What are we watching：

Strings of the Satar developed from a selected passage of Muqam into an immersive contemporary Muqam music-and-dance production. It tells the legendary story of Amannisa Khan, the great poet and musician born in 1526. Amannisa Khan was the consort of Rashid Khan, the second ruler of the Yarkand Khanate, and is remembered for collecting and organizing the Twelve Muqam.

Part I: A Legendary Encounter
Amannisa Khan was born into the family of a woodcutter. Gifted from a young age, she was already able to write poetry and perform Muqam by the age of thirteen. According to legend, Rashid Khan encountered her while traveling on a hunting trip and stayed at her family home in disguise. Seeing a tambur hanging on the wall, he asked the family to perform. Amannisa Khan spontaneously sang an excerpt from Panjigah Muqam, with lyrics that even mentioned Rashid Khan himself. Impressed by her talent, he then asked her to compose another poem on the spot. She did so immediately. Rashid Khan revealed his identity and asked to marry her.

Part II: Her Work in the Palace

After becoming a royal consort, Amannisa Khan devoted much of her energy to the preservation and organization of Muqam rather than to palace life. At the time, Uyghur Muqam had been transmitted for generations and contained a wide range of materials. With the support of Rashid Khan, she worked with the court musician Qadir Khan and brought together folk musicians and singers to collect, organize, and develop Muqam traditions. She replaced some older and more difficult lyrics with poetry closer to everyday life and human emotion. This work ultimately contributed to the organization of the Twelve Muqam into a structured artistic tradition combining music, dance, and poetry.

Expert Perspective：
视频：https://youtu.be/sjfZW9LWsFs

Professor Turghun has long taught courses on Chinese traditional and folk music, the music of Xinjiang's ethnic communities, Muqam musical structure, and Muqam appreciation. He has also conducted many years of field research on ethnic music across Xinjiang, visiting more than seventy counties. The interview therefore begins with his experience in both teaching and field research.

Professor Turghun emphasizes that Xinjiang Muqam is not a single musical form. He introduces several regional traditions, including the Twelve Muqam, Dolan Muqam, Turpan Muqam, and Hami Muqam, and compares their differences in length, structure, instrumentation, dance, and performance duration. The Twelve Muqam, for example, is extremely large in scale and contains multiple sections, while Dolan Muqam follows a different structure and performance format.

He also discusses how traditional music should be understood and studied. Muqam contains a strong element of improvisation, meaning that even the same performer may sing or play differently from one day to the next. It therefore cannot be understood simply as a fixed musical score. Analytical tools from Western music, including notation, part-writing, and major-minor tonality, can be useful, but they should not be applied mechanically to the traditional music of Xinjiang. Drawing on his own long-term fieldwork, Professor Turghun repeatedly stresses that truly understanding a folk music tradition requires more than books or a single interview. Researchers need to go into the field, watch and listen, speak with different people, and then consider those observations alongside existing scholarship.

What are we watching改成表演者介绍：

Dorji Nyima is an autonomous-region-level inheritor of the Jangar epic from Hoboksar County, Tacheng, Xinjiang. His grandfather and other members of his family were also Jangar inheritors. Growing up surrounded by performances of the epic, he was deeply influenced by his elders and naturally became part of the next generation carrying the tradition forward.

In addition to performing Jangar in traditional stage settings, Dorji Nyima has worked with other artists to develop new arrangements of its music and presentation. These adaptations aim to make the epic more engaging for younger audiences while preserving its traditional foundation. Through both performance and creative collaboration, he has played an active role in promoting Jangar and bringing the tradition to contemporary audiences.

The Todo script, also known as the Clear Script, was created in 1648 by the Oirat Buddhist scholar Zaya Pandita as a modified form of the traditional Hudum Mongolian script. It was designed specifically for the Oirat language. The word “Todo” means “clear” or “distinct,” reflecting the script’s ability to represent the sounds of spoken Oirat more precisely. It has been used mainly among Oirat Mongol communities in Xinjiang, including the Torghut people.

