ten Herculeses,
To challenge Kirgiz again.

"While I led troops on the way,
I just encountered with Kenainym again.
We started another battle,
Two of the ten Herculeses were killed,
Still no one could match him.

"I could not bear to stand by,
Then bit the bullet and wielded the spear to fight.
We agreed I made the first strike,
I was determined to attack him with a fatal spear.
Though I exhausted all my strength,
He remained firm and safe.

"My spear was blocked by his coat armor,
Broken into halves,
I was saddened,
Forced to scurry off like a rat to this place.
I think we are relatives of the same root,
I put the dignity aside,
Telling you about these situations.

"Three warriors,
Please help me collect the blood debt.
I had little contact with you in the past,
Especially when everything went well with me,
I ever forgot you,
It was my misconduct."

"Maybe you are thinking:
'When you governed a land,
When you enjoyed happiness,
When you occupied Kakanqin and Qinmaqin,
Filling bags with the seized trophies and gold,
You forgot us completely.

Arrogant and supercilious,
Why did not you visit us at that time?'

"If you talk in this way,
Refuse in this way,
Please do what you want to do,
I won't keep these in mind.
All my details and secrets,
Are told without disguise,
Please think them over."

Qiktay finished his words with sobbing,
Iron overcoat Shalekmat,
Copper navel Kekmat,
Big ears Chounalep,
The three men,
Looked at each other,
Silent,
Wait-and-see.

Disgraced Qiktay,
Could hardly wait,
To continue crying:
"Three Herculeses present here,
I ask you for help to deal with the emergency,
It was a moment confusion,
That made Kenainym angry,
If I did not act harshly and blindly,
He would never be my enemy.

"When Manas and Kunwuerbayi were alive,
For the peace of both sides,
They signed an agreement,
With their seals.
Kenainym mentioned the matter then,
I mistook him for a weak and coward person.
What happened later was all what I deserved,

I had no choice but to escape to your place.

"Kenainym has been alerted,
Conspiracy is from Karamark people,
He must lead an expedition to chase me here.
If I do not come to inform you,
But escape alone to Kangayi,
When Kenainym searches here,
Without finding me,
You will be affected.
For then not only I won't dare to face you,
But also disasters will befall you.

"Advance or retreat, I wish for your explicit attitude,
I also hope you can take care of yourselves."

After Qiktay finished the cry,
The three people had known the context.

With parched mouth,
Qiktay signed in despair,
Pulling a long face.
The three people listening,
Also felt that they would be faced with hardship.

Big ears Chounalep,
Seeing Qiktay so sad,
Expected that his own tribe would suffer as well.
He fell into rage and opened his mouth:
"Iron overcoat Shalekmat,
Copper navel Kekmat,
You need to talk about how to cope with it!

"I will make preparations this whole year,
To start on an expedition next spring,
Now I am short of forage and weapons,
Unable to set out at once.

"I have known many things,
Kenainym is our enemy as well.
If you both agree on the expedition,
We can deliberate it now.

"We will go through Kashgar,
Enter the hometown of Jodar,
And loot all their wealth.

"After we occupy Kashgar,
Troops will be divided into three separate parts,
One will go through Tulgate,
Straight to Chechdob.
Son of Koshaoyi, Galgezak,
Has been old and weak now,
We will capture their territory.

"Another one will go through Ilkstam,
Intruding the six cities and Andijan,
Sweeping the frail old Sankibek,
Occupying the territory of Uzbek people.

"The city of Tajik, Dushanbe,
If we offer them Tashkurgan,
The invincible Timirbek,
Will join our team.

"Chechdob, Kashgar, Andijan,
Including Tajik people,
Khotan, Yarkant and Lop Nur,
We will block these places,
To stop people from traveling freely.

"Karakalepak, Tukuman,
Shankay and Baran,
We will block the information,

No message will be revealed to them.

"With Qiktay,
And Timirbek,
We five forming an alliance,
Will become the fire burning everything,
Will become a mountain never collapsing,
Will become an insurmountable daban.

"We set out together at that time,
Marching towards the small Talas.
The single-handed Kenainym,
Can do nothing to us as well.
Going to rob and spoil Kirgiz people,
We must make a triumphant return,
After a thrilling fight."

Big ears Chounalep,
Summarized his thought.
Shalekmat and Kekmat,
Also made a promise about the expedition.
They four went on the chat,
Discussing tactics and routes,
For intruding Kirgiz.

Big ears Chounalep said:
"We three need to reach an agreement,
After getting to Kashgar,
Killing Jodar firstly.

"Along Ili River,
Straight towards Talas,
Khan Qiktay,
Follow this route,
Until you meet Kirgiz people somewhere,
Then you can plunder them at will.

"Kekmat,
Go along Chater Lake,
Across Junarte,
Straight into Talas.
What Shalekmat will attack,
Is mainly the Kirgiz in Chechdob.

"My direction is to Dushanbe,
Set Tashkurgan as a gift for first meeting,
To form an alliance with Timirbek,
And attack Andijan hand in hand.

"After you defeat the Kirgizs in Talas,
We will share the seized trophies.
Make the people of Khotan, Yarkant and Lop Nur farm and sweat,
Since the Karacha Khan,
They refuse to kneel before us.

"Anyone who eats his words,
Will be punished by God."
They kissed the statue successively,
To show their sincerity devoutly.

They made a promise,
Qiktay was in charge of delivering message at any time,
Later they returned to their own barracks.

The three persons thought,
They could arrange the fate of Kirgiz people in the room.
What they never expected was,
Death was waiting for them.

Kenainym Slashed the Villain Qiktay

Kenainym was sweeping the battlefield,
He drove the horses losing their owner,
To the hometown of Kazakhs,
And gifted to the civilians by sharing.

The two dogs beside him,
Kept barking suddenly,
For they smelt Qiktay.
Regardless of anything,
They ran hard to the distance.

Observing the action of dogs,
Kenainym thought:
"Normally the two puppies refuse to leave me,
Why are they so unusual now?
Except for meeting wild boar,
Their bark is never so mad.
They ran away with barking like this.
Is it that the damned Qiktay,
Slipped back here to make waves secretly?

"Wild boar is the most ferocious animals,
Qiktay is the most cunning man,
I need to be search with great care."

Thinking of this, Kenainym ran the horse,
And came to Yellow Sand Gobi soon.
He concentrated on listening to the sound of dogs,
To find and discriminate the clues.

He thought,
Did Qiktay pretend to flee,
Bring reinforcements to bounce back,
And assault the hometown Talas again?

The sky was getting bright,
There was a dog barking in low voice,
Running back to him quickly with sobbing.
It kept wagging the tail,
Went ahead to lead the way,
As if it motioned Kenainym to follow.
The dog looked behind as it ran,
Followed by Kenainym,
Without a stop.

It was really the two sharp-nosed dogs,
Found Qiktay lurking secretly.
They followed behind the horse of Qiktay quickly,
Staring at the villain tightly.

Seeing this, Qiktay instantly thought:
They were the two dogs with Kenainym,
While fighting against him.
He was thinking,
"There is no soldiers I lead,
Are they all annihilated by Brute?
Are my barracks destroyed by Kenainym,
Who is waiting to duel with me here?"

He became mad,
Took the bow and arrow on his back in hand,
To harm the two identical dogs,
And shoot them on this land.

Two dogs went side by side,
The white one was shot to roll over to the ground,
The gray one turned around to inform Kenainym,

Running fast to him.

Kenainym hurried to the white dog,
And pulled out the arrowhead in its body,
At the sight of the sign on the shaft,
He knew the murder was Qiktay.

"Where does Qiktay run on earth,
Does he avoid me in the mountain?
The brute and shameless villain,
Not only slaughtered innocents,
Also killed the little dog.
The villain with no integrity,
I must send him to death today."

Kenainym whipped on the horse Kankura,
With thinking about this,
And moved forward following the track of Qiktay.

Blue eyes,
Yellow face,
Young and handsome Kenainym,
Was born to be a stubborn hero.

The treacherous Qiktay,
Thought after shooting the dog:
"Where can I escape?
Will Kakanqin accept me?
How can I preserve my life?

"Each tribe of Daban Island,
Will not let me sleep securely for one night.
Afghans will never shelter me as well,
For the great hatred of me.
Up to the point,
I have no path to the heaven,
And no door in the earth.

Gamble is a better choice,
Fighting against Kenainym to the end.

"If my time has come,
I have to leave my fate to Heaven.
If I have good luck,
I will chop his head off."

No idea about who he should turn to,
No idea about where he should hide,
Countless crimes and excessive arrogance in those days,
Were the reason for today's situation.

He bounced around,
Nowhere to go,
Could only return to battlefield alone,
With ashen face,
Dejectedly.

At that time,
The slogan Manas came from behind him.
Hearing the loud voice of hero,
Qiktay had perceived the end was coming.

He wielded the spear,
Risking his life to struggle,
Shouting madly the slogan Kangayi.

The horse under him,
Erected the ears,
Raised the head,
Pushed hind feet to leap forward,
Opened the mouth,
With foaming.
Like a flying bird,
Like a blowing wind.

The eyes under Qiktay's forehead,
Were flashing like burning fire.
Showing his teeth,
He gritted the molar to rattle.
Hair on the back was fluttering in the air,
Dust was blowing behind him.
He held the spear with two hands,
Rushing straight towards Kenainym.

Young Lion Kenainym,
Wearing coat armor,
Urging the horse Kankura,
Lifted sharp spear to fight.

Yellow-faced Death Kenainym,
Giant Qiktay with high martial arts,
Two warriors met again,
A duel to the death was just in sight.

They fought with each other,
Crash of swords and spears shook heaven and earth.
The sun lost its smile,
The moon lost its brilliance.

They fought with shouting wildly,
Sound echoed in lofty mountains.
Beasts were too frightened to come out of caves,
Birds were too afraid to leave nests.

Zebras on gobi stopped grazing,
Hares in flocks dared not to jump.
Foxes in hills were transfixed,
Gazelles on mountains dared not to run.

Bears dared not to get out of forest,
Tigers slinked to depths of mountains,
Wild wolves dared not to howl.

The earth was shaking for horses treading,
Spring water spouted out under hooves.

Back and forth,
Chasing and running,
Battleaxes jingled,
Spears collided.
Sparks flew in the daytime,
Red light flashed at night.
The coward trembled with fear,
The brave dared not to look straight.
Armors of two persons were punctured,
Two battle steeds were sweating.

Cunning Qiktay played tricks again:
"Kenainym,
We have fought a close battle,
For several days,
If you agree my advice,
We can take turns to strike once again."

Kenainym said:
"Khan Qiktay,
You are really shameless,
I ever let you strike first for two times,
To show the prestige of my ancestor Manas,
I tolerated you again and again.

"But when it came to my turn,
You ran away like a rabbit,
Abandoning the promise.
This time I should be the first to strike,
You need to stand still to wait for my attack."

Qiktay had no reply,
With livid face,
Staring eyes,

As if the end was coming,
Licking the lips,
No voice.

Suddenly he lifted broadsword high,
Hacking at Kenainym.
As if viper and scorpion with fear and anger,
Were about to spray venom out of body.

When his broadsword came,
Kenainym speared him like lightning.
Aiming at the arm of Qiktay,
He thrust fiercely with sharp spear.

Qiktay's arm was suddenly bleeding profusely,
The broadsword was thrown aside,
He had no idea what to do on the horseback.
Kenainym turned around,
Towards the neck of Qiktay,
Thrusting hard again.

The spear with tremendous force,
Struck down the hill-like Qiktay.

Kenainym in rage,
Hacked hard with battleax,
At his round head like melon.
The head of Qiktay was broken,
His shameful soul disappeared from the world.

Kenainym thought:
"I will neither take his steed,
Nor go to search Karamark people,
Innocent soldiers,
Better not to slaughter them.
If they do not admit the defeat,
Wanting to find me to revenge,

I will never let them off easily by that time."

Kenainym whipped horse on,
Setting out to return to his own hometown.
After the bloody battle with Karamark people,
He had more impressive appearance along the way.

He reached Talas safely,
Chatting with greeting folks about missing.
His experience spread like wind,
His fame made all the enemies desperate.
Kirgiz people with white felt caps,
All were delighted,
With the victory of justice.

All right,
Let us put this story aside,
Go on singing,
About the subsequent suffering of Kenainym.

Kirgiz People Overcame the Famine

Talas Suffered Snow Disaster

In the place of Atbarsh,
In the suburb of Chechdob,
The only son of Gaint Koshaoyi lived there,
Named Galgezak.
"Starting from his father,
Arashi was the like-minded friend,
With constant contact,
While few news was from him for years,
Kenainym would like to visit him.
'In my old age,
You pay no visit to me.'
The complaint can be avoided.
I need to start the journey,
To see how he is over the years."

Kenainym made the plan,
Riding on the road from Talas,
Alone.
He reached Atbarsh,
Met Galgezak.
And chatted slowly,
After the greeting:
"Uncle,
Please forgive me for the call,
Your father and my great-grandfather Manas are cousins,
You and my grandfather Semtay are peers,
You and my father Seytek are cross-age friends.

"I went to Kangayi recently,

I will tell you all about it,
Little by little."
Then the context of destroying Qiktay,
Was told by him,
In full detail.

After staying for two days,
Kenainym bade farewell to the old man,
Preparing to return.

Galgezak sincerely said:
"Oh, my baby Kenainym,
I have something on my mind to tell you.

"You visit me from afar,
I am in a great mood.
I have got no appetite for three months,
The tea was tasteless and meal had no fragrance.

"Sunset and sunrise,
Day and night alternately,
I keep the state.
I wanted to send words to let you come here,
But I was powerless,
Even for talking.
Though I have no painful area,
The strength in those years can not be got back.

"My only son Bagetebay,
A thirteen-years-old boy,
His wing is not full,
His muscle on the calf is not tough.
He is like a eyas unable to hover,
I want you to adopt him.

"I always want to hand him to you in person,
Today the desire is fulfilled.

"Child,
Listen to me,
Do not hurry to return home,
For I have only three days,
Lest someone sends obituary notice to you,
After you just leave.

"There is an old man named Oliyachal,
Living in the root of Oboler.
At first I caught an eagle,
Naming it Akeyni,
Feeding it up.
Lion Krichorao and Seytek,
Used it to hunt,
It was omnipotent.

"After that,
I domesticated another eyas,
It hunted more bravely,
Able to catch anything it saw.
Even wolves in flocks,
It could defeat them as well.

"The old man Oliyachal,
Sent a message to me through others,
Took my eagle away.
Two years have gone so far,
There has been no message about return.
I wanted to take it back in person,
But how can I have such strength?

"Kenainym,
You need to take it back,
As the heritage I leave you.
Let it hunt and play for you,
You will feel endless joy.

"My father Koshaoyi,
Had a close relationship with Lion Manas.
When they led an expedition together to Begin,
He always accompanied Lion.

"The funeral of Aykoler Manas,
All the Kirgiz people with white felt caps attended,
But only four people:
Aunt Kanikay and Old Bakay,
Hero Toshtuk and my father Koshaoyi,
Arranged a land personally for his burial.

"They four buried him properly,
Others were all unaware of the details.
Even his father Jagurp,
His brother Avikay and Kobsh,
Were also deceived in purpose.

"You can see Manas and Koshaoyi,
The relationship between our ancestors is so close.

"Since Semtay was born,
He and I were partners going through fire and water.
Semtay suffered a strike and disappeared,
I missed him day and night,
Worrying about him.

"In order to divine the fate of Semtay,
Aunt Kanikay took my steed Taytolu,
To horse races,
For proving Semtay was still alive.
Then Semtay came back,
We were always close,
Hand in hand,
Heart to heart.

"Now I am worried about my affairs,
How will my body be buried after I die?
Oh, my tiger Kenainym,
Today you come to my side.
Just like the arrival of God,
I wish you can realize my dream.

"The day after tomorrow is Wednesday,
Child,
Please let me go in peace.
No later than Friday,
Bury me in Chechdob.

"Do according to the etiquette after my death,
No memorials.
My only son Bagetebay,
Never forget to look after him."

Galgezak enjoined him again,
Letting Kenainym stay for another two days,
The old man prepared nine mares,
Asked people to drive cattle there,
Rode horse to go with Kenainym,
To have a look at the place for his burial.

There were fifteen people building his grave,
Which had been finished.
The living old man Galgezak,
Built his own grave in this way.

He lay down to have a try,
Thought it neither wide enough nor deep enough,
Asked people to dig to the enough size.

He also asked people to make a pit stove aside,
And put a cauldron on the stove.
Letting people kill a mare,

Igniting stove fire to cook.
Using spoons made from cypress,
To stir the delicious broth.
As a celebration for the completion of grave,
As a reward to the craftsmen building grave.

In the morning of Wednesday,
Galgezak faced the end of his life.
His eyes became increasingly blurry,
As if he was about to fall asleep.
Suddenly he trembled a little,
With face turning white,
He died.

His wife burst into tears,
Bagetebay also cried movingly,
People of Kara Kirgiz,
All covered their faces to cry.

Just there,
Kenainym witnessed Galgezak died in peace,
Sending Galgezak away in person.
Then he informed guests in all directions,
Inviting them to the funeral of Galgezak.

In the places horses could reach,
Servants were sent to deliver letters to every place:
"My father Galgezak passed away,
Please come to attend the funeral in time.
Now is hot summer,
The season of drinking kumiss.

"The old man went to Heaven on the Wednesday morning,
Funeral will be held on Friday.
Place is Arpa grassland,
Wishing you to set out instantly,
Be sure not to delay or hesitate."

Letters were drafted on the behalf of Bagetebay,
Sealed by Kenainym,
Letters stated that after forty days,
They would make mourn the dead.

Kashgar, Yarkant, Khotan,
Lop Nur, Barkol, Aziq,
Tacheng, Ili, Altay,
Ukikarlkera and Kapal,
Issyk Lake and Tex,
All had servants who headed for them.

Samarkand, Tashkent, Namangan,
Badak Mountain, Yulkenichy, Barik,
Kokand, Jetsu, Marglang,
Shankay, Keyba, Baran;
Tukuman, Urum, Kara Karlpark,
Ten castles of Uzbek,
All the places Kirgiz people lived in,
Were invited sincerely.

There were forty-one servants totally,
Delivering letters to all directions.

Careful hero Kenainym,
Gathered all the Kirgiz people in Atbarsh.
Making them prepared,
To receive the guests with enthusiasm.
The deadline approached,
Arpa was filled with guests.
All the houses opened their doors,
Entertaining five guests in every house,
Butchering a foal every day,
Treating compatriots from afar with hospitality.

Headmen of tribes in Kirgiz,

Sat on the ground in the shape of an ox horn,
To discuss the agenda of funeral.

At the very night,
From the place of Jedigair tribe,
One person came to deliver a message:
Khorasan people turned out in full force,
To intrude the territory of Jetsu,
Slaughtering and eating all our fat foals,
Plundering our wealth,
Harming our people.

"It is also said that,
In some places like Kashgar, Yarkant, Khotan,
Many soldiers are found as well,
No one knows where they come from,
What their identities are."

The news spread in the crowd quickly,
The guests from Khotan, Yarkant and Kashgar,
The guests from Turpan, Barkol and Jedigair,
All of them suspected the comers were Kangayi people,
Then set out to return one after another,
Rode horses to leave.

The guests from the places like Altay, Tacheng and Ili,
Were brotherly Kazakh people,
Suspicion also emerged in their minds:
"Will Khitan people attack our hometown,
While we are out,
We need to go back earlier,
We can't be at ease until seeing our families."

Guests stepped on the homeward journey,
Khans could not stop them,
Only saying goodbye to each other in a hurry:
"Wish Kirgiz people happy and healthy."

Together with the people,
In groups,
Returning to hometowns.

Kenainym said to Bagetebay:
"If anything happens,
Inform me as soon as possible,
Protect the people of your tribe,
Do not lose good fame in front of other people."

Praying to the soul of Manas,
The Kirgizs in Talas also head for hometown.
They returned to the rich Talas,
Grazing fat cattle,
And having a peaceful life.

In September,
Dark clouds covered the sky unexpectedly,
In the whole area of Kankole,
Down came the snow suddenly,
Day and night.
The snow depth was higher than horseback.
Even white-haired old man was surprised,
It was a once-in-a-century heavy snow.
From September to November,
Snow on the ground became thicker,
All the crops to be harvested,
Were buried by the snow,
Until they rotted and fermented under snow,
No crop was harvested this year.

In December,
The weather became colder,
With the gale howling,
Though you are indoors,
You will shiver,
With hands and feet growing stiff.

But people wandered around,
In search of food.

Sometimes fog filled the sky,
Sometimes frost covered the ground,
west wind swept in the morning,
East wind crazed in the afternoon.

Until May of the following year,
It still looked like winter.
No creature could go through the long coldness,
All big livestock almost dead.

In July,
The earth was frozen and snowbound still.
Mountain was white,
And barren.
The summer was the same as winter.
Cold winter lasted for a whole year,
Suddenly weather became weirder in August:
Cold and hot,
Cloudy and sunny.
The sun shone high in broad daylight,
Melted ice and snow,
Caused heavy flood,
Turning flat ground into river beach.
Night froze the earth,
Everywhere was layers of thick ice.

As the saying goes misfortunes never come singly,
At this moment,
Khan Kenainym suffered from typhoid fever,
Hard to get up,
Falling ill at home.
To the Kirgizs,
It was a worse time,
People had no way to make a living.

Kenainym could not get up,
And visit the masses.
In the days with such difficulties,
Who would take care,
Except the close relatives and friends?

Many people came from six cities in the beginning,
Like Andijan, Tashkent and Samarkand,
To send food to Talas,
As a gift,
To Khan Kenainym.
Since he fell ill,
Those people cut off the message,
Without communication,
And visit.

Kirgiz people in Talas,
Are in deep distress.

Fighting Famine Together

Bagetebay in Atbarsh,
Had no anxiety in mind,
Living a rich and peaceful life.

Soon,
He heard the situation in Talas:
The earth was barren,
All livestock almost dead,
Serious famine occurred everywhere.

Hearing the news,
Bagetebay was very worried.
Hard to close eyes while sleeping,
Meat was tasteless while eating.

He called on the folks,
To prepare nine thousand draft animals,
With rations and forage,
On the back of each one.
He led three hundred followers,
Driving the cattle,
Mightily,
To the direction of Talas.

Walking down the road,
He met an old man with red eyes and white beards.
Bagetebay blocked his way,
Asking his situation:

"Who are you,
Where are you going?
My name is Bagetebay,
Talas is the place I head for.

"I am driving nine thousand draft animals,
Carrying forage and food on their backs,
I am heading for Talas,
To visit my elder brother Kenainym,
And pay tribute to the mausoleum of Aykoler Manas."

"I heard some bad news,
Almost all the livestock in Talas froze to death.
I can't bear to stay at home,
I want to send enough food for three years,
To the stricken compatriots in Talas,
I am going to support and help in a hurry."

The old man said:
"My name is Jodar,
A man belonging to Jedigair tribe.
Kenainym and I are neighbors,
All the year round,
Our cattle graze in the same meadow.

"I have one meal every three days,
In tolerable health.
I think that up to this day,
Probably Kenainym has been already dead.

"Bagetebay,
You'd better listen to my advice,
Go back to live peacefully,
Do not leave your hometown.

"I will return to Jedigair tribe,
Taking care of my own hometown,

Finding enough draft animals,
Migrating to another place.
Kenainym has died,
Who will I be attached to,
Who can I count on?

"I have a nephew in Badak Mountain,
If I can't get to Jedigair tribe,
I can still get draft animals there.
Goodbye,
Bagetebay,
Young good boy."

The old man turned around to go forward,
Bagetebay understood immediately:
"There were lots of mysteries ago,
It was the old fox that made trouble.

"For a long time Timirbek has weakened,
The relationship between Tajik and Kirgiz.
I also heard that,
He had contact with Kangayi.

"When we held the funeral of my father,
None of Tajik people came,
It seems to be the old man that makes mischief,
Proving they have ulterior motives.

"The old fox will go to tell Timirbek,
Kenainym suffers from serious illness,
Talas suffers from rare disasters;
Kirgiz people are in trouble,
He will take the chance to promote Timirbek to dispatch troops,
To defeat Kenainym.

"I need to let him explain his intention,
I need to take him back hurriedly.

If I let others chase him,
It is slower than riding by myself.
In case he moves further,
Leading to irreversible consequences."
Thinking of this,
Bagetebay whipped horse to chase hastily.

Jodar went into a valley in the front,
Disappeared suddenly,
Without a trace.
Bagetebay followed along the mountain roads,
When reaching a hill,
Saw the exposed head of the old man,
Bagetebay thought:
"Troubles must arise if he runs away,
I need to stop him quietly."
Then he turned around and went to cattle track in hills,
In case alerting him and letting him escape.

"Young Bagetebay,
May be still looking at the mother argali running in hills."

Jodar rushed with chuckling at heart.
He whipped horse to go on his way,
With talking about the plot in his mind:
"If I can bring the troops of Tajik,
Before Bagetebay returns home,
It will kill two birds with one stone."
Jodar felt increasingly elated,
As if his plot had been carried out.

Bagetebay turned off into another path,
Overtook the slippery man quietly,
Had a close encounter,
With the damned old man,
Stopping before him.

Jodar just climbed over a hill,
With counting his chickens,
Suddenly saw Bagetebay,
Standing in his way.

"He has seen through my secret!"
Jodar got into a panic.
"How can I get rid of him?"
The old man was at a loss,
With no idea.

Bagetebay said as if nothing happened:
"Come on,
Old man Jodar,
Talas is suffering famine,
You need to go back with me,
To get enough food!"

Cunning Jodar said:
"Oh,
My baby Bagetebay,
I have some true words to only tell you.
Youth do not take hasty actions,
In case after getting hard to Talas,
You not only can't find Kenainym,
But also lose your reputation,
And your face."

Bagetebay lightly smiled:
"If what you say is truth,
We should go together.
We need to reach Talas as quickly as possible,
To visit hero Kenainym.

"If he is still alive,
We will come back after meeting him.
If he is really dead,

We will mourn to him in person.
Sharing the gifts,
With the folks.
Greeting the living people,
Saying goodbye to them and returning to hometown.
Without further ado,
We need to arrive earlier."

He whipped the steed of Jodar,
Then urged his horse to go ahead.

Speechless Jodar dared not to refuse to go,
Had to follow him:
"Oh,
My doom has come,
I am caught by my own trap!

"If Kenainym is really dead,
I will have a way out.
If he is still safe and sound,
It will be to walk into a trap."
Helpless Jodar,
Could only be lost in various fancies and conjectures.

"He is a broad-minded warrior,
Maybe he won't keep my fault in mind."
Jodar kept pondering:
What kind of disaster,
The lies he told will bring him.

When he left Khan Kenainym,
Qinekay asked him where to go,
He answered rudely at that time,
Every word was outrageous,
Every voice was unreasonable:
"Whether I go or not go,
It is my freedom.

Kenainym is suffering illness,
You'd better take a look at him.
Qinekay,
Do not meddle my affairs,
Live your own life,
Look after yourself."
He really regretted,
Being such rude at that time.

Gaining petty profit and being supercilious,
It is a foolish conduct.

Failing to fulfill the promise,
It is a thing done by base person.

Getting back what is sent by oneself,
It is a trick of slut.

Ungratefulness,
Ingratitude,
Which one has good end?

Overestimating yourself and offending exalted people,
The hapless one in the end must be yourself.
It is the rule ancestors paid attention to,
From ancient times,
It is the truth spreading among Kirgiz people,
From generation to generation.

Bagetebay fixed his eyes on Jodar,
Both horse and rider,
Driving him forward.
Jodar had no choice but to follow him,
Wanting to escape but having no way.

On the road to Talas,
They met a person.

The person rode a selected steed,
Running in a hurry.
Just looking at him from a distance,
Jodar identified him.
He was a lad named Garmanbye,
From Kenainym's home,
A servant who boiled water and cooked food for Kenainym.

Jodar burst into tears:
"Oh,
Bagetebay,
You can see Garmanbye running here,
Is there any bad news,
From Kenainym?

"The Arashi people with white felt hat,
How will they live in the future?
Kenainym was so brave,
To protect the masses,
And defend the invaders!"

Bagetebay watched carefully,
The old man raved heavily,
Making the chance to slip away.
Then he said calmly:
"Go ahead,
Jodar,
No one can escape from death!"
While speaking, he followed Jodar closely.

At this moment,
Garmanbye came to their side.
At sight of Bagetebay,
Garmanbye dared not to speak for knowing no details,
The face became yellow at once.
Garmanbye did not know Bagetebay,
Inconvenient to explain purpose to Jodar.

Seeing his situation,
Bagetebay asked actively:
"You ride a thoroughbred horse,
Wear expensive clothes,
But seem to be in a hasty mood.

"Lad,
Do not worry,
Tell your true situation.
Since you refuse to talk,
From your expression of behaviors,
I can guess some movement.

"Is Kenainym in good health?
The purpose of my trip is nothing,
But visiting him.
I am the Kara Kirgiz,
From Atbarsh."

As Bagetebay finished his words,
Tears already flowed on Garmanbye's face.
He was so distressed,
To start to talk with tears:
"Kenainym is still alive,
It is Kenainym who sent me.

"He lay down for illness some time ago,
While he can live easily now,
Drinking tea and having dinner,
Eventually folks remove the worried face,
To rest and relax.

"He told me as I left,
The old man Jodar,
Lived with him,
Eating and drinking at will every day.
But when Kenainym was sick,

He picked a steed,
Chose clothes for long journey,
And left without saying goodbye suddenly,
With no idea about what he would do.

"Qinekay went to his side,
And asked him in purpose,
Qinekay thought,
He was a friend of the khan,
With great relationships.

"No one could expect the answer:
'Qinekay,
Mind your own business.
Kenainym has fallen ill,
It is my freedom,
To decide where to go!'

"After three days,
Kenainym got better,
Inquired about the track of Jodar,
But no one knew where he went.

"The angry madam Qinekay,
Was hard to quell her grievances,
Crying about what happened.

"Faced with mad Qinekay,
After a silence,
Kenainym told her not to worry,
And quietly commanded me with care:
'Garmanbye,
Set off quickly,
If you can find Jodar,
Call him back.
If he refuses to obey you,
Escort him back tied up.

No more words for him,
Take him back by whipping,
Just like beating wool ball[1].

"'If he has left here,
Do not sleep or rest,
Ride fast,
All day and night,
To arrive at Atbarsh as soon as possible,
And tell Bagetebay the message,
Indicating it is me that send you.

"'Timirbek in Tajik,
The one always makes trouble for a long time,
Ask Bagetebay to watch out for him.'

"This is the purpose of my trip,
I never expect him to come here,
And walk with you.
You said you came from Atbarsh,
Are you Bagetebay according to the condition?"
After Garmanbye finished the words,
Bagetebay had understood.
But Jodar was anxious,
And shameful,
Sighing in despair standby.

Bagetebay hurried to say:
"Garmanbye,
Set off quickly,
I will watch the old fox along the way.
Go back to the khan fast,
To tell him Bagetebay is rushing here."

1 Beating wool ball: One kind of collective labor of Kirgiz, people gather together and whip the collected wool with branches repeatedly, making it fluffy.

Hearing his words,
Garmanbye put the heart down,
Like a stone falling to the ground.

Soft,
Smooth,
There was no beard on his face,
He rushed into Kenainym's yurt directly.
Arriving in high spirits,
With happiness on the eyebrows,
He even forgot to bow to salute.

Seeing Garmanbye come in,
Kenainym started to ask:
"Garmanbye,
Do you accomplish the matter I arrange to you?
The cunning old man Jodar,
Has he been already caught?"

Highly delighted Garmanbye,
Said with wiping sweat:
"When I was on the way,
I ran into Bagetebay,
He did not come alone,
But with the old man Jodar.
Now they have approached the gate,
I need to go back to greet them."

He rushed out of the gate,
In a tearing hurry,
He wore yellow leather trousers,
Trouser legs sway back and forth,
Hem of the coat waved in the air.

Garmanbye came out and saw,
Bagetebay driving Jodar,
Just got to the gate.

Bagetebay told him:
"I deliver the old fox into your hands,
You need to escort him into a yurt,
Make him wear shackles!"

Bagetebay entered the house,
Saluting devoutly to Kenainym,
With hands on the chest.

Kenainym talked to him:
"You are welcome,
Bagetebay,
Please hold out your hand,
It was me that buried Galgezak in person,
I tell you something in my heart:
You are his only son,
The patron of Kara Kirgiz.

"I need to appreciate your respects,
Please sit above the salt quickly.
I am the elder brother,
You are the younger brother,
We are always in the same boat."

Bagetebay said:
"The matter that Talas suffered disasters,
I did not know in time.
When hearing about it,
I hurried to set out.

"I heard Talas had a critical shortage of food and forage,
A mount of cattle froze and starved to death.
You also suffered from serious illness,
Still worrying about the people's livelihood every day.

"Hearing the news,
I could not stay calm,

Then prepared horses and camels,
More than nine thousand totally.
Making people put food and forage into sacks,
Making draft animals carry them and set out.

"On the way here,
I encountered with the old man Jodar,
Jodar told me,
He lived in the same place as you,
Saying your illness was quite serious,
He was heading for Badak Mountain,
To find animals for riding.

"He also said Kenainym had died of illness,
Letting me not come here,
Unable to see a living person,
And losing my face.

"These words made me doubt him:
He belongs to Jedigair tribe,
Why did he go to Badak Mountain to find horses?
We ever invited Timirbek,
But he did not come to attend my father's funeral.
The damned old man Jodar,
Went on the way to Tajik,
It was a cause for alarm to me.

"I let him and his horse leave at first,
Then followed him to pry,
To figure out the truth about him.
I found his increasing dubious points,
Then drove him here,
Delivered him into Garmanbye's hands,
And made him wear shackles just in case."

Hero Kenainym,
Heard the things Bagetebay talked about,

Thanked him for his affection and timely help,
Appreciated his intelligence and alertness,
Entertained him more thoughtfully.

Bagetebay rested for two days,
Talking freely with Kenainym.
Then batch after batch of camels and horses,
Arrived with carrying food and forage.
Talas suffered disaster and harvested nothing for one year,
But now storehouses were filled with food,
Every family had enough food.

Originally all the big livestock here had frozen to death,
But now on tamarisk beach and marshland,
Camels and horses in flocks,
Cattle and sheep all around.
Even an endless stream of the people in Kankole,
Came to Talas after getting the news.

Kenainym asked people to treat them warmly,
And distributed food and livestock to them,
According to the number of people and dead livestock in every household.

Bagetebay reached Talas,
Caught Jodar on the road,
Kenainym got better,
Had lived healthily and moved freely.

Andijan, Kokand, Marglang,
Namangan, Tashkent, Samarkand,
They knew the news successively.
Leaders of the places made a discussion,
Requiring every family to donate:
Which has camels donates camels,
Which has horses donates horses,
Although more horses and less camels were donated,

No family was missed.

Countless food and clothes,
Were carried on the backs of draft animals,
Ninety thousand totally,
Setting off mightily.

When Bagetebay was distributing,
The food and forage he took there,
The ninety thousand livestock driven by people in Kokand,
Had entered Talas.

Talas kept the food and clothes,
But no one needed livestock:
It was hard for comers to drive them back,
Livestock in flocks had to be left in the wild.
People in Talas had ample food and clothing,
Resuming the past of prosperity day by day.
They lived a safe and healthy life every day,
Going to new prosperity.

Let us stop talking about these things,
Let us sing about,
The more mysterious stories of Kenainym.

Kenainym Launched an Expedition to Fight the Wicked

Kenainym Fought against the Witch Kublegen with Wits and Courage

Day after day,
Year after year,
No one knew how much time passed.
Lion Kenainym,
Never left his hometown,
Did nothing earthshaking.

One day he felt intolerable loneliness,
Like chest congestion,
Indignantly.
He hardly fell asleep at night,
Restless mind,
Itchy hand,
And twitching calf.
He could neither sit,
Nor lie,
Without a peaceful moment.

He seemed to foresee some event:
"What is wrong with me,
What will happen to me?
Let it go,
Leave the fate to heaven!"

He pondered in the mind:
"Kankole with seven river valleys,
All the Kirgiz people with white felt hats,
Jedigair in Jetsu,
I will patrol them,

To have a close look."

Hero Kenainym made the plan,
Renewed the vigor,
Rode the horse,
Towards Kankole with seven river valleys,
Towards every place Kirgiz people lived in,
Towards mountains and rivers where the people with white felt hat grazed,
Setting out for the cruise.

Fat camels, horses and cattle were everywhere,
He saw Kirgiz people living prosperous lives,
Passing merchants cast admiring eyes.

"My rich hometown,
My safe and healthy tribe,
I will go there to have a look,
How does the people in Jedigair tribe live?"
He went over Kankole with these thoughts,
Letting the horse Kankura trot forward,
To the direction of Jedigair.

He met a girl on the road,
With her earlock flying in the wind.
"Girl,
Where are you from?
Where is your home?"
Before he finished his words,
The girl pouted to Kenainym,
Turned into a male argali at once.
Standing arrogantly in the front.

The Lion wanted to catch the argali,
Riding forward directly.
The white argali turned around to escape,
To not be caught by the horse Kankura.

Kenainym kept chasing,
Steed Kankura stretched the legs with its head raised,
left a cloud of dust behind it.
Kenainym was approaching,
the spear in his hand,
Looked sparkling in the sunlight.

The argali could not escape,
Keeping trembling all over,
It turned into a secluded place,
Disappearing without a trace.

Kenainym chased with watching,
Saw a beautiful girl,
Washing and combing her hair,
Beside a spring not far away.
Not seeing the argali,
Kenainym looked around,
At that time the beautiful girl,
Started to ask him:

"Blue eyes,
Yellow face,
Tell me who you are quickly,
You'd better rein on the precipice,
I do not allow you to go over me!

"Actually I know your name with no need to ask,
I have always wanted to fight against you face to face.
Your name is Kenainym,
My name is Kublegen.

"You are called Yellow-faced Death warrior,
I am the nemeses king of warriors.
Among many warriors in the underground world,
Including the defiant Boronbay,
Riding the horse Bozchaer,

They were all defeated by me.
Boronbay kneeled down to beg for mercy,
I not only spared his life,
But also gave him a copper whip,
Making him renowned among the giants of the west.

"Now no one goes for amusement with me,
I come above the ground to find you,
Unexpectedly running into you here,
It saves me a trip to Talas.

"In order to draw your attention,
I turned into a beautiful girl,
But you did not look at me one more time,
Then I turned again into an argali.
I pretended to escape for being afraid of you,
You chased after me without thinking.
You do not distinguish anything carefully,
I think you are no different from idiots.

"The boundless world is full of wonders,
Each one is more powerful than another one.
The world of rebirth,
Always cycles from this life to the next.
In previous eras,
In underground world,
There was a man named Kubleky,
Jurendo was ever his master.

"He took wooden mortar as horse,
Wooden pestle as whip,
And memorized seventy thousand magics.
The people encountering him unfortunately,
Were all panicked,
Crying painfully with faces covered.

"Son of Aelman, Toshtuk,

Lured by Kubleky,
Started a tough fight for several days.

"Toshtuk is insidious and murderous,
No hero can defeat him in the world.
Kubleky died unfortunately,
His fate was so miserable.

"Among the seven giants of underground world,
None of them can match the cattiness of Toshtuk,
Either surrendering to him,
Or killed by his spear.

"Son of Aelman, Toshtuk,
Returned above the ground afterwards,
It made the warriors of underground world,
Extremely dejected.
After Kubleky died,
I become the only hero of underground world.
When hero Toshtuk returned,
I followed him to come to the world.

"Prick up your ears to listen carefully,
You, the hero of human,
Why do you have no tolerance and mercy,
The invincible Jurendo,
The leader of demons living for eight thousand years,
Was killed cruelly by you.

"It was you that killed Jurendo,
I was on the spot at that time,
The Alemabash Gun,
Inherited from Almanbet,
Was slung over your shoulder.

"I am not afraid to meet with you,
I always want to fight against you in my heart,

Like rising fire.

"For many years,
I have waited for you day and night.
I haven't slept for days,
Looking for your trace,
Today you come finally.

"When I turned into the argali to flee,
I had used magic to lengthen the road;
Now it needs forty days to walk,
From Talas to here.

"Today you do not take the Alemabash Gun,
You seem to be unable to escape from death."
Arrogant Kublegen spoke vicious words.

Hero Kenainym burst into a fury,
With fire flashing in his eyes,
Murderously.
He shouted:
"Hey,
Kublegen,
Sly bitch,
I will let you die in my hand!"

"Wooden mortar as horse,
Wooden pestle as whip,
Crooked iron rod in the hand,
You want to dominate the world.
Jurendo was called king of demons,
Teaching you these shameless tricks.

"Arrogant Jurendo,
Ever declared,
It was he that rotated the earth,
But he died in my hand at last!

Because my ancestor is the hero Manas,
Who dares to be my enemy?

"I will hit you hard,
Riding Kankura to stomp you into cutlet,
After a while, you will cry with runny nose,
Begging me for mercy!"

Kenainym finished his words,
Then the witch washing and combing her hair,
Beautiful Kublegen,
Became purple with rage.

She stood up rapidly,
Rode the wooden mortar immediately,
Used the wooden pestle to whip.
Fire sparkled in her eyes,
The crooked iron rod held in her hands,
Kept swaying in the air.

The damned demon,
With shield on the back,
Kept wielding the crooked iron rod,
Making people dazzled,
And overwhelmed.

She took mill as armor,
Close to the chest;
She took stick for frying wheat as spear,
Grabbed in the hand;
She took hand saver[1] as stirrup,
Pedaling hard.

1 Hand saver: A pair of felt pad connected by a string. Kirgiz people use it to hold hot pot.

Taking flour cloth[1] as twine cloth,
Wrapping two kneecaps;
Using headscarf to cover mouth,
Exposing only hideous eyes;
Farting like drumming,
Making sounds at times.

The wooden mortar under her,
Dashed like horse;
She kicked the wooden mortar,
Charging madly towards Kenainym.

Thick and powerful back and shoulders,
Steadfast heart like lead,
Hard arms like stone,
Kenainym stood still there.
Kublegen became more aggressive,
As if she would swallow someone,
With ferocious look,
Thrusting hard and attacking fiercely.

She thrust twice,
Kenainym still did not move.
As strong as mountain,
Kenainym never took her attack seriously.

When she attacked the third time,
He raised the spear,
Thrusting hard at her to fight back.
Spearhead bounced back,
Like hitting against a stone.
"Is her body stone?"
Kenainym was surprised.

He fixed his eyes and watched carefully,

1 Flour cloth: Linen cloth used for hand-made noodles.

Indeed a stone was speared by him.
While Kublegen had disappeared,
She was so proficient in magic.

Kublegen laughed:
"I am Kublegen,
You are Kenainym,
I am the only one who dares to challenge you.
If I do not cut off your heart and eat it,
My illustrious name can be removed from the world!

"Why do I dare to challenge you today?
Because I can contend with you.
Kenainym, you do not have many skills,
You have lots of unknown things,
And a great many unsuspecting things!"

The loathsome Kublegen shouted,
Wooden mortar under her knee,
Seemed to be crushed.

"Hit transversely,
My crooked iron rod,
Never let him go;
Hack vertically,
My crooked iron rod,
Never let him survive!"

Crooked iron rod in her hand,
Kublegen hacked and stabbed with roar.
Under the rod,
Raging fire occurred.

Kenainym fought on horseback,
Instead of sword,
He clenched a spear,
And stabbed intrepidly,

Towards the crooked iron rod of the laughing bitch.

The attack of Kenainym worked wonder,
The spear was seized from Jurendo.
It made the crooked iron rod,
Stiff and straight,
Lose its effect.

When Kenainym turned around to stab again,
The loathsome Kublegen,
Had a hiccup with "Ko Deng",
Followed by roar with laughter.
She took the stick for frying wheat as weapon,
So sharp to cut stone into halves.

Ferocious and ignominious Kublegen,
Farted loudly at times,
Making dust blow on the ground,
Sky seemed to be covered with heavy fog.