The Epic of Jangar originated among the Oirat Mongols in the Xinjiang region of China and is often described in scholarship as “the unique heritage of the Oirat people.” As different Oirat groups migrated during the seventeenth century, Jangar spread across a much wider area. In present-day Russia, it has been widely transmitted among the Kalmyks of the lower Volga region, who are descendants of the Oirats. In Mongolia, it has circulated among both Oirat and Khalkha communities. In China, beyond the Oirat Mongol communities of Xinjiang, the epic has also been found among non-Oirat Mongol groups in Inner Mongolia, including the Bargut and Zhalute–Khorchin communities.

What are we watching改成表演者介绍：

D. Utunason is a national-level inheritor of Mongolian Long Song, a form of intangible cultural heritage. As a member of an older generation, he learned Long Song through the traditional method of oral transmission from senior inheritors. He continues to use this approach in his own teaching today, guiding students through melodies and lyrics one line at a time and asking them to learn by listening and repeating.

Students who can read staff notation or numbered musical notation may use scores as an additional tool, but the ability to read music is not required. One notable part of his teaching method is that students who learn more quickly may help teach their classmates, while he continues to guide the process. This creates a transmission structure in which the teacher teaches students, and students then help teach one another.

Utunason has been teaching continuously since around 2005 and has worked with dozens of students over the years. He also brings students to performances, cultural events, and competitions at both the Tacheng and Xinjiang regional levels.

What are we watching改成介绍：

Local inheritors usually perform and promote Aqyn Aitys with the organization and support of the county cultural center. Beyond performance itself, the team also explains what kind of art Aqyn Aitys is. To make it easier for audiences to understand, the inheritors sometimes compare it with familiar Chinese performance forms such as xiangsheng (comic dialogue) and errenzhuan (a traditional duet performance), while emphasizing that Aitys has its own distinctive structure.

An Aqyn performs while playing the dombra, listening carefully to an opponent, and immediately creating new poetic lines in response to what has just been said. The other performer then answers in the same way, creating a continuous exchange that is both collaborative and competitive. Through these improvised verses, audiences experience the performers' poetic skill, quick thinking, wit, and humor.

Aqyn Aitys therefore combines music, poetry, debate, cultural knowledge, and real-time improvisation. Each Aqyn has a distinctive voice, melodic style, and way of expression. In male-female duets, the exchange may also include humor, romance, teasing, and other themes drawn closely from everyday life.

木卡姆表演的主要乐器包括：

达甫

维吾尔族 · 打击乐器

简介

达甫（又称'纳格拉'）是维吾尔族音乐中最重要的打击乐器之一。它是一种框鼓，鼓框内嵌有铁环，敲击时发出清脆明亮的声音。达甫是十二木卡姆——维吾尔族大型古典音乐套曲的重要伴奏乐器。

历史由来

达甫在新疆有超过1500年的历史。克孜尔千佛洞的古代壁画描绘了演奏类似达甫的框鼓的音乐家。唐代，达甫广泛应用于宫廷音乐，成为丝绸之路上的重要乐器。经过几个世纪的演变，它现在是维吾尔族音乐传统中不可或缺的一部分。

乐器特点

达甫直径通常为25-40厘米，由动物皮蒙在木框上制成。小铁环或铜环附着在框内，当鼓被摇动或敲击时发出叮当声。演奏者垂直持鼓，用手指和手掌产生各种节奏。它以其明亮、穿透力强的音色而闻名，能够在合奏音乐中脱颖而出。

Dap

Uyghur · Percussion Instrument

Introduction

The Dap (also known as 'Nagara') is one of the most important percussion instruments in Uyghur music. It is a frame drum with iron rings embedded inside the drum frame, producing a crisp and bright sound when struck. The Dap is an essential accompanying instrument for the Twelve Muqam, the grand classical music suite of the Uyghur people.