Aiming at the butt of Kenainym,
She stabbed hard with the stick.
"I give him the fatal blow,
Which must penetrate his kidney."
Kublegen thought proudly,
Withdrawing from battlefield with riding wooden mortar.

Careless Kenainym thought originally:
"What can she do to me?"
Upper buttock was speared unexpectedly,
Blood flew from the wound immediately.

Furious Kenainym,
His moustache became upright with rage.
Shouting the slogan Manas,
He wielded the spear to stab Kublegen.

Kublegen dare not confront,
Flustered for a while.
As the spear came to her,
She turned the wooden mortar into stone.
Standing on it with dilated eyes,
She looked like a crow on decomposed corpses.

Kenainym thrust hard with the spear,
At the stony wooden mortar,
Immediately stone crumbled into powder.

Losing the beloved precious steed,
Kublegen became extremely terrified.
She thought:
"If Kenainym thrust again,
He will take my life."

She used magic at once,
To make a high mountain arise between them,
It was too high for eagle to fly over,
And for Kenainym to attack her.

Sitting on the peak with oblique eyes wide open,
She raised the voice to shout:
"Hey,
Kenainym,
How many abilities do you have?
You have been trapped in the mountain.

"When your steed is skin and bones,
When lice on your body are as fat as skylark,
You will beg me to let you out.

"I will make you suffer the hell-like hardships,
I will make your sapphire-like eyes blind.
I will make you crave me to end your life,
To escape the pain making life worse than death.

"I will enter the underground world,
To tell all the people there:
It is me that defeat Kenainym,
My reputation will spread,
Aboveground and underground.

"Instead of killing you easily,
I will torture you for whole three years.
Your blood will be sucked up,
Vessels will be filled with water again.

"I will draw and fill repeatedly three times a day,
Making you hard to choose life or death.
Your body will have intolerable pain from head to foot,
Like roasted with fire and fried with oil.

"Except in this way,
I will never have whole fun.
I will torture you for thirty-six months,
Revenging for my master Jurendo."

The magic of Kublegen was boundless,
While with the blessing of heaven,
Kenainym could expose and overcome her magical tricks,
One by one.

The horse Kankura under his knee,
Had God-given spirituality,
Infinitely capable.
When looking for Aytumsh,
It flew over towering mountains,
With its legs bowed.

On the precious steed,
Kenainym whipped hard.
The inspired horse Kankura,

Jumped the mountains with a leap.

Watching her own magic seen through,
Kublegen became distraught at once.

She transformed into a male camel,
Rushing out of the thorn bush in gobi.
Her mouth foamed,
Her teeth were gnashed.
Her camel hair fell everywhere,
Her feet made sand fly in the air,
She ran madly to crash into Kenainym.

Fearless Kenainym,
Had inherent power.
He wielded the legend whip high,
Hitting hard towards the head of male camel.
The whip of Kenainym had tremendous force,
Anyone who angered him,
Deserved to suffer from bad luck.

Whipped at the neck,
Kublegen almost fainted in the ground.
She struggled to hold on,
Turned again into a chough in a flash.

The chough was about to fly far away,
Kenainym had sharp eyes and quick hands,
Raising sword to hack hard.
Twelve tail feathers and ten wing feathers of the chough,
Were cut off and fell to the ground.

Wanting to fly without wing feathers,
Wanting to land without tail feathers,
"I really have no method,
But how can I die in this way?"
Thinking so,

Kublegen worked another magic.

Smelly fog started to flow suddenly,
Followed by the strike of snowstorm.
Fierce wind began to howl,
As if thousands of wild dogs were barking.
The earth was covered with thick snow,
It was hard to distinguish deep ditch and low slope.
Trees standing straight around dazzled people,
Wild shrieks and howls came from deep in the woods.
All the creatures of nature in sight,
Would freeze to death.

Kenainym looked over,
Seeing one set of faint footprints in the snow,
He let Kankura bite bridles,
Following the footprints to rush forth.
Thick snow was up to the saddle bow on horseback,
The horse became exhausted after just a while.

Walking with difficulty for two days and three nights,
Kenainym got to snowless land finally.

There was a dense forest,
He wanted to go through it.
Suddenly blazing fire appeared in the front,
All the trees were burning,
Everywhere was full of smoke.

Then Kenainym remembered,
His grandmother Ayichulek ever presented a dagger to him,
The dagger had magical power.

Omnipotent Ayichulek,
She was a fairy from heaven.

Kenainym drew his dagger,

The blazing fire,
Disappeared at once.

He grabbed the dagger,
Going on to rush into the smoky forest.
Then a lion,
Came out to pounce on him.
It had huge head with scraggly yellow hair,
Its thin waist had great strength,
Its gaping jaws were drooling,
Its roar made leaves tremble and fly around.

Fearless Kenainym,
Whipped the horse on.
He grasped the lion's neck,
Lifting it high.
Its eyes squirted from their sockets,
Opened mouth could not breathe.

"This lion has no magic,
What can he do to it?"
Kublegen watching aside,
Felt extremely disappointed.

Kenainym strangled the lion,
Getting to a daban.
He thought it was also the haunting demon,
Then drew the sword,
Cutting the daban into halves.

Kublegen finally understood,
Matching strength against Kenainym,
Whoever wanted to win,
Had totally wishful thinking.

Kublegen thought back by heart:
"Falling in the hand of the descendant of Manas,

Who can survive?
Kezriarip with vulture tail,
Was killed by Kenainym;
Akem and Shakem, the two giants,
Were defeated by him.

"Sumargan and Surmargan,
They have already died in battlefield.
Boronbay riding gray horse,
could not even use my copper whip,
His weapons,
Were all swept away by Kenainym.

"Haribek riding black dapple horse,
He led a large group of heroes,
In the fight with Kenainym,
No one was left,
All were killed.

"Jurendo lived for eight thousand years,
Making countless myths,
Everyone in devildom worshiped him as grandmaster,
But his soul was also taken away by Kenainym.

"Since I know these cases,
Why insist on asking for trouble?
I know his fierceness,
Why still challenge him?

"Taking wooden mortar as horse,
It is the skill I learnt from Jurendo.
Jurendo has been killed by Kenainym,
Why do I come here to pick a quarrel?

"Six years have gone,
But I torture myself here.
Now rather than I die needlessly,

It is better to work my magic again,
Luring him to the Cave,
Step by step.

"If there is still no method,
Displaying my means to provoke a confrontation among humans.
Khan Shermat governing Baghdad,
Was a fearless mass murderer.
I will head for Baghdad,
Luring Kenainym to Shermat.

"Until then,
Kenainym will be tired out,
Having no strength to wield spear.
His steed will become weak and powerless,
Unable to act as now,
Tireless,
Running wildly day and night.
Until then,
Kenainym will be sure to surrender."

Kublegen tried to find methods in this way,
Luring with fake smile,
Disappearing and reappearing in the front of Kenainym.

"I have no wings,
Unable to fly into the sky.
If I remake wings,
The dagger of Kenainym,
Will still cut them off.

"For so many days,
I fight with him tiredly,
Originally thinking I could defeat him.
Now it appears that,
I am a smart aleck."

Kublegen thought of these,
With heart as vicious as wolf,
Laughed out loud slyly:
"Look how I cheat you again."
Turned around and transformed into a lively girl.

The girl wobbled as if she was drunk,
Harsh voice came from the mouth:
"Come to have a look who I am."
Approaching Kenainym,
As brazenly as a bitch.

Her crooked iron rod had already melted,
Nothing could embolden her.
She held the stick for frying wheat as spear,
Feeling anxious and stressed.
She wielded the stick high,
Face becoming dry and yellow,
Nose and eyes looking ferocious,
Rushing towards Kenainym to start a battle.

Kenainym stayed calm,
Avoiding her spear,
He reached out to catch,
Locking her wrist.

Not to be outdone,
The tricky bitch turned into a snake,
Slipping down quickly from the hand of Kenainym.

The earth opened to a deep slit,
Like a winding stream,
The snake dived into the slit,
Hiding itself without a trace.

After less than the blinking of an eye,
She clapped her hands,

With some sneers:
"Haha, hehe!"

"Where is the bitch on earth?"
Kenainym looked with turning the horse,
She turned into a lame fox,
Hobbling to the distance.

When Kenainym approached her,
She turned again into a gazelle,
And sped the escape,
Jumping swiftly over mountains and ravines.
Over six gobis,
Over seven rivers.
Speeding with erect ears,
Horse Kankura finally found her around the gazelles.

She turned into a rabbit this time,
Lying close to the ground.
As Kankura leapt over it,
She ran away with jumping,
Seeking a hole to drill into the earth.

Horse Kankura turned head immediately,
To tread its body again.

Kenainym urged the horse,
With dagger held in his hand.

Seeing the dagger,
The "rabbit" panicked,
Never able to find the hole into the earth.

Forced by mighty Kenainym,
She turned again into an old woman,
Drooping lips,
Few teeth,

Bald head,
And disheveled white hair on the nape,
Standing by the road,
Pathetically.

Kenainym thought:
"Whether camel or ant,
I will kill all the creatures I meet!
If I do not,
She will escape from my eyes."
So Kenainym raised the spear,
Aiming at the old woman.

At the instant of being thrust,
She turned again into a mouse,
Fleeing to the crack of a heap of pebbles.

After a while,
She turned again into a female argali,
Hind legs hardly kept pace with front legs while running,
Just on the opposite hillside.

Kenainym saw her at a glance,
And whipped Kankura for three times.
The horse jumped with dust and sand blowing,
Running after her closely.

Five hillocks,
Six ridges,
Fell behind them one after another.

When over a hill,
An old man riding a gray donkey,
Came to him just right.
He said:
"Hey,
Kenainym,

I am Akichan,
I shook hands with Manas.
Seeing what you suffered,
I can't stand by.
If you listen to me,
And reach out like your great-grandfather,
I will give you a hand,
To catch Kublegen and send her to you."

He said:
"Akichan,
When did I ask you for help?
Besides,
What do you come here for?

"If you stand in the way,
You are the same as my enemy,
I will kill you without mercy,
You should expect nothing from me."

Like the sky about to rain,
The complexion of Kenainym,
Had become livid,
Without any ruddy part.

He held the spear,
Threatening the old man.
The Akichan transformed by Kublegen,
Turned into a wolf and ran away.

She ran across hills and barranca,
Planning to continue tricking Kenainym,
She thought if he was led to the Koycap Cave,
To the witch,
She would get help and support.

Though Kankura was an animal,

It had spirituality,
And lots of strategies.
It blocked the wolf,
Making her find no way to the cave.

The ferocious bitch had no method,
She transformed into a tortoise suddenly,
Lying on the ground quietly.

Kenainym still wanted to whip the horse on,
But Kankura stopped.
Kenainym looked carefully,
Also found the tortoise lying on the ground.

"Here is not the habitat of tortoise,
No rivers or lakes nearby,
It can not be a tortoise,
But the cunning devil."
At the thought,
Kenainym wanted to turn around to end its life.

"Magic is seen through again,
I must die this time."
With no time to think,
Kublegen turned into a jerboa,
Going on fleeing and hiding.

Kenainym, huge as a hill,
Chased after a mouse, small as knee.
This was the trick used by the devil,
And the predestined scenario in their lives.

It was hard to defeat the opponent,
The mouse had no choice but to flee to desert.
Wishing to escape from Kenainym.
The cunning Kublegen,
Had no idea now.

Then she commanded herself to keep calm,
To figure out new intrigues:
"Khan Shermat of Jute,
Baghdad Castle is his territory,
Now I need manage to go there.
"The daughter of khan is better than me,
We are close friends,
There must be no problem to ask her for help.

"Khan Shermat is really powerful,
His one hundred warriors are very competent,
Combined with two witches, princess and me,
If Kenainym get there,
There must be only coming in,
No going back."

Kublegen thought in this way,
Her body became larger gradually,
Turning into a beautiful woman.
The woman looked fair,
Gorgeously dressed,
As beautiful as red flowers.
She approached Kenainym with coquetting,
Flattering and flirting,
Speaking in a sweet voice:

"Kenainym,
Let us have a good talk,
I do not come here for hatred,
How can I want to be your enemy?

"I ever learnt magic,
Just wishing to see your courage.
Unfortunately there is a rule of Jelimowuz[1],

1 Jelimowuz: Kirgiz term, means devil.

Women learning magic can't get married for life,
Otherwise I will marry you.

"Khan of Jute, Shermat,
He has a beautiful daughter,
The girl heard something about you,
Sending me to meet you.
Now I set out from here,
To take your message to her.

"You'd better marry the girl,
This is the kindness I want to express.
I test you for others,
Bringing you lots of hardship and grievance.
My conditions are worse than yours,
Often suffering for no reason,
With no support all my life.

"Khan of Jute, Shermat,
Is fighting at Baghdad today,
He makes Baghdad and Iran,
Get into unprecedented catastrophe.

"Shermat hates Baghdad,
Which has no many soldiers and horses,
He makes a war,
To take a chance to occupy it.

"There is no king in Baghdad,
So they are defeated repeatedly.
With the support of Iran,
Baghdad city keeps safe narrowly.

"If you marry the daughter of Shermat,
And govern the whole Baghdad,
You will have your own place as a hero.
In the petty Talas,

You always move from place to place,
Endlessly.
If you can achieve these goals,
You will have a life without regrets!

"Some frictions ever happened between us,
You needn't hold a grudge.
I will go to visit my friend,
Then we can have a heart-to-heart talk,
Treating each other with hospitality.

"If you do not listen to me,
One hundred warriors of Shermat,
And his daughter with superb witchcraft,
I will gather them together.

"Chopping off your head,
Roasting and eating your meat as mutton.
You ever killed so many lives,
Your blood debts must be repaid in kind!"

Kublegen finished her words at a breath,
Kenainym said with a sneer:
"Kublegen, listen,
Never wish to do this to me!
If I want to get married,
I must find a virtuous and beautiful woman.
You and the daughter of Shermat,
I even refuse to take a look.

"Hurry up,
Send the words to them.
No hiding,
No lying.

"Two witches,
One hundred warriors,

Your leader is Khan Shermat,
Is such strength worth showing off?
You even have no shame,
To invade the people without a king!"

Just after the hero finished,
Kublegen went on speaking:
"Kenainym, with a little fame,
You become so supercilious.
Shermat won't marry his daughter to you,
Never giving you even a single wool.
You doom has come,
You can't escape from death."

Kublegen was utterly discomfited,
Combing her temples and turning around to leave.

"I won't go through the places with many people,
In case she plays hide-and-seek,
To work magic again,
I will go forward along the edge of desert,
Baghdad can be reached in three days."
Kenainym made this plan,
Riding fast,
At full speed,
Dust raised by hooves flew into the sky.

Shameless Kublegen,
Seemed not to want him to get lost,
Disappearing and reappearing nearby in purpose.

Kublegen ran so fast to be out of breath,
As if her chest was exploded.
She had despaired of her life:
"Now I get into trouble with him,
It is my bad luck."

Insidious Kublegen,
Got to Baghdad finally.

Shermat and His Daughter Were Killed for Doing Evil

Baghdad had no king at that time,
Khan Shermat took the chance to occupy it.
Innocent people lost their homes,
Suffering unprecedented hardship of war.

"We have no king,
No strength to fight against you,
We have dromedaries in flocks,
Gold and jewels also fill storehouses,
You can take as many as you want,
Just please do not disturb our peaceful life!"

Plain people begged,
But Shermat ignored them.
He sent his men,
To catch headmen of the tribes there,
Torturing and humiliating them.

King of Iran saw the scenes,
Leading troops to fight alongside Iraqis,
Bodies lying everywhere,
Blood flowing like stream,
The war made people suffer.

From Iran and Iraq,
Shermat kidnapped fifteen hostages.
He gave a cruel order,
To open and torture them.

Just at that time,
Kenainym arrived at the scene,
"Who are you about to dispose of?"
He asked the guards of Shermat.
None of them answered,
Who still held the dagger,
And rushed to the hostages.

Just when executioners raised knives,
Kenainym shouted harshly:
"Stop,
Do not kill them without cause!"
The executioners were terrified,
With knives thrown,
Transfixed.

Kenainym asked some people,
To rescue all the bound hostages.
He queried those executioners:
"Who are they on earth?"
The executioners were frightened,
Unable to open mouth,
Afraid to answer.

Kenainym asked the rescued people,
"Why are you put to death?
Tell me the reason clearly."

A man of medium height,
Articulate,
Answered as followed:
"These executioners,
All of them were the men of Shermat.

"King of Baghdad,
Passed away last year,
Leaving the civilians here,

And his four-year-old child."

"To occupy Baghdad,
Khan of Jute, Shermat invaded here.
We took out lots of goods,
To persuade them to return.
But khan of Jute rejected,
And ignored the Iranians who persuaded.

"Iranians could not convince them,
Then helped the people in Baghdad.
Both sides went to war,
They kidnapped us in tangled warfare.

"Their leader made a command,
Hanging our bloody head,
With their spearhead.

"Unable to continue fighting against,
Iranians had to decide to retreat from battlefield,
While Shermat was planning,
To launch a new attack,
To occupy Baghdad."

After hearing this,
Kenainym called over an executioner:
"You need to hurry back,
To tell Khan Shermat,
Everything you saw and heard here,
Ask him to come immediately,
To contest with me.

"As a khan,
How does he deserve to rule over the civilians?
The weak country with only widows and orphans,
Was violated without reason!"

"If he is a brave khan,
He should possess lofty character.
I will never forgive him,
For his inhuman act!

"About his exact details,
I have known from Kublegen.
Saying that he is invading Baghdad,
Ravaging and harassing the people there.
If he is a hero,
Ask him to come to meet me."

The executioner returned at once after hearing,
Delivering all the words of Kenainym,
With nothing left.

Shermat said after hearing the words:
"Who is so bold,
With no confessing to me?
No bowing to me!

"How dare he stop my people,
And rescue the sinners?
He seems to regard me as his peer,
Sending person to ask me to meet him!

"Knock drums for expedition,
Gather together immediately and set out.
March the ruleless madcap to my front,
To accept the penalty!

"He mentioned Kublegen,
Who is she?"

Shermat shouted,
Loud drums and horns,
Noisy people and horses.

He rallied the troop in a hurry,
Setting out to the outside mightily.

Earth was shaking,
Dust was blowing,
Sunny day seemed to become overcast,
Floating dust covered the sun in the sky.

Hundred warriors of Shermat,
Each one could fight against one hundred enemies.
They shouted:
"Where is Kenainym?
I will thrust him to death firstly,
To let him know my power!"
The warriors scrambled,
To rush towards Kenainym.

Kenainym on the back of Kankura,
Held the spear,
His body looked like Oboler Mountain,
Poised,
Imposing.

Shermat saw his back,
Thinking:
"He is so imposing,
A true hero."
He ordered the one hundred warriors,
To catch Kenainym.

One hundred warriors swarmed,
To jump at Kenainym.
In the eyes of Hero Kenainym,
They were like flies and mosquitoes.
He raised the sharp iron spear,
Shouted the slogan of Manas,
Fighting alone bravely.

He killed two warriors with one thrust,
Turned around to kill another five warriors,
Rushed to enemies opposite to kill another seven warriors,
Took advantage of a slope,
To strike down fifty warriors at one blow!

After just one turn in the beginning,
There were only thirty-six alive,
Of the one hundred arrogant warriors,
But he kept thrusting around.

"If I lose the rest of warriors,
My forces will be more powerless."
Thinking of this,
Shermat ordered sixty thousand soldiers,
To rush into the battlefield together,
Surrounding Kenainym.

The descendant of hero Manas,
Bristled with anger,
Fighting spirit became higher.
The swarming soldiers,
Were hacked with blood flowing like river,
Were killed with bodies lying everywhere.

Look at the fighting hero on horse,
Like a wolf rushing into flocks of sheep,
The hero Kenainym daring to fight and struggle,
Was like a general from heaven.

Seeing the scenes,
Shermat felt overwhelmed,
Having no choice.
Then Kublegen came to him,
Telling about the context of the unparalleled hero:

"Hello,
Khan Shermat,
I come here especially for supporting you.
The man is Kenainym,
A descendant of Manas.

"He was born with rudeness and arrogance,
If any people make him angry,
Their wives will become widows,
Their family business will decline from then on.

"Six years ago,
I started to challenge him.
I was called the bane of men,
In underground world,
No man dared to fight against me.

"To conquer Kenainym,
I was well prepared,
Staying at his hometown for six years,
Luring him here at last.

"I ever used crooked iron rod and gray spear,
To fight against him for many times,
But could not match his strength.
I had no choice but to drill into underground world,
He blocked my entrance.
I worked lots of magics,
All were destroyed by him one by one.

"I planned to lure him into the Cave,
Letting many witches kill him together,
But he never yielded an inch,
Making my plan fall through.

"I have no method,
But to come here to cooperate with you,

Let us deal with the enemy together.

"Your daughter Betirekay,
We ever learnt magic together from demons,
At a very early age.

"I will go to find Betirekay,
To bring her here.
Let us deal with Kenainym together,
I think it is the best method.

"Most of your warriors have died in battle,
Most of your soldiers are also dead or injured.
Khan Shermat,
Think,
He is about to attack you.
What will your prospect be?
Only by cooperating with me,
Can you preserve your life.
This is my intention,
My name is Kublegen."

Instigated by her,
Khan Shermat immediately sent Kublegen,
To call for Betirekay.

At the very time,
There were fifteen army deserters in Baghdad,
Delivering the news that Kenainym fought fiercely in battlefront,
Baghdad people and Iranians were delighted.

In the enemy position,
Kenainym routed enemy soldiers again and again,
Like killing sheep in the flock,
They were forced to escape into the city.

Khan Shermat went into battle at that time,

And had already set a trap secretly.
He had expected,
He would have a battle with Kenainym sooner or later.

On the only way of Kenainym,
He asked people to dig many huge pits,
And cover them with branches,
Making the surface remain the same.

Death and life,
Tangled battle went on,
Shermat pretended to flee,
Came to the side of pit and shouted:
"Kenainym,
Come to kill me,
I am Khan Shermat of Jute!"
Luring Kenainym to chase.

When enemies come face to face,
Their eyes blaze with hatred,
Kenainym felt furious.
His whip hit hard,
With snapping,
Towards the horse Kankura under him.
Smart Kankura,
Felt the pit underground.
It bowed the legs to jump,
Like a flying dragon,
Over the underground trap.

Khan Shermat rode the horse Kazbuden,
Rushing towards Kenainym:

Sword in his belt was gleaming,
Hammer in his hand was shining,
Crescent battleax was hanging on his back,
His horse was whipped with neighing.

Compared with many valiant warriors,
This guy was the real villain.

Shermat had a ferocious face,
Wielded a hammer weighing sixty Batman[1],
With full strength,
To hack hard at the helmet of Kenainym.
How could the helmet withstand such strike?
It became squashed immediately.

Hearing the sound,
Soldiers of Khan Shermat,
Rode forward.

They thought:
"Khan Shermat collects the blood debt for the dead,
No one's head can withstand the strike of hammer.
After the sound made by the strike,
Kenainym will roll down to the ground,
Blood will spurt from the mouth,
Brains will flow from the nostrils."
They came to surround him,
Like frightened wild bees.

Hero Kenainym,
Was born to be unusual.
As if nothing had happened,
He threw the flattened helmet,
With a blink.

He was fearless,
Risking his life to fight against fierce enemy.
He was the descendant of Manas,
Fighting in battlefield was in his blood.

1 Batman: A unit of weight in ancient Kirgiz, varies from place to place, approximately between 180 kilograms to 300 kilograms.

He put the crescent battleax as wide as door,
Onto his shoulder,
When Shermat attacked again from the front,
He aimed at the opponent,
With eyes wide open,
Licked his lips,
Hacked hard at the chest of enemy with battleax.

With sharp eyes and quick hands,
Shermat dodged swiftly,
To avoid the attack,
The crescent battleax hacked at the ground.
The ground opened suddenly,
A stream poured,
Water flowed and splashed.

Without a break to rest,
Shermat raised the spear,
Rushing again arrogantly.
Horse Kazbuden clopped,
The earth was shocked,
Starting to shake,
As if it would sink and turn into an ocean.

The spear from Shermat,
Was blocked by the axe of Kenainym.
After turning around,
Shermat raised spear and attacked Kenainym again.
Quick as thunder and storm,
Kenainym used crescent battleax,
To hack at his nape.

Could he survive after being hacked by Hero Kenainym?
With legs stretched,
And hands swung,
Shermat disappeared from the world,

His soul flew to clouds.

After Kenainym turned around,
Kublegen and Betirekay,
The two witches fled into battlefield.
Betirekay transformed into a viper,
Poisonous fire sprayed from the mouth,
Whirring,
She wanted to swallow Kenainym,
Into her own stomach.

Silver dagger sent by grandmother Ayichulek,
Was pulled out and held in the hand,
Unafraid of the suck of the viper,
Kenainym whipped Kankura,
Treading with iron heels.

Surprised by the silver dagger,
Betirekay quickly turned into a swan to escape.
When it was about to fly into the sky,
Kenainym wielded the dagger,
Twelve tail feathers,
And ten wing feathers of the swan,
All fell to the ground.

Unable to fly high,
The swan had to turn into mercury rain,
Reflecting dazzling white light,
Dropping from the sky,
Into earth and desert.
Just at that time,
Kublegen appeared in the air,
With murderous look.

She waved a gray spear,
Thrust at the head of Kenainym,
To pierce him from top to toe.

Her spear was whizzing,
Showing enormous force,
Frightening.

Suddenly gale whistled,
Thunder rumbled,
And rain poured.

People of Baghdad and soldiers of Jute,
All were frightened,
The blessed Kenainym,
Remained calm,
Expressing heroism.

Against the cold wind brought by the spear,
He hacked with silver dagger.

The spear of Kublegen,
Was cut into two halves and flew to the air.
Wooden mortar, wooden pestle and gray spear,
All the three treasures of Kublegen were lost,
Losing the magic of fighting completely,
The dejected Kublegen collapsed.

Just at that time,
Betirekay transformed into sixty bitches,
Rushed over with shouting from all sides.
The bark of those bitches mixed,
Noisy,
Annoying.

Holding the silver dagger,
Kenainym rushed into them.
Barking and biting,
Sixty bitches surrounded Kankura.

Kenainym wielded the dagger,

Forty-five bitches were hacked,
Ankle of Betirekay,
Was bleeding for the hit of sword point.

Silver dagger was extraordinary,
Ankle of Betirekay was cut through,
The bitches that smelled her blood,
Escaped without a trace.
Betirekay worked her magic again in despair,
The earth was covered with fiery charcoal,
Blown by wind,
Charcoal was burning,
The sky was full of smoke and fire.

At sight of the scene,
Soldiers cried and shouted in despair:
"We can not escape,
Baghdad will also be destroyed by fire."

As Betirekay wanted to flee under the cover of smoke,
Brave Kenainym,
Went through the fire,
And caught her.
He opened her heart with dagger,
Blood of the witch gushed from the cut.
The alone Kublegen,
Facing the advent of death,
Still thought hard to search magic trick.
Then she turned into a clover,
Swaying in the wind.

Kenainym rode over here,
Kankura saw the clover,
Swallowed the green leaves,
And bit the flower.

Then the clover spoke,

With sincere words,
Begging for mercy:
"Honorable Kenainym,
My name is Kublegen.
I am uppity to act against you,
I hope you will forgive me.
I can not escape however many tricks I play,
I am willing to serve you.

"There are plenty of treasures under the ground,
Even now nobody knows them.
I tell you about all of them,
You will enjoy them from generation to generation.

"A gift from the angel of water,
I send it to you:
That is a magical fat,
If you take a bite while fighting,
No food is needed for forty days.

"A gift from the angel of mountain,
I send it to you as well:
That is a magical stick,
Named Ultokmok Magic Wand.
Wielding it while fighting,
Can match the power of one thousand people.

"If you fight alone against someone,
You will know its power.
With Ultokmok on your side,
One hundred thousand people can not hurt you.

"Kenainym,
I beg you,
Do not kill me.
From now on,
I will never stare at you,

I will act as a servant for you.

"I take ashes out of stove for you in the morning,
And make bed for you in the evening,
You ask me not to go,
I will stop,
You ask me to graze cattle,
I will not graze sheep.

"Picking up cow dung, collecting firewood and cleaning yurt,
I am willing to do them for you from morning till night.

"I can sew clothes for you,
Connecting the broken,
Filling the missing,
Repairing the worn-out,
And covering all the place that should be covered.
If anyone dares to harm you,
I will gut him.

"I am really desperate,
I want to go on seeing sunshine every day.

"I am willing to burn for your fire,
I am willing to be frost for your cold,
I am willing to be your saddle,
Regarding your punishment as reward.

"I will serve you forever,
Till my arm is as thin as stake,
Till my skull is as dry as bucket,
Till my back is as bent as bow,
Till my head is so low to reach the knee.
I swear to serve you faithfully without change."

Kublegen continued swearing,
Keeping yelling:

"If I break faith,
I will come to this end:
No moon at all night,
No sun in all daytime.
Into lake forever dry,
Into land with no grass.
Into gobi dry for thousand years,
Into barren mountain full of ice.
Into stone black and smelly,
Into alkaline land with bitter water.
Into fire burning out,
Into grass for feeding cattle.
Into net with no prey,
Into eagle with no wings."
The bitch chattered endlessly,
I can not tell clearly,
About what else she said.

With no time to hear her repeat words,
Kenainym pulled her braid,
Tied to the handle of dagger,
And headed for Baghdad.

The whole city of Baghdad was out of town to greet him,
An unprecedented event,
Full of joy.
Instead of going into city,
Kenainym made Kankura take a rest on the grass,
Accompanying it in the wild for six nights.

Khan of Jute, Shermat,
He had an only son,
Kenainym let someone call him over,
To ask about his situation:
"Why do you come to Baghdad,
To disturb peaceful life of the people,
Is there any hatred hiding in your heart?"

Son of Shermat replied:
"I just turn fifteen,
Only care about my own things,
With nothing else to think about.

"Originally my father led a huge army,
Marching along the road mightily.
How could I expect,
He came here to violate the innocent people?

"One day I was playing at home,
A witch Kublegen occurred,
She took me and Betirekay,
To this place together.

"Father is dead,
I am sad,
No one tells me what to do.
I have done nothing guilty,
It is all of my situation."

Kenainym kept asking:
"Does your father have any officials or prime minister?"
After getting the positive answer,
He sent for the prime minister.

Kenainym asked him:
"How long have you been,
The prime minister of Shermat?"
Broad-minded Kenainym,
Spoke in a sensible way.

The minister started to talk with respect:
"The dead Shermat,
Has been khan for twenty-three years.
Since I became a minister,

Eleven years have just passed.

"His ancestors were hereditary khan,
For five generations,
While he always provokes others,
A cruel and ferocious khan.

"Since I became a minister,
He has intruded six cities,
Each time he never came back with nothing,
Seizing wealth everywhere.

"This time he attacked Baghdad,
Awared that there was no king,
He oppressed and robbed the people,
Living a bleak life.

"People of Baghdad begged,
Offering him jewelry, cattle and sheep,
But to their begging,
He never listened at all.
Arrogant and unreasonable.
Guilt is hardly escaped though brains splatter.

"The tyrant once had a delusion:
Capture Baghdad this year,
Get ready next year,
And march towards Egypt.
Then seize Afghan,
Till Hindistan is in his bag.

"He said so,
Considered as a discussion with us."

Kenainym asked after hearing:
"Is his son better,
Can he be a khan?

Can he preserve the interest of people,
To make them live peacefully?"

The minister replied:
"His fifteen-year-old only son,
Is friendly and kind-hearted,
With a lovely face."

Kenainym called the son over again,
To canonize him as the new khan of Jute.
People of Jute were administrated by him,
Including the place that people of Baghdad lived in.
Making a fifteen-year-old boy head the administration,
Kenainym was a man of foresight:
The boy had been khan for sixty years.

He cared for the people,
And governed the country well,
Making Baghdad and Jute get richer and stronger,
Called Khan of Child.
These were the latter,
No need to be sung more.

Everything arranged,
Kenainym turned around,
Left Baghdad,
And returned his hometown.

The money sent by people,
He took none of them,
Just leading Kublegen,
Riding away.

When they reached the place between Jetsu and Talas,
Kenainym got into a rage,
Shouting at Kublegen:
"This is where you started to cheat me,

You made me go around the earth,
How much time was spent?
Now back from Baghdad,
How can I let you survive,
To bring disaster to the world?"

He wielded sword to kill Kublegen,
Blood sprayed all over the valley.
Since then there was called Monster Valley,
Cry of Kublegen could be heard at night.

Yellow-faced Death Killed the Rogue Oliya

After returning Talas with victory,
Kenainym started to recuperate at hometown.

One day,
The eagle of Galgezak occurred to him,
He thought after several years,
He should take it back and raise it.

Kenainym set off,
To find the village the old man Oliya lived in.
He headed for Oboler,
Starting at dawn and stopping at night,
No stay or hurry.
After several days,
He reached the city of Kashgar.

Next day, after asking around,
He found the old man Jodarbsym.
Two old friends drank wine and tea,
Telling the words in their hearts.

Kenainym said:
"Khotan, Yarkant, Lop Nur,
And sunny Arele,
Are these places well managed?
I guess they stay the same situation as my uncle was alive."

Jodar offered sincere words:
"Khotan, Yarkant and Lop Nur,

Some people always come and go,
Whatever happens,
They will inform and consult me.

"Afghan and Khorasan,
Old men in Tajik,
They have few contact with me.

"Kenainym,
I am already old,
Once anything happens,
I will report to you in time.

"From the south of Altay,
From the yellow valley of Kuran,
Came some news——

"Iron overcoat Shalekmat,
Copper navel Kekmat,
Big ears Chounalep,
They behave suspiciously.
If intruded again by Karamark,
We will be too ashamed,
To face the people and brothers.

"I still keep suspecting:
Timirbek of Tajik,
Seems to show no goodwill.
They promote some provocative words,
In public,
To slander us madly.

"Kenainym,
Arahon in Kashgar,
Died of illness some years ago.
I give the affairs of Kashgar,
To the Kirgiz people.

"We have not seen each for so long,
These are not told you.

"Rather than in big house inside the city,
I live close to mountains——
Suyek, Toro and Chacmak,
In these quiet places.

"I spend most of time in Toro,
In winter,
I move to Ilkstam to kill time,
Sometimes for curiosity,
Also go to Arajuk and Yuchtash,
To enjoy the landscape there.

"In summer,
I go to Chater Lake and Arpa,
Cool breeze is blowing there.

"Kenainym,
I am already old,
With no energy,
To accompany you to find old Oliya."

At that time,
Kenainym said:
"My cousin Jodarbsym,
Thanks for your information.
Do not lose your heart for old age,
An old hero should have more courage.

"Khotan, Yarkant and Kashgar,
Lop Nur, Aziq and Arele,
People in these places are so diligent and kind,
You must keep managing them well.

"You say in the yellow valley of Kuran,
There are three Karamark people,
If they have any movement,
Inform us in time.

"Timirbek of Tajik,
Is he still suspicious?
We need to exert a little pressure,
To let him change the mind.

"In Badak Mount and Barik,
Live the tribes of Tajik.
From Dabutbek of Khorasan,
And Acha Khan of Isfan,
Also comes bad news constantly.

"Muzburchak in Alma-Ata,
Has a son named Akubak,
But Akubak has no descendant.

"Descendant of Yulbe is outstanding,
No one is as brave as him.
Gaint Aersh of Kulitan,
Has no descendant as well.

"You are descendant of my uncle Toshtuk,
Galgezak is descendant of Koshaoyi,
Bagetebay is descendant of Galgezak.

"Among Uzbek people,
Son of Kelkuler, Tetke,
Has limited lifetime as well.

"It is a world of uncertainty,
No one can equal the heaven.

"Kara Khan of Bukhara,

His son Ismaili also has no child.
Seven khans in Talas,
None of them have offsprings to inherit their will.

"Immortal Manas,
Only has me as the descendant.
You are the successor of Kapchaque family.
In Kara Kirgiz,
Lives Bagetebay.

"Oh Jodar,
Though you are peer of my grandfather,
You are also the son of my aunt,
We have unusual relationships,
I regard you as my elder brother.
Bagetebay is my elder on the seniority,
I treat him as my younger brother.
We are like a family,
No regrets for our life anymore!

"Galgezak told me:
Old Oliya borrowed the white hawk,
No return so far,
I am made to ask for the hawk.
This is the purpose,
Of my journey to Oboler."

Farewell to Old Jodar,
Kenainym whipped horse on.
It was a clear autumn,
A little withered grass,
Fresh air,
And blue sky.
From the hill,
Taking a bird's-eye view.
Seeing fifty or sixty people ahead,
Kenainym stepped forward,

To salute them.

With their guide,
Old Oliya met him reluctantly.
Kenainym started to talk:
"For the eagle of Galgezak,
Gazelles can't graze on the hillsides,
Foxes can't forage in the valleys,
Rams can't walk on the mountains;
Wild wolves can't escape from its talons,
Beasts can't haunt in this place,
All of them have no living space.

"Look,
In Oboler,
Wild animals have already disappeared,
No feast for the eagle in hills or gobi.
You have had its company,
For many years,
There are no regrets for the return of eagle."
Kenainym made the purpose clear,
But Oliya seemed not to hear it.

Kenainym lived and ate together with everyone,
Waiting for the reply every day.
Damned old Oliya,
Still ignored him.
He wandered daily,
To avoid the guests intentionally.

"He was once acquainted with my great-grandfather,
Aykoler Manas,
A little famous among the tribes,
I should have more patience."
Kenainym thought so,
Trying to treat him gently.

Oliya kept everyone from sleeping at night,
And let them pray scripture till dawn.
Urging people to leave in the morning,
To go hunting,
Into ravines and hills.
He kept chattering day and night,
No reason for his testiness.

Kenainym had no choice but to shout:
"Be quiet,
You and others go to sleep now,
Doing this every day,
What is the end?"

At that time,
Old Oliya was not willing to be outdone:
"This is what Manas allowed me to do,
Not allowed to be blamed by a Yellow-faced boy!"

Then,
Everyone had to pray again,
With shaking the body.
Old Oliya also shook his head,
Sitting above the salt.

Lying beside him,
Kenainym tossed and turned,
Hard to fall asleep.
Old Oliya like a rutting male camel,
Chattered harshly without stop,
Foaming at the mouth.
Unable to stand it,
Kenainym spoke seriously:

"Oliya,
Stop for a moment,
I think you show no kindness to people:

Firing guns, shooting arrows and setting traps,
Seeding in spring and harvesting in autumn,
Farming and ploughing,
You give no freedom,
To the kind living people.
Keeping them from sleeping at night,
Forcing them to pray to run out of energy.

"Vigorous eagle,
Brave hound,
Both are seized from others.
Once you take a fancy to something good,
You will get it with cheat,
Citing reason of 'blessing for you'.

"You are not the creator deity,
You are not able to vitalize stone.
You are only a mortal man,
With moral depravity,
You will be spurned.

"You call me Yellow-faced boy,
It is rudeness to me.
Treating a guest from afar in this way,
Proves you are totally heartless.

"You pretend to be the saint Oliya,
Just for the purpose:
Cheat to eat others',
Cheat to drink others',
Cheat to wear others',
Cheat to use others'.
Even your steed,
Is got by cheating.

"Wicked mind,
Duplicity,

You take all the advantage of people,
You cheat the kind people.

"Seeing what you do,
My anger is hardly contained!
Old Oliya,
Today is your last day.
I will kill you, the evil man,
Here and now.

"If I die of your curse,
Leave my fate to Heaven:
Reasonable curse makes the bad suffer,
Unreasonable curse acts on himself.
It is an old adage from ancestors,
I will see the truth inside."

As Kenainym finished his words,
The liar Oliya,
Leaped at him with shouting "bastard".

Furious Kenainym said,
"Go to rest",
Punching him in the head.
People took apart the cloth around his head,
Brains gushed,
Life was lost.
As for the sixty evil followers,
Kenainym lessoned and expelled them.

He took back his eagle,
Drove the seized horses,
And returned the home in Talas.

About the journey,
He told the folks without hiding:
"Whoever does evil,

I will destroy him.

"Down the mountain of Oboler,
I heard someone say Oliya was a saint,
Dare not talk loud with him.
I killed the rouge,
What could he do to me?!"

Hearing his words,
Some people were so afraid and fell from horses,
But the people praised:
"Our hero is brave and upright!

"We merely know the saint Oliya,
But about how he is on earth,
No one has seen him.

"If hero thinks of anything,
He can make it,
We just realize today:
Our khan, Kenainym,
Deserves to be Yellow-faced Death,
He can create moving myth."

This story comes to an end,
Now let us sing:
The more thrilling fight,
Between Kenainym and Shalekmat.

Three Khans of Karamark Started a War and Launched Invasion

Karamark Assaulted Kirgiz with Three Troops

In the yellow river shoal of Kuran,
Iron overcoat Shalekmat,
Copper navel Kekmat,
Big ears Chounalep,
Three khans had waited for many years,
For the news about Khan Qiktay.

When hearing Khan Qiktay had already died,
They were shocked.
"When did Khan Qiktay die?
How did Khan Qiktay die?"

"Khan Qiktay died at the hand of Kenainym.
In the battle between him and Brute."

"The news is really true,
If he was still alive,
He would contact us long ago.

"We need to revenge for Khan Qiktay,
Kill the arrogant Kenainym!
We allied with Khan Qiktay and swore,
We can never stand by.
If we do not punish Brute,
We will feel ashamed,
Before the soul of Khan Qiktay."

Three khans raised black flags,
Led thirty thousand soldiers respectively,

Intruding westwards mightily.
From Barkol to Kashgar,
They slaughtered numerous lives,
They spoiled all the creatures along the road.

The Karamarks were extremely cruel,
They stayed along the way,
All the women, old and young,
Suffered from their wanton bullying.
Their ugly brutalities,
Were embarrassed to be told.

In every place they reached,
People were tortured to be half dead,
With clothes and wealth looted.
Anyone who dared to revolt,
Would be killed on the spot.

From Barkol to Kashgar,
Buildings and gardens in their sight,
Were all destroyed and burned,
Only ruins remained.
Folks, women and children along the road,
Chillingly cried and yelled.
The enormity of Karamark,
Would never be forgotten.

Three wild boars brought huge disaster to people,
They still threatened:
"When returning from Talas,
They will sweep again along the road."

They issued an order:
"Anybody is forbidden to walk from east to west,
If walking a little westward,
No matter who he is,
Will be beheaded at once,

No pardon."

Troops of three wild boars,
Silently reached outside Kashgar city.
People in the city were still unaware that,
Kashgar had been besieged.

Three beasts had a private discussion,
After divided into three parts,
They decided respective direction to attack.
Chounalep spoke firstly:
"I will stay at Kashgar,
Occupy Khotan, Yarkant and Lop Nur at first,
Aziq and Arele as well,
Then head for Tajik,
To meet Timirbek and make alliance.

"Separate the son of Toshtuk, Jodar,
From the Kirgiz people,
Make the tribe isolated,
And become our servants.
If Jodar disobeys,
Open his belly like cutting a watermelon,
Kill all the leaders in the tribe."

Copper navel Kekmat added:
"I will go across Ilkstam,
To Namangan, Tashkent and Samarkand.
The Uzbek people there,
Have constant close relationships with Kirgiz.

"We will conquer the Uzbek people,
If they disobey our will,
People at the age of eighteen to forty,
Will all be killed,
None will be pardoned.

"Let them taste the hell,
Never forget this,
Never revolt us.

"Namangan, Tashkent and Samarkand.
Send them to Tajik people.
Only Kokand on the necessary way of caravans,
Will be my own stage.

"I will govern Kokand,
I will put silk and brick tea,
On the back of caravans,
To travel around Egypt, Baghdad and Kutus.

"When the caravans return,
Carrying gold,
I will take all the gold of the west,
To my hands.

"By then,
The stored gold can't run out in one hundred years.
Making the west unable to repay debts,
Forced to beg us for money.

"I will move from river valley Kuran,
And build new palace in Bukhara."

Without the first step,
Kekmat had been full of imaginations:
As if he had been the khan of east and west,
Become the richest man in the world,
With his mountain of gold,
And all the dreams had been realized.
Enthralled Kekmat went mad with joy.