History & Origin

The Dap has a history of over 1,500 years in Xinjiang. Ancient murals from the Kizil Thousand Buddha Caves depict musicians playing frame drums similar to the Dap. During the Tang Dynasty, the Dap was widely used in court music and became an important instrument along the Silk Road. Over centuries, it has been refined and is now an indispensable part of Uyghur musical tradition.

Instrument Features

The Dap typically has a diameter of 25-40 cm and is made from animal skin stretched over a wooden frame. Small iron or brass rings are attached inside the frame, creating a jingling sound when the drum is shaken or struck. The player holds the drum vertically and uses fingers and palm to produce various rhythms. It is known for its bright, penetrating tone that can cut through ensemble music.

热瓦普

维吾尔族 · 弹拨乐器

简介

热瓦普是维吾尔族传统弹拨弦乐器，具有独特的长琴颈和蒙动物皮的共鸣箱。音域宽广，音色明亮穿透，是十二木卡姆的重要伴奏乐器，也是受欢迎的独奏乐器。

历史由来

热瓦普起源于古波斯，1000多年前通过丝绸之路传入新疆。它由波斯'拉巴布'演变而来，并适应了维吾尔族的音乐偏好。到明清时期，热瓦普已成为维吾尔族音乐的核心乐器，特别是在木卡姆套曲的演奏中。

乐器特点

热瓦普通常有5根主弦和8-10根共鸣弦，演奏时产生共鸣。琴身由一整块桑木雕刻而成，共鸣箱蒙蛇皮或鱼皮。长琴颈允许表现力丰富的滑音和装饰音。其音色明亮、金属感强，在合奏中穿透力强。

Rawap

Uyghur · Plucked Instrument

Introduction

The Rawap is a traditional plucked string instrument of the Uyghur people, featuring a distinctive long neck and resonator covered with animal skin. It has a wide range and bright, penetrating tone, making it an important accompanying instrument for the Twelve Muqam and a popular solo instrument.

History & Origin

The Rawap originated in ancient Persia and was introduced to Xinjiang via the Silk Road over 1,000 years ago. It evolved from the Persian 'Rubab' and was adapted to Uyghur musical preferences. By the Ming and Qing dynasties, the Rawap had become a central instrument in Uyghur music, especially in the performance of Muqam suites.

Instrument Features

The Rawap typically has 5 main strings and 8-10 sympathetic strings that resonate when played. The body is carved from a single piece of mulberry wood, with the resonator covered with snake skin or fish skin. The long neck allows for expressive slides and ornaments. Its tone is bright, metallic, and carries well in ensemble settings.

萨塔尔

维吾尔族 · 拉弦乐器

简介

萨塔尔是维吾尔族传统拉弦乐器。它有长琴颈和蒙动物皮的大共鸣箱。萨塔尔以其优美、忧郁的音色而闻名，是木卡姆音乐演奏中的重要乐器。

历史由来

萨塔尔在维吾尔族音乐中使用了几个世纪，特别是在古典木卡姆传统中。它由通过丝绸之路传入新疆的早期拉弦乐器演变而来。这种乐器在清代达到现在的形式，并通过几代维吾尔族音乐家传承下来。

乐器特点

萨塔尔有大而椭圆的共鸣箱，蒙蛇皮或鱼皮。它有一根主奏弦和几根共鸣弦，演奏时产生共鸣。长琴颈允许表现力丰富的滑音和颤音。弓是反握的，与西方拉弦乐器不同。其音色柔和、抒情、富有表现力。

Satar

Uyghur · Bowed Instrument

Introduction

The Satar is a traditional bowed string instrument of the Uyghur people. It has a long neck and a large resonator covered with animal skin. The Satar is known for its beautiful, melancholic tone and is an important instrument in the performance of Muqam music.

History & Origin

The Satar has been used in Uyghur music for centuries, particularly in the classical Muqam tradition. It evolved from earlier bowed instruments brought to Xinjiang via the Silk Road. The instrument reached its current form during the Qing Dynasty and has been passed down through generations of Uyghur musicians.