Iron overcoat Shalekmat,
Had tall figure and sophisticated weapons,

Among the three wild boars,
He was the bravest and dared to take risks.
At that time he was spewing nonsense:

"I will walk up from Toro,
Through Tulgate Mountain Pass.
Strike the Kirgiz people,
Arpa and Aksayi,
Will be in a mess.

"As for Bagetebay of Atbarsh,
I won't go there firstly.
I will march towards Naryn instead,
It was ever governed by Arokai.
I will go to Atbarsh after occupying Naryn,
Killing the people,
And flattening the city.

"It is said that grandson of Koshaoyi, Bagetebay,
Always lives in Atbarsh.
He never submits to Qingersh,
Looking down upon Khan Qingersh.
I will cut off his head,
Then head for Talas.

"Atbarsh and Aksayi,
Naryn, Chumgale and Katmandob,
I will travel around them.
Familiarize myself with the customs and landform,
Choose a station,
Between Naryn and Atbarsh.

"Kekmat and Chounalep,
No need for your help,
If I strike Talas,
Kenainym will be vulnerable.

"North to Kapal and Ice Sea,
East to Altay and Gyal Sea,
The whole central Asia,
Will be all ours."

Shalekmat in Kashgar,
Was seized by a whim,
Full of imaginations.
In his dream,
His troops were invincible,
Marching forward bravely,
All the people in the world,
The two heroes, Kenainym and Bagetebay,
All of them kneeled before him.

He would build a splendid castle,
In Naryn where Arokai ever stationed army,
To enjoy all the happiness freely on the earth.
Traders to and from east and west,
Would be made use of to do business of brick tea and silk,
To acquire the wealth,
In the whole east.

Shalekmat became prouder of himself,
As if the dream had come true.
Rapid heartbeat made him more anxious,
Unable to calmly breathe.

People will become abnormal and not know why,
Before the Death comes.
The death will speed him towards the hell,
At the time ought to die.

Three wild boars led troops respectively,
Shalekmat was too impatient to wait for a moment.
He wanted to bypass Atbarsh and rush to Naryn,
But he went to Atbarsh like getting lost.

Shalekmat thought:
"Since I have come to Atbarsh,
Let me meet Bagetebay,
He is in the way of my expedition,
I need to behead him.
This can't be known by Kenainym,
I will break their backs one by one,
Anyone daring to resist,
Will be killed."

Shalekmat had gone mad,
All the villages he passed by were looted.
He still shouted:
"Anyone who dares to resist,
Will come to a bad end!"

Shalekmat was unaware that,
Death had come to his side.
Leading thirty thousand soldiers,
He went through Mazhaely Hills[①].

1 Mazhaely Hills: The hills beside the cemetery.

Bagetebay Led People to Revolt the Enemy

Since the saint Koshaoyi appeared,
No one dared to invade Atbarsh.
With thirty thousand soldiers turning up in a sudden,
And thirty battle black flags flying in the wind,
People in Atbarsh were in panic.
"Where are the soldiers from?
They come to our side suddenly."

The old were at a loss,
The young were more flustered.
The honorific old man in the village,
Had no idea what to do as well.
Missing the saint Koshaoyi,
He grabbed his collar,
Praying in silence:

"Chechdobatta[1],
Please bless us.
Here are old men in their seventies,
And babies wrapped in vines.
We pray to God for blessing.
If someone dares to infringe us,
Spirit of Koshaoyi is our patron saint.
His grandson Bagetebay,
Must protect compatriots with full efforts."

The honorific man sent a boy named Sartreb,

1 Chechdobatta: A place, the location of the castle of Koshaoyi.

To find Bagetebay,
And tell him the emergency here.

In Chaldebar,
Bagetebay was resting there,
Sartreb urged horse to his side.

"My honored khan Bagetebay,
You still take a rest here safely,
Do you know——
On Mazhaely Hills,
Thirty black battle flags are flying.
We overlook with clairvoyant,
Unable to see who come to our side.
Folks in panic felt overwhelmed,
Asking me to report to you.

"Khan Bagetebay,
Do you know,
Who hold the black battle flags?
Where are they from?
We have the old,
And infants,
If unprepared and unalert,
We will be harmed.
Horses, cattle and sheep on the foot of mountains,
Will be robbed by them."

Bagetebay said after hearing the words:
"Sartreb,
Do not panic,
Do not talk about scared folks,
Do not say nonsense.
Those holding black battle flags,
Must be the Karamark people from Kangayi.
Who else?
They went over Mazhaely Daban,

It can be expected,
Jodar in Kashgar launches no attack.
Maybe Jodar has been beheaded.
Otherwise knowing their news,
Seeing the black flags of damned Karamark,
Jodar must send people to contact me.

"Sartreb,
Go back in a hurry,
Lead the tribe to hold on in the passage of each daban,
Stop the enemies from invading Aksayi.
Do not blaze the news about invasion,
In case people become scared and worried.

"My hometown is Atbarsh,
From my ancestors,
Governing the tribe for generations,
I receive respect from the tribe.
Even the raging flood,
I can deal with it easily,
Protecting my brothers.

"I am the khan of Atbarsh,
Crown on my head.
I would rather die in battle,
For the safety of my tribe."
After finishing his words,
Bagetebay rode to Atbarsh at once.

Glittering bronze drums were beaten,
Sound wandered over the city.
One thousand soldiers answered the call,
Gathering in the grassland under battle flags.

Warriors played for leisure throughout a year,
Once hearing war drum,
They would gather at once under battle flags.

Battle flags was flying in the wind,
Gilded bows and arrows were shining.

Bagetebay in his prime,
Was the descendant of Khan Koshaoyi,
Not yet twenty,
No beard around his mouth.

He was fearless with majestic appearance,
The one thousand warriors he led,
Were selected from strong youth,
It was the rule from the saint Koshaoyi.

Iron overcoat Shalekmat,
Spoke to the soldiers of Karamark:
"We have thirty thousand chosen men,
Kirgiz has only one thousand people,
Who will win the battle?
We will be the winner anyway.

"If Bagetebay comes to fight,
I won't respond him at all.
He is not my peer,
His efforts will be in vain.

"I needn't trouble myself for him,
I just look aside,
To see how many skills he has.
If he really comes before me with killing,
I will behead him.

"I will watch the Kirgiz people carefully,
To see how much power they have.
If they have Hercules to fight,
I will also behead him,
And gut him."

Shalekmat ordered soldiers to rush ahead,
And watched alone behind.
Damned Shalekmat,
Imposing like a hill.

Bagetebay saw the enemy before him,
Composed and steady:
"My brothers of Kirgiz,
Be quiet,
We need to defeat the enemy with courage and wisdom.
Their thirty thousand soldiers,
Have charged towards us.
Karamark has seen our gold battle flag,
It is from my grandfather Koshaoyi.
They seem not to care,
Paying few attention to us,
To show their prestige and force.

"The Karamarks think:
'If our thirty thousand soldiers rush forward,
Kirgiz people will be distracted,
Suffer a complete defeat,
And surrender to us.'
Listen,
My dear brothers,
Let Karamark think in their way,
Thoughts belong to them.

"We need to grasp the weapons,
Fighting enemy without fear.
Aim at and fight with the enemies in your front,
Hack the enemies beside you with swords.
Without any flinch and hesitation.

"The battle will be cruel,
If you are injured accidentally,
You can never shrink and give in.

"Maybe your head is broken,
Maybe your eyes are hurt;
Maybe your limbs are broken,
Maybe your steed falls to the ground.
Hold your head up anyway,
Your morale can't be hurt.
Kirgiz people are stronger,
In harder time.

"Grit your teeth,
Fight to the end.
Human will die eventually,
Battlefield is the right place.
We will shout the slogan Manas,
Frightening the enemies.

"I will be in the rear with ten warriors,
Unable to rush forward with you.
Sentinels of the enemies in our front,
Always stare at us.
They expect to bypass you to climb the wall,
We have to be on guard.
If it happens,
I will rush furiously to fight and block them."

Hearing the words,
One thousand warriors shouted the slogan together Manas,
The roar shook heaven and earth.
One hundred warriors shot enemies with arrows,
One hundred warriors played drums loudly.
Bagetebay and ten warriors kept guard under battle flag.
Eight hundred warriors stood in the ox-horn-shaped formation,
Surrounding the Karamarks quickly.

At the time of coming war,
Kirgiz people in Atbarsh,

Knew Karamark was invading their hometown,
Picked up weapons and gathered to battlefield,
Gathered thirty thousand forces were equivalent to Karamark's.

Shalekmat saw,
Thousands of Kirgiz people gathered to battlefield,
Feeling extremely frightened,
Demanding warriors between two sides to fight by themselves.

"The Kirgiz people actually are all of one mind,
Thirty thousand forces are gathered in a sudden.
One thousand soldiers have surrounded us,
We have no way to defeat the powerful enemies!"
Soldiers of Karamark whispered,
Fear made them wet pants.

Shalekmat gathered the warriors hastily,
The mighty giant Betiek was sent to battlefield.
"Since I was born,
I have never been defeated.
If anyone dares to provoke me,
I must let him die before me.

"The mighty giant Betiek,
Look,
That is Bagetebay,
I want you to do something unforgettable to him,
Teach him a lesson for me.

"Since you were called Hercules Betiek,
You are a hero prevailing in every battle.
In the crowd of Kirgiz I have watched,
No one can defeat you.

"The Kirgiz person challenging you,
Go to puncture his neck with spear.
Lift him up like a crow,

Sweep away the prestige of Kirgiz people.
Hero Taban will follow you to fight,
We must defeat Kirgiz today."

Betiek was an arrogant donkey,
Hearing the praise and flatter of Shalekmat,
He felt great,
The mad wild boar rode forward.

Heroes of Kirgiz came forth in large numbers,
Everyone was eager to fight,
With the permission of the khan,
Keyzbye was the first to go into battle.

Keyzbye rode to the battlefield,
Betiek set out for attack with spear in his hand.
Keyzbye was by no means ordinary,
Catching the shaft of spear and throwing it far away.
After only one turn,
Weapon was thrown away,
Betiek turned around to flee hastily.
Keyzbye was in hot pursuit,
Shouting Manas,
Spear flew to Betiek.
Betiek fell from horse,
With spear piercing his bully,
Like a dead donkey lying on the ground.

Taban mentioned by Shalekmat,
Rode a horse with feet in stirrups.
The damned wild boar,
Flat and droopy ears,
Thick skin and round face,
Dirt on the neck was as thick as cooper coin,
Beard hung down to the saddle.

Taban roared hoarsely,

He ran up behind Shalekmat,
And rode to battlefield straight.
Wearing iron armor and helmet,
Spear in the hand and crescent axe on the belt.
Mace on the leg,
Thick shield on the back,
He would revenge for Betiek and never retreat.

Taban was livid with rage,
Leaped at Keyzbye like a hungry wolf.
He was menacing like flash flooding,
Keyzbye fought with no fear,
Taban thrusted fiercely with spear,
Keyzbye also stabbed at Taban with spear.

No one could expect,
Before the enemy Keyzbye missed,
From his back came out spearhead,
Taban lifted him and hung on spearhead,
With the horse turned around.

Zholeboludu was a famous Kirgiz warrior,
None of the enemies he met could survive.
Seeing Keyzbye in danger,
He rode the Kowuer horse[1],
Rushing to rescue him.
At the moment that Taban was reaching camp,
Spearhead of Zholeboludu,
Pierced through his waist.
Huge Taban like a hill,
Fell flat on his face and died.

Rescued Keyzbye rode to base camp,
The spear of enemy,
Did not stab him,

1 Kowuer horse: The brown horse.

Just through his overcoat,
So he was lifted and hung on the spearhead.

Zholeboludu rescued Keyzbye,
Got the steed of Taban as well,
Then intended to return to the camp.
One person in Karamark attacked with shouting,
He was a Hercules named Dari,
Zholeboludu speared him fiercely,
Dari fell down from horse and died.

Ten enemies came out one after another,
All were killed by Zholeboludu.
Brave Zholeboludu,
Stained battlefield with the blood of enemies.

The sun set in the west,
Both sides returned to camp to rest.
Karamark people overestimated themselves,
Eleven warriors died in the battlefield.
Pains in their hearts,
Kept torturing them till their dreams.
They still thought in dreams:
"What will be the ending of the battle tomorrow?"

Day broke,
Kirgiz and Karamark,
Both sides stood face to face,
Battle continued,
Proud of his exploits,
Zholeboludu was the most urgent to go into battle.

A warrior of Karamark, Daldang,
Had the highest military skill,
The second strongest soldier after Shalekmat.
Daldang went out to battle,
Spear in his hand was shining.

With the eyes under his forehead,
Called light of men,
He watched around.
Nostrils opened and shrank with gasping,
Just like an argali chased by hounds.
His upper lip was thick,
His lower lip was droopy,
He soliloquized with mumbling mouth.

On the horseback,
He kept dangling his feet.
His steed, the horse Tobolchaque,
Kept chewing bridles,
Four hooves kept flipping,
Like an eagle was flying.

Wild boar Daldang was menacing,
Sand and dust were blowing.
Karamark people beamed with joy,
Thinking he would devour Zholeboludu.
Nervous Kirgiz people,
Worried about Zholeboludu.

Zholeboludu wielded the spear,
Rushing towards the enemy.
Ferocious Daldang hardly contained the rage,
Blocked aside the spearhead,
And speared him at once.
Unable to bear the strike,
Zholeboludu fell from his horse,
Like a flying gray pigeon.

A warrior of Kirgiz, Koyikeldy,
Blood brother of Zholeboludu,
Wanted to revenge for his old brother with rage,
Went straight to Daldang recklessly,

Struck and thrust with spear.
After less than two rounds of combat,
He was also killed by Daldang.
During the time not enough to boil a pot of water,
The two brothers, Zholeboludu and Koyikeldy,
Were both killed,
Kirgiz people were extremely distressed.

There was a hero named Suyin in Kirgiz,
He was under forty years old,
At the age full of strength.
His reputation spread widely,
He treated compatriots warmly like the sun in summer,
He treated enemies coldly like the night in winter.
His face was like foggy dusk,
Hard to be seen clearly.

Suyin wore a helmet,
And layers of iron armor,
Buttons were tightly fastened,
Body was thickly covered.
Seeing the arrogance of Daldang,
He watched around with rage.
He requested Bagetebay to pray,
Riding straight to the battle front.

Extremely angry,
Hero Suyin whipped horse to fight.
He shouted:
"I am Suyin of Kirgiz,
Are you Daldang of Karamark?
Daldang,
Take out your true skills,
Fight with me!"
Seeing Suyin menacing,
A commotion occurred in the crowd of Karamark.

Wearing black overcoat,
Daldang speared him with all strength,
To launch the attack first.

Hero Suyin like a tiger coming down a hill,
Rushed forth,
Blocked aside the spear from Daldang,
Turned around to face the bloody beast,
And thrust with spear fiercely.

Mountainous Daldang,
Tilted on the saddle.
Suyin wanted to strike him down,
Suddenly shaft of the spear was snapped in half.
Hero Suyin disregarded his life,
Fearless,
Going on fighting with bare fists.
Hem of the clothes Daldang was wearing,
Was grabbed by him.
How much strength did Suyin have?
No one could estimate.

With feet in stirrups,
With the help of steed,
He dragged mountainous Daldang and the horse,
To Bagetebay.

Shalekmat became flustered,
He kept waving the whip,
Hinting all the soldiers to rush forward,
To fight and rescue Daldang.

Soldiers of Karamark moved together,
Rushing towards Kirgiz people.
Kirgiz people fought back bravely,
A cruel war started.
Battleaxes tinkled with striking,

Spearhead collided with stabbing and blocking.
Battle lasted till dark,
Bodies were piled up like a mountain.
Instead of going out,
Shalekmat defended the battle flags as a spectator.
Bagetebay stood up,
To observe the movement of Shalekmat.

Day broke,
Sun rose in the east,
Forces of both sides gathered again on the battlefield.
After the fierce combat,
People were sad and depressed.
In the face of cruel war,
Life became so short,
Today might be the end.

Khan Shalekmat of Karamark,
He wore five layers of iron armor,
Mounted saddle with rage,
Hoping to kill all the Kirgiz people today.
Shocked soldiers,
Walked slowly and totteringly.
Shalekmat left the crowd and fought alone,
With angry face.

In Chechdob grassland,
In every valley of Atbarsh,
Fearless Kirgiz people,
All gathered under the flag of Bagetebay,
To fight tough against the enemies.

Bagetebay was young and energetic,
Eyes with double eyelid were bright and sparkling.
No one disliked his sight,
High spirits were present on his black face.
Ears were like a round buttons,

Chest was like a iron fan with strong back,
Limbs were well proportioned with shiny skin.
Steed of Bagetebay,
A black horse with erect ears.
It could travel thousands of miles one day,
Covered with shining iron armor.

Bagetebay held the spear with gold shaft,
Battleax was gleaming in the belt,
Sword was rustling in the sheath.
Majestic Bagetebay,
Could tackle thousands of forces with ease.

Arrogant Shalekmat thought:
"I will hang the Brute on my spearhead,
Like a crow."

Seeing the oncoming Shalekmat,
Bagetebay asked Suyin to stay under the flag.
He rode the black horse with button ears,
To fight alone.

Bagetebay and Shalekmat,
Fought a pitched battle of life and death.
They wielded the spears,
To thrust each other face to face.
They were like a couple of argali,
Colliding hard with each other,
Battle was getting fiercer,
Hacking at each other with battleax.
Armpits were pulled and became loose,
Both were out of breath,
Breath had bloody smell.

Mixed-metal stick was lifted high,
And hit hard the other's head.
Sword out of sheath stabbed the other's chest,

Mixed-metal stick had broken,
Sword also broke and fell to the ground.
No weapons in the hands,
Both sides fought bare-handed.
One grabbed the other's collar,
To strangle his throat.
One grabbed the other's cloth,
To pull him down.
The two men were sweating,
Like a downpour.
Steeds were stuck in the mud,
No one could make the other fall from the horse.

Spear, battleax and sword,
Shovel, mixed-metal stick and iron rod,
All were damaged and thrown on the ground,
Neither could win the battle with bare fists.

Exhausted Shalekmat,
Finally opened his mouth:
"Bagetebay,
A child small as an elbow,
You indeed have some strength.
I am a hero,
And a khan,
We have fought for two days,
Without a break.
I have been exhausted,
Sweating,
Muscles and bones are tired out.

"Bagetebay,
There is no difference between you and me,
Can we go back to rest and reorganize?

Bagetebay answered at once:
"Shalekmat,

You cunning Karamark,
It is you that ask to fight alone with me.
You want to behead me,
It is a wishful thinking and in vain.

"Now you are exhausted without strength,
Saying good things to struggle for a chance to breathe.
Since you beg me face to face,
I have to promise you,
If not, my reputation will be damaged.

"All right,
Shalekmat,
Go back to rest and recover,
Anyway, next time we fight,
You won't go back alive.

"Listen,
Shalekmat,
You must make the date of return clear.
If you break your words to escape,
You will pay for that.
Since you are a hero and a khan,
Keep your words in mind.

"Listen,
Shalekmat,
There is another thing to say:
Do not approach sheepfolds of Kirgiz people,
On the pretext of buying sheep.
Do not wander in my villages,
On the pretext of drinking yoghurt and horse milk.

"Manage your followers and soldiers,
Do not let them walk around.
There are marmots and badgers all over mountains and plains,
You can not finish them after hunting.

If you harass Kirgiz people,
We will drive you away at any time without any break.

"Whatever happens,
Who is to blame will never change,
Everything needs to follow the Heaven.
If I ought to die,
I wish to sacrifice on the battlefield.
If I am under a lucky star,
I will thrust you to the ground.
Soul of Manas is in Heaven,
With the blessing of deceased king Koshaoyi,
I must defeat you."

After finishing the words,
Bagetebay repeated them on purpose.
They promised,
To meet there after ten days.

Kirgiz people did not relax their vigilance,
Camp of Karamark was just on the opposite side,
Their eyes were fixed on the camp all the time.
Let us put this down,
Next, let us sing,
About the situation of Jodar in Kashgar.

Talparkbye Fought a Battle of Wits against Invaders from Karamark

Hero Jodar was the son of giant Toshtuk,
He lived in the valley of Taygaktash.
On the mountain slope of Oboler,
Jodar grazed livestock peacefully,
Living a carefree life.

Big ears Chounalep,
Occupied Kashgar,
He sent people to find Jodar,
To catch and escort him.

A sentinel of Jodar,
Named Talparkbye.
He wanted to go to Kashgar,
Thinking about coming back soon,
Running towards the city excitedly.

Walking on his way,
Talparkbye ran into a group of Karamark soldiers.
Proficient in the language of Karamark,
Talparkbye heard their words clearly.
Karamarks discussed loudly as if nobody was listening,
Talparkbye knew lots of things:
The city of Kashgar had been occupied by Karamark,
The people of Kashgar became their slaves.
They were searching for Khan Jodar,
To control him in their hand.

Talparkbye opened his mouth:

"My ancestors are Karamark,
Belong to the tribe Durkut,
My name is Talparkbye.
In the crowd of Kirgiz,
I never forget Karamark people,
You talked with the language of Karamark just now,
And mentioned something about Jodar.

"Brothers,
Do not hide the truth,
Where are you from?
What are you going to do?
I have lived here for many years,
I know everything here."

There were thirty people of Karamark,
Shaparl was their leader.
He said:
"Talparkbye,
Swear to Heaven,
If you are not the descendant of Karamark,
Heaven will punish you.

Talparkbye said:
"If I am not the descendant of Karamark,
I am willing to accept the punishment of Heaven."

Shaparl said:
"Since you are the descendant of Karamark,
Warrior Talparkbye,
I have something to ask you,
Where is Jodar now?
Tell me carefully.

"You live among Kirgiz people,
Suffering exclusion with no right.
I can help you to leave here,

As long as you help us to catch Jodar.
Yarkant, Lop Nur and Khotan,
These places are in the charge of us,
You will be a khan in one of them given to you."

Going on the topic,
Talparkbye asked Shaparl:
"Yarkant, Khotan and Lop Nur,
Kashgar as well,
Who governs them?
Who is your khan?
Do not hesitate to tell me."

"Hey,
Brother Talparkbye,
If I refuse to tell you,
Where can you know these things?
Head south from Altay,
There is the yellow valley of Kuran,
Our ancestors have lived and herded there since ancient times,
Guarding the land.
Many heroes and khans arose there,
Duo Khan, Sokso and Sotoy,
Invincible Hercules Ketlick.

"Iron overcoat Shalekmat,
Copper navel Kekmat,
And Big ears Chounalep appeared later,
I have no idea whose descendants they are.
They have governed the whole north,
Many expeditions to Kakanqin,
Have captured lots of gold, treasures and livestock.
Among Kirgiz people,
There is a khan named Kenainym.
Among Karamark people,
There is a khan named Qiktay.
Since ancient times,

Kirgiz people have fought against Karamark people.

"The two khans, Qiktay and Kenainym,
Are tit for tat and never bend to each other.
They fought for many times,
Qiktay was defeated and fled to the river shoal in Kuran.
He asked three khans to dispatch troops to support him.
Three khans and Khan Qiktay formed an alliance,
Launching an attack at Kirgiz together.
If Khan Qiktay marched towards Talas,
Three khans would lead troops with him.

"Since then many years had passed,
Khan Qiktay never came back.
Three khans felt very anxious,
Asking for information about Khan Qiktay everywhere.
Three khans felt extremely angry,
After hearing Qiktay was killed by Kenainym.

"Our ancestors,
Duo Khan, Sokso and Sotoy,
Ketlick and Kunwuerbayi,
Lots of warriors and heroes they led,
All were killed by Kirgiz people.

"Now Khan Qiktay was killed by Kenainym,
We can never swallow it.
We will revenge for them,
Wiping out Arashi from the world.

"Three khans led ninety thousand soldiers westward,
On the way from Barkol to Kashgar,
They took away the lives of numerous people,
Khan of Kashgar lost his life as well.

"Three khans discussed together,
Andijan, Tashkent and Namangan,

The six castles of Samarkand,
It was Kekmat that went to occupy them.

"Naryn, Kochykoer and Chumgale,
Katmandob and Chamudan,
Bagetebay in Atbarsh,
It was Shalekmat that went to capture them.

"Kashgar, Khotan and Yarkant,
Lop Nur, Aziq, Arele and so on,
It was Timirbek of Dushanbe that went to manage them.

"Big ears Chounalep,
Copper navel Kekmat,
Iron overcoat Shalekmat,
And Timirbek of Tajik,
They just like burning fire,
Have rushed towards Kenainym in Talas.

"We heard in Kashgar that,
Son of Toshtuk, Jodar lived here.
We come to search him,
Catch him and bring him back.

"Talparkbye,
You are originally our own man,
We happen to meet you today."

Talparkbye of Kirgiz,
Heard the words of Shaparl,
Knew the details of Karamark people,
Wanted to go back with anxiety.

Talparkbye said:
"Warriors from Kangayi,
Your name has remained in my mind.
You are the hero Shaparl,

I also keep your purpose in mind.
I will look for ways to help you,
To catch Jodar.

"Jodar is not old enough,
He can still tackle one thousand enemies.
If you trust me,
Let me return to his side.

"I will tell him something good that happens in Kashgar,
Ask him to go with me,
And take him to you by cheating.
Warrior Shaparl,
When you report contributions to Chounalep,
Never forget my credit!

"Hide here temporarily,
Wait for me to take Jodar to the valley,
Do as what I said,
Rush forward and bring him to the ground."

Talparkbye finished his words,
Whipping horse to run towards the direction he came from.
He took a shortcut in water along the valley,
To reach the village Jodar lived in.
After running up to the big yurt of Jodar,
He drew rein and jumped off saddle.
Servant on guard exclaimed:
"Talparkbye,
Why not dismount in the distance?
Why so worried in hurry?
Why so rude?"
Talparkbye went straight into the yurt,
Coming to the side of Khan Jodar.

"Khan Jodar,
Get up quickly!

I have something urgent to report to you.
Your body is in good health,
Do not lie down.
You are a khan,
Your mood should be in good state,
Don't you feel the danger?

"Khan Jodar!
Thousands of soldiers of Karamark,
Will ride over you.
Khotan, Yarkant, Kashgar,
Lop Nur, Aziq, Arele,
Six castles have been occupied by them;
Tashkent, Namangan and Samarkand,
Roads there have been blocked.

"Katmandob, Jaz,
Naryn, Atbarsh and Chumgale grassland,
No pedestrians on the road and no messages from there.
Karamark people are menacing,
They want to occupy Talas.

"Khan Jodar,
Yesterday I went to Kashgar,
On the way down the mountain,
Stopped unexpectedly by a group of Karamark people.
Shaparl is their leader,
They walk all over the valley,
They search everywhere ignoring fatigue,
They are searching you!
Khan Jodar!

"I talked to them with the language of Karamark,
I said I was a Karamark person,
They all believed it,
Telling me the truth.

"Three khans of Karamark,
Big ears Chounalep,
Copper navel Kekmat,
Iron overcoat Shalekmat,
They lead thousands of forces to invade,
From the yellow river shoal of Kuran.
Kashgar has been captured.
They are on the road to Talas.

"I have promised with Shaparl,
He takes people to wait at the head of Double Valley,
Asking me to cheat you into the pass,
They will catch you alive,
All the people take action together.
If I cheat you into their hands,
I will succeed,
To be the khan of Kashgar!

"Khan Jodar,
I never want to be the khan,
Flying to your side on horse.
Now there is no other way for you,
Report the situation to Kenainym in hurry.

"Khan Jodar,
I think under the circumstances,
We have to walk through a trail near mountains.
Following Double Valley,
There are Koyon Valley[1] and Kirtash,
Leading directly to the confluence of seven rivers.
We need to be one step ahead.

"Rush to the shoal of Tiran River,
Catch all the enemies.
After making people settle in,

1 Koyon Valley: Koyon, a Kirgiz term, means rabbit. A valley where rabbits haunt.

Hurry to find Kenainym."

Talparkbye made things clear,
Offering advices as well.
After hearing this,
Jodar leapt upon the saddle and said:
"Talparkbye,
My good brother,
You do a good job,
And give me good advices.
Your words are right.
We need to reach the head of Double Valley first,
To catch Shaparl.
Then go to the area of seven rivers,
To send message to Khan Kenainym,
Opportunity will not be missed."

Talparkbye and Jodar,
Flew to the head of Double Valley on horses.
Karamark people saw Talparkbye,
Knowing he had taken Jodar there.
They thought it as a gift of heaven,
Full of joy.

Talparkbye shouted hurriedly:
"I have taken Jodar to the valley,
Follow me to catch him quickly."
He ran to trail immediately,
After finishing words.

He lurked in the narrow and winding valley,
Waiting for Karamark to chase here.
At the narrowest corner,
He chopped off the head of Shaparl.

Jodar and Talparkbye,
Went towards the confluence of seven rivers.

They told the Karamark people in mountains:
"Jodar has been caught,
Get out of the valley and gather by the river."

Karamark people passed on the news to each other,
Unable to think it over,
Unable to expect the end was coming,
They went out of valley in droves and got to the river shoal.

Just at the shoal of Tiran River,
Khan Jodar spent two days,
Killing more than one thousand and three hundred Karamark people.

Jodar and Talparkbye,
Rode forward in the mountain canyon side by side,
No need to hide things in the mind,
Jodar opened his mouth finally:

"Talparkbye,
Do not go on following me.
I need to reach Talas in seven days,
Day and night without any relax.
From today,
Kapchaque is in the charge of you.

"I am the son of Toshtuk,
You are the descendant of Alaman as well,
Whatever happens,
Our hearts need to be linked and help each other.

"Our tribe is located in Taygaktash,
There are more than one thousand families.
Seven valleys and one exit,
You need guard the homeland with folks,
Never let them suffer invasion of enemies."

Jodar finished the words,

Without a stop,
Whipped horse and went forward.
His steed Krekala,
Its hooves raised a cloud of dust,
Dense fog from its mouth straight to the sky.

Jodar went over Taygaktash Daban,
Passed by Andijan and reached Atbarsh grassland,
Then saw Bagetebay and Shalekmat were fighting.
He stopped to watch,
Thinking the strength of Bagetebay was a little weaker.
He went into a narrow mountain path,
Trying to shorten the distance.

He reached Talas to meet Kenainym,
Telling all the information in detail:
"I saw Bagetebay was fighting fiercely with enemies,
I observed carefully.
Shalekmat of Karamark,
Was more superior with fierce momentum.
Bagetebay was younger after all,
Has not experienced a battle like this.

"I have been old and powerless,
Unable to fight or assist.
Kenainym,
Only if you go to fight in person,
The ferocious enemy can be defeated.

"If you leave here,
To support Bagetebay,
Kekmat may come here,
To trample the vast Talas grassland.
I hear that people suffer with blood and tears,
In the places where Big ears Chounalep goes,
Six cities,
Like Namangan, Tashkent, Samarkand and Andijan,

No one dares to fight back.

"Though there won't be too many casualties,
Khans and Chieftains of the tribe,
Will all be killed.
Arashi people seem to be faced with a catastrophe,
We need pray to the soul of Manas for blessing,
We need fight with composure and careful consideration."

The words of Jodar,
Made the blood of Kenainym boil.
He made up his mind to defeat enemies:
"I am the born khan,
For the happiness and health of Kirgiz people."
He ordered people to sound horns,
The sound for assembly spread everywhere.

The old heard the horn and wondered:
"Kenainym has never assembled the tribe with horns,
He never does anything like this.
What is it for today,
Does he want to discuss anything urgent?"

The smart young said:
"The battle horns won't be sounded easily,
We can't slight it for a moment,
Hurry to gather before the palace gate."

People gathered together,
Kenainym spoke in detail:
"Arashi people with white felt hats,
Compatriots of Kirgiz,
Uncle Jodar comes from Kashgar,
To tell me the emergency there.

"Three madmen of Karamark are extremely vicious,
They lead thirty thousand soldiers respectively,

To intrude us with three troops.
One of them occupied Khotan,
Yarkant and Kashgar.

Another one attacked six cities,
Namangan, Tashkent and Kokand,
Andijan, Samarkand and Bukhara.
The last one,
Entered into Atbarsh grassland.
Bagetebay stepped forward,
To lead people to fight against enemies.

"He neither defeats Karamark people,
Nor is defeated by Karamark people.
Both sides are in fierce battle.
As for how Andijan is on earth,
Uncle Jodar doesn't see either.

"My compatriots,
Listen,
Tajik people have been separated from us,
Seeking refuge of Karamark people.
Kirgiz people in Oboler,
Are suffering great hardship,
Just like goats hiding under stones.

"Since ancient times,
Chechdob has never fallen into the hands of enemies,
Enemies even dare not cast a glance,
Even if there are some enemies daring to intrude,
None of them can survive.
It is the soul of Manas that blesses there,
All the invading enemies will suffer,
All the vicious madmen will die.

"I will rush to Atbarsh immediately,
To support Bagetebay,

To rescue Kirgiz people there from danger.
Kirgiz people staying in Talas,
You need to make all preparations.
If Karamark people strike here,
You must fight back together.

"Not only graze cattle well,
But also stay alert.
Do not only concern yourselves,
Staying at home rather than going out.

"Strong men,
Stand in the front of folks.
Do not look down on others,
Protecting homeland needs working together.
To hold the city,
Do not lose the wall,
Do not let the city and palace,
Occupied by Karamark people.

"Compatriots of Atbarsh are in danger facing strong enemies,
I can't stay here and must leave for there.
You belong to the same tribe,
You are the people of the same khan.
When I am not at home,
Listen to Chieftain.
From today,
Chieftain is Kolibye,
Everyone must obey his orders."

Kenainym finished his words,
Rode the horse Kankura,
And wore the bulletproof armor.
Jodar followed him,
Ready to set out for Atbarsh.
They planned to rush that very night,
To reach Atbarsh next dawn.

Before leaving,
They came before the Manas mausoleum,
Praying to the soul of Manas.
At the worship time in the afternoon,
They set foot on the journey hurriedly.
It was just next morning when they reached Atbarsh.

Bagetebay and Shalekmat,
Their truce for ten days had ended,
Battle had been resumed three days ago,
Bagetebay and Suyin were both injured.
Except them,
No warriors in the battle came back alive.
The bodies of ten warriors were still left in the wild,
Kirgiz people were worried and anxious.

Shalekmat shouted:
"Anyone eager to die comes out to fight!"
Suyin rushed into the battlefield,
To fight alone.
Bagetebay was extremely worried,
Thinking:
"The fate of Suyin is hard to expect today."

Hero Suyin yelled to answer,
Shouted the slogan of Manas,
And rushed bravely towards the wild beast Shalekmat.

Shalekmat was menacing,
Whipped horse to rush forward,
The raised dust covered all the sky.
When he rushed before Suyin,
Warrior Suyin was in a little panic.
Shalekmat seized the opportunity,
To thrust Suyin to the ground,
Raised the spear and stabbed at his chest.

Bagetebay was full of anger,
Whipped the black horse with button ears,
To risk his life to rescue Suyin.

Seeing this,
Shalekmat took back the spear towards Suyin.
He turned around to spear Bagetebay,
Warrior Suyin took the chance to escape.

The spear of Bagetebay,
Was blocked aside by Shalekmat.
Bagetebay tried his best to fight bravely,
The two warriors kept fighting all the morning.

Shalekmat was extremely furious,
Shouting at Bagetebay:
"Damned Bagetebay,
My defeated foe,
You dare to fight with me again.
Since you seek death,
Do not blame me for heartlessness.
I will catch you alive,
Tie to the horsetail and drag you on gobi till death."

Kenainym saw this with rage,
He shouted:
"Bagetebay!"
Exhausted Bagetebay,
Hearing the hero calling him,
Recovered his strength at once,
As if he just went into battle with power and prestige.

Door-like teeth,
Shining in the mouth.
Bagetebay mustered again the courage,
Shouted the slogan of Manas,

And rushed bravely towards the madman.

Protecting the dignity of ancestors,
Is the sacred responsibility of descendants.
At the time of tribe crisis,
Never spare your own life.

Bagetebay and Shalekmat,
A life-and-death struggle was hard to win.
Bagetebay risking his life,
Already had forgotten the life and death,
Tying his life to the blade.

Two heroes fought and struggled,
Tall Karamark,
Was not in a muddle.
They kept fighting till dusk,
Then withdrew troops and returned to camp respectively.

Kenainym Rescued Bagetebay

Another night had gone,
The day just dawned,
Karamark people drummed loudly,
To urge Kirgiz people to go into battle.

Arrogant Shalekmat shouted:
"Bagetebay,
Come out to fight."
Karamark people did not know,
Kenainym had arrived yesterday.

Shalekmat thought:
"Today I will kill Bagetebay,
Make Kirgiz people bow their heads,
Then march towards Sire City in Talas,
To deal with Kenainym.
My action must succeed,
There is no need,
To let Kekmat and Chounalep know."

Shalekmat was extremely conceited,
The wild beast wanted to be a hero,
Making his reputation spread everywhere,
He strutted to the battlefield.

Bagetebay rode the horse,
To continue the fight with Shalekmat,
When it came to the third turn,
He was struck down from the horse.

Shalekmat drew the sword,
To cut off his neck.

At the very urgent moment,
Kenainym like a flying arrow,
Came to the enemy.
He blocked aside the sword of the opponent,
Launching powerful challenge,
To the mountainous Shalekmat.

Shalekmat took a glance at him,
Saying:
"Yellow face and blue eyes,
Fire in your eyes,
Rage on your yellow face,
You have unusual looks.
I have seen lots of people,
No one looks as odd as you.

"Your steed has fat and wide rump,
An outstanding horse.
You and your horse are extraordinary,
And impressive.

"Where are you from?
Are you a slave of Bagetebay,
Rushing here and working hard to flatter him.

"At the moment that your master was struck down by me,
You rushed to me in a sudden,
Letting me unpleasant and lose my face.
Today I will stain my sword,
With the blood of Bagetebay!"
Shalekmat showed his sword,
Grabbed in the hand.

Kenainym started to talk:

"It does not matter I am a master or a slave,
Your end has come,
You needn't worry about it.

"You want to get my number,
I tell you openly,
I am the descendant of Aykoler Manas.
Called Yellow-faced Death,
Named Kenainym.

"You the Karamark person,
Why do you burst into our homeland from a great distance?
We never invade others,
If anyone invades us,
I must bury him in the tomb,
It is the code inherited from our ancestors.

"We the Kirgiz people,
Never go through your daban,
Never burst into your homeland alone,
And never drive your horses away;
Never rob the money in your wallet,
And never take a little of your silver away;
Never take one of your things away,
And never graze cattle in your land;
Never harvest your cornfield,
Why do you intrude us across mountains and rivers?

"We the Kirgiz people,
Never talk about your things,
And never spread secretly your rumors;
Never say your footprint faces to north or south,
And never lift your clothes on your chest;
No young men break into your yurt,
And seize your women.

"We the Kirgiz people,

Never break into your sheepfold,
To drive your sheep outside;
Never kill your small camels,
Making your mother camels wail in the valley;
Never seize your horses,
Making your family restless;
Never seize your cows,
Making your children yell and cry.

"Karamark people,
Why not stay at your homeland,
But invade fields and meadows of others instead?
Why run so far tirelessly,
To tangle with kind Kirgiz people endlessly?
How much hardship do you take to the people living in peace,
How many old people and children are suffering and frightened?

"Karamark people,
I heard that Big ears Chounalep,
Occpuied Arele, Aziq and Lop Nur,
Khotan, Yarkant and Kashgar,
Oppressing and spoiling people there.

"Karamark people,
People there never take your any property,
Never destroy your homeland;
People there never seize your treasures and money,
Never expose your ugly face.
Why do you invade people there?

"Karamark people,
Samarkand, Tashkent and Namangan,
Andijan, Bukhara and Kokand,
Tribes in these six cities,
Do they have any hatred with your fathers?
Do your ancestors store treasures there,
That you ask them to return?

"Karamark people,
Atbarsh, Naryn and Chumgale,
Katmandob and Jaz grassland,
People there never go to your place,
Do they owe any livestock to you,
That you come to ask them to return?

"Karamark people,
Chechdob is originally the hometown of Koshaoyi,
So far away from Karamark,
Why do you take disaster to them,
From a great distance?

"You have no reasons,
To break into yurts of Arashi people in the village,
To leave evil footprints in the distance.
Where is your courage from?
Still about to trample the hometown of Manas!
You have lost your senses,
Your end is doom.

"You ride the horse without saddle,
Knocking with feet at the belly of horse.
You spread rumors to stir up troubles,
To push the war towards us.

"If you do not make troubles but turn back,
I can make a concession and forgive you.
If you go on the road leading to death,
I have to fulfill your wish.

"Call your associates together,
I will send you to another world,
In case you go your separate ways after death.

"I Kenainym have a dignified life,
Never thinking of death.

Fighting against me ago,
Were killed one by one.

"There were giants eating people in the west,
I advised them not to continue doing evil,
But they ignored me,
Sent to hell by me for what they did.

"Iron overcoat Shalekmat,
It's said that Big ears Chounalep,
Copper navel Kekmat and you,
Once bewitched and lured by Qiktay,
Wanted to ally with him and intrude Kirgiz.

"You three idiots,
He wanted to make use of you,
To work for him.
He has already been sent to hell by me,
If you do not wake up but go on his way,
I will send you to his side one after another."

Iron overcoat Shalekmat shouted angrily:
"There is no one who can defeat me in the world,
It's you that will go to hell between us.
It's you that refuse to leave the beautiful world,
Lengthening the topic intentionally,
Makes your life last for a few more minutes.
Your mouth need to rest,
Wait and see how I tidy up you!"

Shalekmat wielded the spear,
To thrust at Kenainym.
He gritted teeth with squeaking,
Foaming at the mouth.
The wild beast boiled with anger,
Tears in the eyes mixed with blood together,
Flowing down constantly.

He kept soliloquizing:
"Oh God,
I beg you,
For a bit more strength,
Bless me to strike down Kenainym."

Shalekmat had majestic looking,
The wielded spear,
Was humming.
Kenainym stood still,
No expression on the solemn face.

Shalekmat rushed up fiercely,
His momentum seemed to collapse the ground.
Kenainym confronted calmly,
To strike back.

Two people both blocked the other's spear,
Spears collided with tinkling.
They risked their lives,
To hack at each other with battleaxes.
Battleaxes flew towards the other's head,
Sound of helmets was like thunder.

Heroes yelled loudly,
People were almost deafened.
They fought back and forth,
Locked in fiercer battle.
It was a close battle between the two warriors,
No one could hardly defeat the other.

One thrust with spear,
The other blocked it aside;
One hacked with battleax,
The other dodged it aside.
Spears were broken and flew into the sky,
Whirlwind began to blow in the sky,

Fighting to the death without any break.

Exhausted steeds,
Hardly moved the hooves.
They jumped off horses and threw weapons,
Grabbed each other's belt,
Wiggled hard to tumble each other,
Pushing,
And twisting.
They trod on the splendens,
Splendens were uprooted.
They fought in the marsh,
Water in the marsh were squeezed empty,
They were locked in the fight.

Torn were their armors,
Lost were buttons,
On the body were scars.
Powerful warriors and heroes,
Were different from normal persons,
Their fight,
Not only made themselves black and blue,
But also made people painful.

The battlefield they fought on,
Grasses were trod in mud,
Marsh turned into pool,
They rode horses again and held spears.

Shalekmat of Karamark,
Had been really tired out,
He begged to Kenainym:
"Since I was born and named Shalekmat,
I fought with many warriors and heroes ever.
Thing of this kind never happened before,
I never met such a warrior or hero like you.

"Now my whole body is powerless,
Armor has been broken.
Kenainym,
If you agree,
We will return to camps to rest.

"I have not eaten a mouthful of food for several days,
Fighting with Bagetebay on an empty stomach for five days,
Then fighting again with you for three days.
I am risking my life,
To go into battle,
Now I have been extremely exhausted.

"Oh Kenainym,
If you strike me down,
While I am hungry and powerless,
It will damage your fame.

"I need to go back to eat,
Fill the belly first,
Nine days to rest.

"I need to repair my armor,
Make spearhead sharper.
Make crescent axe gleam,
Make sword able to cut everything.

"We make an appointment to fight again.
If I am defeated,
Even though losing my life,
I will die without regret.

"On Kenainym,
Wait me to restore energy,
Bring all the weapons,
And fight with you again.
Arrogant Kenainym,

I will beat you!"
After finishing his words,
Shalekmat sighed,
Again and again,
To show his exhaustion.

Kenainym said:
"All right,
Shalekmat,
Do as what you say.
Go back!
Do not starve to death before me.

"I give you nine days,
You must be prepared.
In case you die with feeling wronged.
I let you have good meals for the last days,
After nine days,
You must appear before me,
I will dry your skin on the stone."

Kenainym let Shalekmat go,
Shalekmat rode away.
"Why let the enemy go back?"
Many Kirgiz people were pretty worried.

Bagetebay took Kenainym to the palace,
Killed a fat empty mare,
Wrapped the body of Kenainym with horse skin,
To suck purulent blood on his body.
Bagetebay killed a mare every day,
As the food of Kenainym to maintain his body.

"Will Karamark people escape?
Will they eat our livestock,
On empty stomachs?
Kirgiz people of Atbarsh,

Monitored movements and traces of Karamark people,
Day and night.

Shalekmat turned around to return to the camp,
He gathered all the followers together:
"This Kirgiz man, Kenainym,
Never look down on him.
We three sat together before departure,
Deciding to lead the troops here.
We drunk too much kumiss then,
Strength of alcohol hit the head.
How can we know,
The damned Kenainym has,
Not only matchless strength,
But also a glib tongue.

"At the first time meeting me in battlefield,
He spoke lots of words.
His words were logical and reasonable,
From beginning to end.
He spoke no wrong word,
Making me convinced,
Unable to dispute.
I fell into an embarrassed and passive position,
I had to wield the spear to fight against him.

"I fought with him for three days,
Making myself almost finished.
All the weapons were damaged,
I was exhausted with scars on the whole body.
I had no alternative,
But to beg Kenainym for the truce,
Then got nine days to rest.
Now I am wounded,
With intolerable pain from top to toe.
I indeed can't support any more.

"I feel soft and powerless,
Are the bones all broken?
My body is swelling and suppurating,
Are the muscles turned into muddy flesh?

"Bring medicines to me quickly,
More Kermarkzle,
And pasty Sari medicine①,
No matter how much there are,
Bring all of them.

"Find the bile of bald crow,
Apply it on the bleeding places for several times;
Find the bile of eagle,
Feed me quickly,
Injury of my liver will be cured immediately.

"Find the bile of badger and marmot,
Mix them together and stir for several times,
It can clear up the infection of my urethra.

"Find the bile of argali and sheep,
Mix them together and give me two bowls of them.
I tell you,
It can eliminate intestinal diseases.

"Find the bile of grizzly,
Apply it on the lumps,
They will be eliminated and never appear.

"Oh,
My stomach is empty!
Figure out a way quickly,
To fulfill my belly well.
More animals and livestock are better,

① Sari medicine: It means the yellow ointment.

If less than forty-five,
I can never be full.

"Two big grizzlies,
Seven dogs,
Thirty badgers and marmots,
One eagle and one wolf,
Four jackasses at least.
Each one is needed,
Find all today.

"Put meat into pot,
Control heat for cooking meat.
After boiling the pot,
When the broth turns gray,
Cover the pot closely to cook.
Make the meat soft,
Easy to masticate,
Let me enjoy the feast.

"You need to do things thoughtfully,
If I am unsatisfied with anything,
Never hope to survive,
I will never forgive!"

Karamark people followed the order of khan,
Looked for the things khan needed at once,
Trying to find all of them.
Fetching medicines and making khan take them,
Keeping applying medicines on his body meanwhile.

Shalekmat was covered and lay flat,
People fumbled to nurse him.
In front of Shalekmat,
They put the meat he wanted to eat into the pot.

Shalekmat had lots of followers,

Someone thought he could get rid of Shalekmat,
Happiness in the heart and smile on the face;
Someone did not know what would happen tomorrow,
Worry in the heart,
Sorrow on the face;
Someone thought the end was coming,
Looking around,
Shaking with fear;
Someone had rancor in the heart,
Holding sharp sword stealthily;
Someone cared about nothing,
Going his own way without anything unrelated;
Someone did not listen to any nice words,
Making troubles everywhere;
Someone kept rushing and working,
Showing off himself,
To stand out among people.

In the world there are,
The good,
And the bad,
The divine,
And the vile,
The smart,
And the stupid.
Among the people,
There are various persons.
This is the world,
Nothing new.

After sleeping for nine days,
Shalekmat woke and got up,
Swallowed all the prepared food,
And licked the rice bowl clean.
He said he still wanted some naan:
"Give me more quickly."
He ate and counted,

Until to forty-five.
Then he took out spirits,
Drank ten bowls of spirits in one breath.

Shalekmat wore Kurek armor,
Fastened the iron belt thick as thigh,
Held the spear immersed in venom,
Took all the weapons,
And rushed again into the battlefield conqueringly.

Yellow-faced Death Lifted Shalekmat up With Spear

Nursed for nine days,
Shalekmat became stronger,
Domineering and unstoppable,
Like burning fire in the dusk.
The spear held in the hand,
Was hissing.
Karamark people thought gladly:
"Today Kirgiz people will be all killed."

Kirgiz people saw the majestic look of Shalekmat,
Thinking:
"How can this be done?"
Some people were frightened to move forward,
Some people mumbled:
"How can we let the enemy go back to rest?
Attacking us more fiercely after renewing strength.
It makes no sense that Kenainym does like this."

Someone said in the heart:
"Maybe the hero believes in himself,
He has his own reason.
Chechdobatta,
Please bless your offspring;
Soul of Manas in heaven,
Please show the outlet to your descendant."

Bagetebay said to Kenainym:
"Let me fight against Shalekmat first."

Kenainym disagreed,
"Oh,
Bagetebay,
Look at the ferocious beast,
He holds the grudge and anger.
In the fight with him today,
It is not easy to surrender him.
I have tried to figure out him carefully,
And mastered his temper and tactics.
I have met many people like this,
Better let me tackle this beast.

"Bagetebay,
I have something to tell you,
Please keep in mind.
If soul of great-grandfather Manas blesses me,
If I have good luck,
At some hour of afternoon,
I will strike Shalekmat down.

"After that,
You need to surround Karamark people,
In case they flee everywhere.
Do not let Kirgiz people,
Rush into the crowd of Karamark people.
Tough men among them,
May risk their lives to fight their way out the camp anytime.

"Bagetebay,
You need to know,
A son who loses his father,
Will not be isolated if he has perseverance.
A daughter who loses her mother will only be an orphan girl.
People who lose heroes will be oppressed,
Tribe losing khan will be wretched.

"People without children need support,

People without relatives need visit.
Losing husband in old age,
Such women are the most unfortunate.
Except for these misfortunes,
Other misfortunes are nothing.

"The Karamark people who lose khan,
Do not hurt them with no reasons.
All of them need to obey the order of khan.
None of the people,
Fights with us for his own thing.
Do not kill the soldiers who lay down arms,
To avoid hurting innocent lives."

After ordering,
Kenainym jumped onto the horse and left the camp.

The face of Kenainym was full of rage,
Angry fire burst out of the eyes,
No one dared to look straight into his eyes.
Kenainym was just like a lofty mountain,
Look from the front——
Like the raining sky covered by thick cloud;
Look from the back——
Like the cloudless sky after raining;
Look from the cloud——
Like Aripkarakush bird,
So scared and solemn;
Look from bottom to top,
Like a dragon in the sky,
His majesty frightened enemies.

His steed Kankura,
Horsetail was waving in the wind,
White fog spurted from nostrils,
Like running in the sky.
Kenainym wielded the spear,

The earth shook and rumbled,
As if two mountains collided.
Karamark people seeing the figure of hero,
Trembled and sat unsteady on the horses,
Terrified like encountering cold winter wind.

Damned Shalekmat shouted:
"Kenainym,
There is no way back for you.
No matter how much strength you have,
No matter what your schemes are,
I will not let you return alive.

"I am vigorous,
I have revived,
Seeing my strong and mighty body,
You are too scared to have any strength,
I will not let you get back alive.

"I will not only occupy Naryn and Atbarsh,
But also raze Talas to the ground.
I will make your wife become a widow,
I will make your son become my servant,
I will make your daughter become my maid.
Make the rest of Kirgiz people,
Lose a family fortune,
All become slaves,
To serve me, Shalekmat.

"Oh Kenainym,
After you die,
Who will your Arashi people find to complain?

"Why do you act as a hero,
Letting me rest for nine days?
Do you offend God,
Or lose your mind?

It is your fatal mistake.

"I have been well prepared today,
How dare you come to fight with me?
It seems your end has been coming,
I will send you to lie buried."

Kenainym spoke loudly:
"Shalekmat,
Have you finished the boast?
Why do you seem to hardly wait and be scrambled?

"In your exhausted and hungry time,
It was you that begged me for truce to go back to eat meals.
Now you have been full,
Shouting and screaming again before me.

"Death seems to have arrived,
Riding on your neck.
Your life is about to be ended,
Do you rush towards battlefield and go to your death,
Without farewell to relatives?

"Shalekmat,
Death is grabbing your neck.
Do you know?
Life like a play,
Alive today,
May dead tomorrow,
This afternoon,
You will disappear from the world.

"My name is Kenainym,
I am a merciful khan,
My words always count.
You spend nine days eating and drinking,
That is your last feast.

"Shalekmat,
Do not think you are so fierce,
You can't even match Khan Haribek!
Do not think you are so brave,
You can't even match Khan Qiktay!
Do not have false pride and much arrogance,
You should do what you can do,
Weigh yourself."

The words of Kenainym,
Touched the nerve of the beast,
Making him hurt.
The words passed through his bones,
Like bullets through his heart.

Shalekmat was exasperated and stamped with fury,
Raising dust on the ground.
Chechdob grassland suddenly opened,
A Tuyoke[1] soil cliff appeared.

Shalekmat reined to avoid,
Turned around to rush towards Kenainym,
Wanted to kill Kenainym.

When he thrust with the poison spear,
Kenainym fought back with battleax.
The battleax of Kenainym had huge power,
The spear of Shalekmat,
Was broken into ninety parts in the air and flew apart.

Not waiting him to take out new weapon,
Hero Kenainym,
Had whipped horse to rush forth.

1 Tuyoke: A Kirgiz term. means pathless, closed.

Frantic Shalekmat,
Wore heavy iron armor,
Rolled-up clothing bottom and completely exposed buttock.
He had no time to turn around.

The mane wolf Kenainym seized the opportunity,
Speared his buttock hard.
Sharp spearhead pierced his body,
Through his heart.
The mane wolf lifted him high on spearhead,
Whipped horse to go towards Karamark forces.

At the distance of a stone's throw,
The forces of Kirgiz caught up,
To surround the Karamark people.
Karamark people on horses,
Every one of them jumped off saddle,
Hung the rein around the neck,
Saluted the Kirgiz people,
And kneeled to the ground.

Grandson of the giant Koshaoyi, Bagetebay,
Heard the order of Kenainym in the morning.
Facing the soldiers of Karamark falling on their knees,
He repeated the words of Kenainym:
"Soldiers of Karamark,
You were originally plain folks,
Usually short of food and clothes and living a hard life.
You were compelled to go on an expedition by Shalekmat,
You were forced to battle involuntarily.

"I will not hurt you,
There is no hatred between us.
I will give you freedom,
Letting you step on the way to return home.

"I will not seize your horses,

Your horses are no wonder to me.
If I seize your horses,
Letting you rush on foot,
When can you return to the yellow valley of Kuran?

"If I let you return via Kashgar,
No one can survive certainly.
You need to pass through Kashgar,
And go over the snowy daban of Barkol.
On the way that you came through,
You did lots of bad things.
Many people living along the way,
Their anger has not been defused.
Now you return with defeat,
How can they let you go?

"I will not seize your robes,
Robes of Kirgiz are thicker and more gorgeous than yours,
You need to go over the pass of Kenda Mountain,
Go forward along Aksayi.
Taygaktash full of grass,
The daban there is relatively low,
You can climb over there.
There are lots of wind, frost, rain and snow along the way,
Leave your robes to yourselves.

"Do not move slowly on the road,
Keep away from villages and make a detour,
Never harass people on the way.
Meeting the pedestrians on the road,
Never stare eyes.
If I hear you do bad things,
I will ride horse immediately to deal with you.

"There were thirty thousand forces when you came,
Now twenty thousand left.
Kirgiz forgives you,

Giving you horses,
Letting you return home.
You should appreciate to the magnanimous Kirgiz people.

"I will send five warriors,
To escort you back.
After you go over Kuran Daban,
My warrior will step on the homeward journey.

"You need to remember my words,
The time limit specified by me is forty days.
If my warriors can't return on schedule,
I will urge the horse to stop you."

Karamark people heard the words,
Letting them return home and giving them horses,
were deeply grateful to speak with one voice:
"Let God punish our khan,
It is he that forces us to leave home,
To go to battlefield for a great distance.

"Oh, khan of Kirgiz,
It is you that let us return home,
It is you that let us wear our own robes,
It is you that let us ride our own horses,
We really appreciate you.
We won't disobey your orders,
Please do not trouble warriors to escort us back.

"We will not return via Kashgar,
If we pass by,
People there will regard us as deserters.
We did lots of bad things,
Anger of folks has not been defused,
We will be hit if passing by.

"From Jildez[1] to Manas city,
There live Kirgiz people in hills,
From Manas city to Barkol,
There live Kazakh people.

"Can we break up the whole into parts,
Make a detour in small groups,
Avoid the eyes of people,
Return to the forest of Kuran valley."

Bagetebay heard their request,
Silent and no answer.

Hero Suyin took the letter of Kenainym in pocket,
Arranged guards to count remnant troops.
He led five warriors,
Escorting the remnant Karamark troops homeward.

They walked in the daytime without a stop,
Continued going at night without a rest.
Those horses unable to walk,
Were marked and left on the spot.
They hurried on with their journey day and night,
Many people hurt their feet,
Staggering on the road.

They went over Alebald Daban,
Suyin and warriors turned back.
Suyin sent people to search along the way,
Found all the horses left on the road.
Seventeen thousand in total,
All were handed to Bagetebay.

Bagetebay gathered the tribe,

1 Jildez: A place. A Kirgiz term, means star.

Distributing the horses taken back in public.
Many families lost horses, cattle or livestock in the battle,
These horses compensated them.

Let us put this story down,
And talk again about how Kenainym defeated Kekmat.

Angry Kenainym Killed Kekmat

Messenger of Karamark Revealed Military Situation

Grandson of the giant Koshaoyi, Bagetebay,
Sent Suyin to escort the remnant troops of Karamark,
Then relaxed nervous mind.

Waiting Bagetebay to return,
Kenainym did not go homeward until saying goodbye to him.
Bagetebay kept him again after coming back,
Kenainym was kept and unable to depart.

Kenainym made the reply:
"Bagetebay,
Please listen carefully,
The saint Bakay taught us:
'A man bows before you,
You should bow back to show respect,
Because he is not a left follower of your father.
A man swaggers before you,
You should hold your head high to show dismissiveness,
Because he is not a descendant of sages.'
The discipline of saint Bakay,
Is not from a whim and without foundation.

"Famine spread and tortured the tribe in those years,
I also suffered from illness and could not move about,
The bitch Kublegen,
Took advantage of the weak point to provoke Talas.
In the time of crisis,
It was you that provided timely help to overcome difficulties.

"It was you that caught Jodar alive,
Brought ninety thousand livestock carrying food,
Helped me out of trouble,
I was very impressed with this,
With fresh memory so far.

"Oh, my warrior,
Please not delay my homeward journey again,
I guess Copper navel Kekmat,
He is launching an attack towards Talas."

Bagetebay wanted to go with Kenainym,
Rather than stay at Atbarsh.
Son of the hero Seytek, Kenainym,
Was so pleased as if gaining thousands of forces.

They got up early and rode side by side,
Horses rushed forth as if arrows left spring.
In the still of night,
They arrived at the palace gate of Talas.
They saw Kirgiz people rested easy,
Surrounded by quietness.

Bagetebay stayed at Talas for six days,
Pondering and wondering:
"The forces of Karamark that Jodar mentioned,
Why are they not seen so far?
The Karamark people with wild ambitions,
Rob and kill people everywhere.
Do they stay at Kashgar or Andijan,
Fighting with the people revolting,
Or local people surround them,
Stopping their crazy forward steps.

"I can not continue staying at Talas,
Waiting Karamark to intrude,
Like welcoming honored guests from afar.

It is better to go to Andijan,
To see the movement of Kekmat."
He bid farewell to Kenainym and set out alone.

Kenainym rested at home,
Pondering restlessly.
"If I go straight to Kashgar,
I have to enquire the situations of,
Yarkant, Khotan and Lop Nur.
Arele, Aziq and Tetirs,
I also have to tour there,
Much time must be spent there,
I need to keep waiting for two days with patience,
Maybe some message will come from there."
Many thoughts twisted in his mind.

After two days,
At the dawn of the third day,
He woke up and saw,
The yellow field of Jedigair,
Covered with overwhelming troops and horses,
A sea of people were boundless.

As the sun just appeared,
Two messengers came to the city gate.
They shouted at the guards:
"Where is your hero Kenainym?
Hurry to report the message to him,
If he dares to fight, stand out.
If he feels fear,
Send Sire City to us.
If he is a hero daring to fight against,
Raise battle flags and make up his mind,
Come into battlefield to fight with us!"

The two messengers advertised everywhere:
"We have sixty Herculeses,

Hidden in some place outside the city.
As long as Kenainym comes out of town alone,
They will rush forward to tie him up."

The gate guards had never seen such a scene,
Frightened and flustered.
As if a bloody war was in front of them,
Panting and shaking with fear.
They hurried to come up to Kenainym,
To report the situation of messengers.

Kenainym said at once:
"Go back hurriedly,
Do not let them run away.
Bring the two messengers to me quickly,
Do not make decisions at your own will without authorization,
Do not speak spiteful or nasty words to them."

The gate guards went hurriedly back to the palace gate,
Saw the two messengers were still in front of the gate.
The guards conveyed the order of Khan Kenainym,
To the two messengers.

The two messengers held their heads high and raved:
"We are the messengers sent by Khan Kekmat,
Delivering letters among the tribes.
We only obey the order of Khan Kekmat,
Kenainym asks us to salute him,
You people really do not understand the rules,
What right do you have to say the nonsense!

"We are not naive children,
Unable to obey your assignment.
We can't go to the palace of Kenainym to visit him,
With hands on the chest,
For he is not our khan."

Messengers raved,
Putting Khan Kenainym down,
Raising Kekmat of Karamark up.
Guards pulled them down from horse angrily,
Surrounded and punched them hard.

They were asked to run barefoot,
Escorted to Kenainym.
Guards reported what happened to Kenainym,
In full detail.

Kenainym asked the messengers:
"Where are you from?
What are your names?
Who leads you,
What is his name?
Tell the truth and conceal nothing,
Only in this way can you preserve your lives,
To go back safely."

Kenainym ordered his men to their faces:
"If they rave,
And lie,
Scalp them and sprinkle alkali salt,
Nail their feet with wooden sticks!
Hook their eyelids with steel hooks,
Hoist them,
And hang them on the Taleku frame[①].

Facing the majesty of Kenainym,
Messengers were too frightened to speak with stiff tongues.
Guards who heard the rave of messengers,
Took them to interrogation room.
In the interrogation room,
Iron nails on the walls were innumerable,

① Taleku frame: A wood correction tool used by Kirgiz carpenters to make the fences and struts of yurt.

Covering all the walls,
They would stick into scalp if someone raised head.

Guards let them walk on the nails,
Feet were punctured and bleeding.
Guards let them walk around,
At last entered the serpent room.

There were ten sorts of serpents in the room,
The huge one was as thick as hitching post,
Red fork of its tongue was a handspan long.
In the serpent room,
There were also poisonous spiders and scorpions.
There were blue ticks and lizards,
Woodlice and hedgehogs,
Countless mosquitoes and flies,
Just during the time to cook a meal,
They would take your life and let you die.

Guards escorted two messengers,
Walking around seven rooms like that.
Two messengers dripped with sweat,
Scared out of their wits.
Poor lives were dying.

Guards escorted them to turn full circle,
And returned to the original room.
The two poor men were in panic,
Just during the time to boil a pot of tea,
Their faces became as ugly as loess.

Guards called grooms,
To clean their whole bodies,
Brought spirits made from mare's milk,
To let them drink:
"As long as telling your details,
You can return to the people of your own."

The two hapless men,
Thought of the terrible experience just now,
Shaking with extreme fear.
They told all the things:
"Six cities and Andijan,
Namangan, Tashkent and Samarkand,
Have been occupied by Kekmat.
Khans of Kirgiz,
Bigans in charge of people,
Their necks are caught by ropes,
Their hands and feet are put in chains.

"Those people are imprisoned,
No one knows what Kekmat is planning.
Kekmat once threatened,
To kill the people of Kenainym,
All of them.

"Last night,
We got to the broad hinterland of Talas,
Camping before Sire.
The sixty Herculeses selected by Kekmat,
Ambushed in the bank of Karasu River.

"He made those Herculeses,
Arrange a tight dragnet.
As long as Kenainym goes out of town alone,
They will draw the net to catch him.
In the place for battle,
Traps have been dug,
Covered by reeds as disguise.

"Kekmat hyped,
'I build up huge net under the ground,
I dig traps in the battlefield,
My troops and horses are countless,

I have occupied six cities,
Andijan and Namangan,
Tashkent and Samarkand are in our hands as well,
What will I have to regret in my life!

"'We come to Talas,
Talas has a vast territory,
Its original name is Kotuliac,
Manas renamed it Talas.
I will erase the name Talas,
And resume the original name Kotuliac.'
He made an order:
'Anyone who dares to call Talas,
Will lose his tongue and be killed.'

"He sent us here,
To deliver the message of his challenge.
He made us propagate that,
Iron overcoat Shalekmat,
Is coming here.
Big ears Chounalep also rushes to assemble,
He asked us to finish the propaganda,
Then return to camp."

Kenainym had known,
The wild ambition and purpose of Karamark people;
Kenainym had known,
The intrigue of Kekmat;
Kenainym had known,
The bitter experience of khans and Chieftains in six cities.
Kenainym knew very carefully,
No doubt was left.

He told the two messengers:
"You can go back now,
To tell what you see and hear,
To your leader Kekmat.

"I give him six days,
For his troops and horses to rest.
I will ride to launch an attack on the seventh day,
Making Kekmat smashed to pieces,
And suffer a crushing defeat!

"I will let him open bleary eyes,
To see his own fate.
I will tear up his viscera,
Throwing them to barren mountain and gobi.
I will let the blood of Karamark,
Flow everywhere as rivers.
Karamark people,
How much courage do you have,
We will fight a decisive battle that day.

"The long-awaited Shalekmat,
Has been killed by me.
Big ears Chounalep,
Timirbek of Tajik,
I won't let them come here.
After destroying Kekmat,
I will attack towards Dushanbe.
What I say is truth without a little falsehood,
Never think I am bluffing.

"If I start a war tomorrow,
It may be suspected I take advantage of your tiredness,
Even though I defeat you,
Some regrets will be left.

"Where there is battle,
There are two heroes.
Hero always fights with hero,
It is the tradition for fairness that khans and heroes seek."

The messengers hurried to return after released,
To Kekmat.
They reported what they saw and heard,
On the way back and forth in full detail.

After hearing,
The beast Kekmat took a deep breath with mouth wide open,
He said to himself:
"Kenainym was threatening the two people,
He seems to grasp our situation.
He said Shalekmat had died,
It was Kenainym lied on purpose.

"I can wait for six days,
The people sent to Atbarsh,
Will come back with messages.
I will rush into battlefield on the sixth day,
To catch Kenainym alive.

"I occupy six cities,
Catching ten officials from Andijan.
From Namangan, Tashkent and Samarkand,
Forty officials are caught here.
Adding them up,
I have imprisoned fifty people.
After I catch Kenainym alive,
There are fifty-one people in total.

"I will send people to continue searching,
Warriors and officials of Talas.
I will behead them to offer sacrifices to the heaven,
In front of the people of Kirgiz."

Kekmat pressed the two messengers:
"The dragnet arranged,
The traps preset on battlefield,
Did you tell them these military situations?"

The two returned servants,
Exchanged glances secretly,
Bit their lips to pretend to be calm,
And denied in collusion with each other:
"Kenainym never asked,
The situation about our troops and horses.
Even if he asked repeatedly,
We would not reveal the military situations."

Kekmat congratulated himself:
"It seems Kenainym doesn't know,
The dragnet and traps set by me,
It is my destined fortune,
Kenainym is about to fall into my hands."

Kekmat felt triumphant,
Stretching out and lying in the tent.
He dreamed that,
Shalekmat came to gather after defeating Bagetebay.

Two Warriors Rescued Fifty Chieftains by Strategy

Kenenainym called someone,
To convey his will to the Kirgiz.
"All the Kirgiz fellows with white felt hats,
Do not move to the remote mountains in panic,
As you hear of the invasion of enemies.
Do not let the darned Karamark,
Ascertain our actual situation.

"Do not worry about Kenainym myself,
There is no need to get to me.
If the Karamark invade the village,
Do not be afraid,
Take up your weapons and beat them up."

"Do not be overcautious,
Tie the maria and milk them as always.
Take precautions against livestock stealers,
Patrol on the meadow day in and day out.
Take good care of your livestock,
And considerately arrange your lives."
Kenainym repeatedly made his orders,
And sent his men to tell all the folks in village.

There were ninety-one warriors in the palace,
Kenainym summoned all of them:
"All of you ninety-one warriors guarding the court,
Please carefully listen to my words.
Our fifty chieftains,
Have been locked up in the hand of Karamark.

I am arranging a task,
To send you to go to the rescue,
Throwing the enemies off their guard,
And making them tremble with fright.

"You have been staying in the palace all the year round,
And in leisure time playing dibs.
If you fail to save those fifty chieftains,
Your honorable name as Palace Guardians will not be deserved."

Before the words of Kenainym had been finished,
And his lips had been closed,
Two warriors already came forward,
On their shoulders were Karamark's robe,
Whose lower part was dragged a long way on the ground.
A string of beads was hanging on each of their necks.
They were proficient in the language of Karamark,
Even confronted with hordes of troops and horses,
They could slip into the enemies by their wits.

"We will set out tonight,
To visit the leader of guards,
And send him spirit with both hands.
The way to rescue our chieftains,
We can make it clearly.

"We are setting out at dusk,
Choose fifty horses of the Karamark,
And let them carry our chieftains,
To come back safe and sound.
If the task is failed,
No matter what punishment it would be,
We would accept with no complaints."

All the other soldiers were unwilling to lag behind,
Volunteering for the assignment one group after another:
"We were just in negligence,

And almost lost the chance to render meritorious service.
If the two men have any difficulties,
We will never stand by."

Everyone was clamoring at a time,
The requests for assignment resounded in the room.
Seeing a moment like this,
Kenainym was deeply gratified.

The chance of making contributions was around the corner,
The two warriors were overjoyed,
And could not wait to mount their steeds.
Striding on the open field,
They came across two gadabout Karamark.
Tying the Karamark up,
They brought the two men to the Bukturma Hillock,
Untied the men and offered seats,
They forced wine on the Karamark,
And at the same time stated a chat.

After drinking the strong wine,
The two Karamark' eyes turned red and their heads spun,
Without understanding what was going on.
They ask the Kirgiz warriors:
"We thought you were Kirgiz,
While only to find that you are Karamark too,
For what reason did you capture us?
And why did you treat us with nice wine,
After grasping us to such a desolate place?"

The two warriors replied:
"You are telling the truth,
We were from the yellow valley of Kuran,
Since we were driven here to go on an expedition,
There was no happiness nor laugh.
We are the hunters of Karamark,
The chieftain ordered us to hunt gazelles,

We have no choice but to get here to make a search.

"We have hunted pheasants and sandgrouses,
And fried them to allay our hunger.
The cooked meat that we have not finished,
Are just in our bags on the horsebacks.
If you have not eaten yet,
We can treat you with those meat."

The two Karamark smiled with full of joy:
"Bumping in the journey all the time,
How can we get meat and wine?
Our mouths already watered,
As such a lucky thing happened to us."

"What did you mean,
When you said bumping in the journey?
Where did you come from?
Can it be that you are Kirgiz,
Who came here for spying on our situation?"
The two warriors queried them harshly.

The two Karamark answered:
"Kekmat departed from Samarkand,
To launch the attack on Talas,
He sent us to go to Atbarsh,
And observe the movements of Shalekmat.
We have no choice but to take the order,
And march forward day and night.

"What we saw were that Atbarsh was verdant in every single place,
All the Kirgiz were in great delights,
Busying in holding the goat-grabbing contest.
People of all ages,
Were beaming with smiles.
It was found that they were celebrating,
For the defeat of Shalekmat by Kenainym.

"After ascertaining the situation,
We were ready to return.
While someone drove the horses to approach,
Each of the horse carried a saddle.
The Kirgiz rush headlong,
Eager to divide the spoils.

"Under the cover of the crowd,
We managed to get back,
And save our lives.
While unexpectedly we have been put in this position,
Escorted to this place like slaves,
With our hands and feet tied up."

The two Kirgiz warriors,
Having known all the information,
And the names of the two Karamark,
Kill them at last.

The two warriors put on their robes,
Mounted their steeds,
Disguised the identity of Kirgiz,
And sneaked on the Karamark.

The soldiers of Karamark,
Thought they were on their side upon seeing the two warriors.
The two warriors did not go to Kekmat,
But walked into the camp after settling down.

The chief guard asked:
"You have been to so many places,
Have you brought me some fine wines?"

"How could we return with bare hands?
We have found nice wine but not that much for all men.
Come,

Let us get together,
And share the wine."

As the common saying goes:
"Though tomorrow we are going to die,
Do sing as much as we like when alive."

Hearing that the wine was not much,
The chief guard drove the young soldiers out of the camp.
To share the wine only three chieftains left,
Getting drunk and falling in dreams in no time.

The two Kirgiz warriors,
Took the chance to get the keys to the cells.
Quietly they opened the cells.
The fifty chieftains,
Rapidly fled from the cells.
With whips they urged the horses to leave,
The dust rose in clouds behind themselves.

One Kirgiz warrior,
Left a letter on purpose,
Telling the details of their success with no concealment,
Lied beside the pillow of a chief guard.

When someone came to open door of the cell,
The letter was noticed at first sight,
The man ran in haste,
To report the emergency to Kekmat.

Kekmat thought to himself:
"Kenainym's deal to launch the fight in six days,
Is meant to fool me and put off.
He was worried that I would kill the fifty chieftains,
Thus sent some men to break into the cells and rescue them.
I shall send someone to chase,
And kill them all."

Kekmat let some men to sound the war drums,
And ordered the soldiers to set off.
The troops chased in a great rush,
And fell into the traps dug by themselves.
One hundred Karamark soldiers,
Lost their lives in vain on the open field.
A famous saying was left by a poet:
"Those who dug the pit for harming others,
Will become the first to fall into the pit. "

Kekmat urged his steed to rush in the dark,
And fell into the trap that he had planned to make,
Even his steed was not immune.
The guards coming afterwards,
Finally saved him up.

In the light of the dawn,
The fifty chieftains who been rescued,
Walked through the palace gate of Talas.
They paid a formal visit to the Khan Kenainym,
And showed gratitude by thousands of words.

They recounted their common plight,
How had they been dragged down from the saddles,
How had they been put on handcuffs and shackles,
How had they been thrown into the dark jails,
And suffered from insults and miseries.

The wives and girls were driven,
And locked in huts and stables,
Without seeing the sunlight.
Sallow and tearful,
Their hearts were full of sadness and cries.

Kenainym comforted them:

"You have got rid of the plight,
Just be reassured at this place,
And rehabilitate for a few days.
You will return home soon after,
And reunite with your families.
The invading wild beast,
Is waiting for me to be beaten up."

After saying those words,
Kenainym let someone to lead his Kankura steed,
The mane wolf Kenainym whipped his horse,
Rushing forward to meet the attack of Copper navel Kekmat.

Fifty Chieftains Rushed to Jetitor at Night to Meet the Attack

The vicious Kekmat,
Ordered the war drum to be sounded,
And led all the troops to launch the attack,
While came across Kenainym on his way.

Kekmat did not know Kenainym,
And asked in a loud voice:
"I heard of Kenainym but never saw himself,
Your face is golden and eyes dark blue,
Your stature is different from the rest.
Your black steed holds its head high,
With its haunch plump and round,
Can it be that you are Kenainym himself?
Tell me at once."

Kenainym replied:
"You know that I am him,
Why are you still in my way?
You loitering mad dog,
Why did you come here to harass my folks?

"Six cities,
Anjijan, Namangan,
Tashkent and Samarkand,
People there have been living peaceful lives,
Since the age of Manas till these days.

Naryn, Chumgale and Atbarsh,
Also Katmandob and Jaz,

Have never been attacked,
Since the day Manas mounted his steed.

"Khotan, Yarkant and Kashgar,
Lop Nur, Aziq and Arele,
Up to the extensive Barkol,
No one dare to invade those terrains.

"You unscrupulous Karamark,
You are like the meteors in the sky.
Only having rested at home for two years,
You can not hold back,
To march towards Kirgiz from three sides.

"Since having stepped in Barkol,
You committed all manners of crimes as you wished.
You robbed all the fat livestock,
And grasp all the pretty women,
Making their husbands wifeless.

"Those who resisted to the disgrace,
Were all brutally killed.
You recklessly trod on the innocent folks,
There is no more room in hell for the crimes of you Karamark!

"Not only did yourself commit all manners of evil,
But also allured Tajik,
Making them join in your vicious course,
You are indeed a guilt-ridden beast!

"Your Qiktay Khan,
Waved long spear in his hand,
And swooped crazily on the Kirgiz folks.
In the Koktukat region,
He was desperate to cross his spear with mine,
Now was only a pile of dead bones under my feet.

"Now you three beasts,
Launched the attack on Kirgiz from three sides,
Threatening to trod down the Sire City of Talas.
Since I am still alive as the Death with yellow face,
You will never succeed!

"Shalekmat has been killed under my sword,
Chounalep shall also die in my hand.
I will not let you reunite when alive,
While you shall meet each other in the hell.

"You caught fifty chieftains of six cities,
They were all elites safeguarding the common folks.
While you put them in irons,
Threw them into the dark cells,
And almost ended their lives.

"I sent the warriors to rescue the fifty chieftains.
While from yesterday to this moment,
You kept leading troops to chase them,
But they have already came back to my side.

"You laid traps in every single place,
Dug pits in the battlefield,
Racked your brain in scheming,
And presumed that your plots will prevail.

"We made a deal of the fight in six days,
But you can not wait to challenge me,
The Death has led your way to me.
You will never go back alive,
To your hometown Kuran's yellow benchland!"

Hearing Kenainym's words,
Kekmat was in a towering rage:
"Kenainym!
Do you think that you will defeat me,

If you know all my traps that have been made,
And all my pits that have been dug?
Do you think that you will become a hero stronger than me,
If you kill Shalekmat,
This is no more than a daydream!

"The Big ears Chounalep,
And Shalekmat with Iron overcoat,
Both of them were eager to rally to me.
You reckless Kenainym,
How can you compare with me the Copper navel Kekmat?
I will put a rope around your neck,
And show you up before the public through the streets.

"You lied to me with your fake promises,
And secretly relieved the prisoners locked up by me,
It seems that you are a liar from the beginning to the end,
Making countless people fooled!
Kenainym,
Today I will teach you a lesson,
And never let you live to the next day!"

Kekmat was with unbearable insolence,
Rushed forward by whipping his horse.
Shouting the name of Kangayi,
He launched the fierce attack,
Towards the mane wolf Kenainym.

He insanely waved his spear in his hand.
And engaged in to battle against Kenainym.
The steed that carried him,
Opened its mouth as a huge black hole.

Confronting with the vicious Karamark,
Kenainym acted with no panic.
Kekmat stabbed his sharp spear,
While the Hero Kenainym waved his battleax,

And fended against the attacking spear.
The spear was broken into pieces,
And those pieces swished in the air.

Kenainym took his axe back,
And hung it at his waist,
He picked up the sharp spear,
And rushed towards Kekmat.

Kekmat was highly skilled in military drill,
And excelled at riding horses.
In the face of Kenainym's spear,
He made a sudden dodge beside his steed.
The sharp spear glittered as snow and frost,
Missing the target by side-wiping the saddle.

Kekmat sat on the horseback,
Grasping a tasselled spear,
He chased up Kenainym.
Kenainym fended off the attack,
By managing to duck away from the spear.

The two men turned their horse's heads around,
Stabbed the spears forward,
Waved the axes in their hands,
Slashed at full split,
Daring regardless of themselves.
Not until the sunset,
That they started to go back to their camp.

In the stillness of the night,
Kekmat woke up the soldiers,
And ordered as follows:
"Each group contains one thousand soldiers,
I command you attack the Kirgiz folks from different sides.
The upper reaches of Kankole is Jetitor,
That is where you shall reach.

"Every Kirgiz you have caught,
No matter old or young,
Man or woman,
Kill them and do not leave anyone alive.
Every spot you have been,
Wipe out the people living in that place,
And soak the earth into blood.

"I shall fight against Kenainym here,
Not letting him to get away.
You shall take the chance to attack the Kirgiz,
And slaughter all of their folks.

"Since Kenainym played his tricks,
And took away the chieftains locked by us.
We shall distract his spirit,
Confuse and disorient him as revenge!"

The words and deeds of Kekmat,
Were observed by a Kirgiz scout.
He returned to the camp without a stop,
And reported to Kenainym all the information he had got.

Kenainym arranged the countermeasures at once,
Summoned the fifty rescued chieftains,
And divided them into seven groups.
And selected seventy warriors,
From the ninety-one palace guards,
To allocate ten men for each group,
And sent the seven groups to Jetitor.

"You shall guard the intersection of Jetitor,
And the Karamark soldiers will arrive at that spot.
If they kept making a last-ditch struggle,
Just drain their blood.
If they beg for their lives,

Bring all of them alive back to our place!"

The seven groups set off at once,
Every single one of them was a doughty man,
In the slugfest,
Each of them alone could defeat one thousand enemies.

The warriors marched rapidly through the dark night,
Keeping forward regardless of jolts.
They reached to the cross of Jetitor in no time,
And dispelled all their drowsiness.

The invading Karamark,
Came into their sights,
And to charge the enemies they shouted in a loud voice.
Among the Karamark troops,
There were no experienced soldiers,
All of them were defeated by the Kirgiz chieftains,
With a blink of an eye.
The warriors escorted the amounts of Karamark,
And victoriously came back.

Kenainym Killed Kekmat

The night was just over,
Kekmat ordered a warrior to sound the drum,
And led the Karamark soldiers,
Overwhelmingly,
Turned out in full strength.
Kekmat sat on the Komkormo[1] saddle,
And carried the idol he worshiped,
Rushed fiercely towards the battlefield.

Kenainym kept a level head,
Coming to the field alone after a long time.
Kekmat was heaved with joy,
Thinking that the troops he had sent last night,
Had already wiped the Kirgiz out.

Upon seeing Kenainym,
He waved his spear vigorously.
Listen,
This Karamark shouted:
"Kenainym,
Do you tremble with fear,
And plan to delay the time by arriving late?
You have no attendants,
Can it be that the Kirgiz did not obey your command,
Or that your soldiers have been wiped out by my warriors?

1 Komkormo: Kirgiz term, the name of the Karamarkish saddle, containing unscrewing buckle type and turning buckle type.

"I will give you an advice and you shall accept,
Do not take your own course,
To survive alone is actually a relief.
Do not lose confidence of your life,
And I can spare you a life.

"If you think that to stay in this world,
Will disgrace your honor,
Why not find a quiet place,
And spend the rest of your life.
If you do not accept my advice,
I will not let you survive,
As long as I am alive!"

Facing with the shouts of Kekmat,
Kenainym firmly replied:
"No wonder I usually hear they say:
'Karamark,
Karamark,
Whoever dream about them,
Will suffer from pestilence!'"

Hearing the satire of Kenainym,
Kekmat outraged.
He whirled his whip with no stop,
And lashed the horse to rush forward.

Kekmat was in an aggressive posture,
Roaring like thunder,
Enough to wake the dead,
Shouting as lion,
The earth trembled and the mountains swayed.
He held a poisonous spear,
And launched a fierce attack to Kenainym.

Kekmat and Kenainym,
Fought swiftly and violently at close quarter.

The spears whirled in their hands,
One stabbed and the other fended,
The weapons collided with each other,
The warriors fought at full split,
Forgetting about their own.
Like a horsehair,
They hung the life of each other in the air.
God bless us not to see,
This intense and fierce fight any more.

The irons clattered,
Flashes burst out,
Like the lightnings across the sky.
The hooves stepped on the earth,
And cracks appeared on the ground,
The raised dust flied up high to the open sky.

In the campfield Kankole with rose willows far and near,
The dust blotted out the sky and covered the sun.
All the people had their hearts in their mouths,
Without knowing what would turn out.

Some cowards,
Had already wet their pants;
Some crybabies,
Could not hold their tears.
Those who always fancied themselves,
Could not stop their trembling hands,
And dropped all their weapons.

The shouts resounded in the mountains,
The beasts fled in panic.
The ground violently shook,
As if it would collapse.

The waves of rivers rolled,
The billows was lifted from the lakes.

Kenainym and Kekmat,
Fought to a frazzle.

Just when they were engaging in the battle,
The Kirgiz chieftains and warriors,
Escorted seven thousand Karamark prisoners,
Rushed to the battlefield.

Kekmat fell in agony,
Felt at a loss and flurried,
Lost all his arrogance at once,
And became pale and weak.

Though in the dark of a moment,
Kekmat plucked up in few seconds,
He made the decision to himself,
That he would wipe out,
All the Kirgiz led by Kenainym.
He shouted and whipped the horse to madly dash around,
Piercing his spear towards Kenainym's chest.

Confronting with the outrageous enemy,
Kenainym astutely pushed the spear aside,
And the spear of Kekmat dropped to the ground.

Before Kekmat could pick up his weapon,
Kenainym spurred the horse to run towards him,
And stabbed the spear into his throat,
The end of the spear came out from one ear base.

The end of the spear shined with the color of blood,
Kekmat fell down from the horseback,
The beast's head tumbled into the soil,
It failed to escape from death.

The Karamarks were greatly frightened,
Fearing of the arrival of death,

They looked at Kenainym pleadingly.
Kenainym ordered the Karamarks,
To dismount the horses and return to their own tents.

The Lion Kenainym summoned his troops,
And made his orders:
"All the Kirgiz with white felt hats,
You are not lack of property and livestock.
Do not rob their robes and steeds,
Do not kill these innocent soldiers,
We shall release these Karamarks,
And let them go back to feed parents, sons and daughters.

"Let them stay here for ten days,
And repatriate them afterwards.
If there is anyone intending to flee,
He or she shall be killed on the spot.

Fifty chieftains of the six cities,
You shall not delay to set off at present.
Go to maintain your status,
And take good care of your tribes.

"There will possibly still be Karamarks,
Do not end their lives.
Leave them with steeds and robes,
And do escort them back to their homeland.

"Do not imitate Karamarks,
And do not copy their deeds.
The Karamark soldiers are in great amount,
They barely have responsibility for the battles.
They expedition was ordered by the khan,
How dare they resist the command of the khan.
Quite a few people lost their lives,
And no one will look after their sons and daughters."

Kenainym sent away the fifty chieftains,
And still kept thinking about his fellow villagers.
Pressing forward day and night,
He finally returned to his troops.

After withstanding the invasion of Karamark,
And defending the Kirgiz folks,
The life of Kirgiz returned to peace.
People thanked the hero Kenainym,
And wished him a good luck forever.

Let us leave this aside,
And sing How did Tiemirbiek of Tajik,
Sell his soul,
To take refuge in Karamark.