Instrument Features

The Satar has a large, oval-shaped resonator covered with snake skin or fish skin. It has one main playing string and several sympathetic strings that resonate when played. The long neck allows for expressive slides and vibrato. The bow is held underhand, unlike Western bowed instruments. Its tone is soft, lyrical, and deeply expressive.

它石

维吾尔族 · 打击乐器

简介

它石是维吾尔族独特的传统石制打击乐器。它由两块精选的石头组成，相互敲击产生清脆、共鸣的声音。它石是最古老的打击乐器之一，反映了维吾尔族音乐文化的古老起源。

历史由来

它石被认为是最早的乐器之一，可以追溯到史前时代，当时早期人类发现某些石头敲击时能产生乐音。在维吾尔族文化中，它石在民间音乐和仪式场合中使用了数千年。这些石头是从河床中精心挑选的，具有良好的声学特性。

乐器特点

它石由两块光滑、扁平的石头组成，大小不同，通常由玄武岩或其他致密火山岩制成。石头握在一只手中，有节奏地相互敲击。尽管构造简单，但它石需要高超的技巧才能富有表现力地演奏。其清脆、如钟声般的音色为合奏音乐增添了独特的打击元素。

Tash

Uyghur · Percussion Instrument

Introduction

The Tash is a unique traditional stone percussion instrument of the Uyghur people. It consists of two specially selected stones that are struck together to produce clear, resonant tones. The Tash is one of the oldest percussion instruments, reflecting the ancient origins of Uyghur musical culture.

History & Origin

The Tash is believed to be one of the earliest musical instruments, dating back to prehistoric times when early humans discovered that certain stones could produce musical tones when struck. In Uyghur culture, the Tash has been used for thousands of years in folk music and ceremonial contexts. The stones are carefully selected from riverbeds for their acoustic properties.

Instrument Features

The Tash consists of two smooth, flat stones of different sizes, typically made from basalt or other dense volcanic rock. The stones are held in one hand and struck together rhythmically. Despite its simple construction, the Tash requires great skill to play expressively. Its clear, bell-like tone adds a unique percussive element to ensemble music.

库姆孜

柯尔克孜族 · 弹拨乐器

简介

库姆孜是柯尔克孜族最具代表性的乐器。它是一种三弦弹拨乐器，梨形琴身，短琴颈。库姆孜是柯尔克孜族文化认同的核心，用于伴奏史诗演唱、民歌和器乐曲。

历史由来

库姆孜在突厥民族中有超过2000年的历史。汉代的中国古籍记载了类似的乐器。库姆孜在柯尔克孜汗国时期（6-10世纪）尤为重要。传说这种乐器是由一位猎人创造的，他从风和水声中获得灵感。

乐器特点

库姆孜传统上由一整块杏木或杜松木雕刻而成。它有三根用马鬃或肠线制成的弦。琴身呈梨形，有平坦的音板。演奏时用右手拨弦，左手按弦。其音色清脆、明亮、共鸣丰富。

Komuz

Kyrgyz · Plucked Instrument

Introduction

The Komuz is the most representative musical instrument of the Kyrgyz people. It is a three-stringed plucked instrument with a pear-shaped body and short neck. The Komuz is central to Kyrgyz cultural identity and is used to accompany epic singing, folk songs, and instrumental pieces.

History & Origin

The Komuz has a history of over 2,000 years among Turkic peoples. Ancient Chinese texts from the Han Dynasty mention similar instruments. The Komuz was particularly important during the Kyrgyz Khaganate period (6th-10th centuries). Legend says the instrument was created by a hunter who was inspired by the sounds of wind and water.

Instrument Features

The Komuz is traditionally carved from a single piece of apricot or juniper wood. It has three strings made from horsehair or gut. The body is pear-shaped with a flat soundboard. The instrument is played by plucking the strings with the right hand while pressing the strings against the neck with the left. Its tone is clear, bright, and resonant.

马头琴

蒙古族 · 拉弦乐器

简介

马头琴是蒙古族最具标志性的乐器。它是一种二弦拉弦乐器，梯形琴身，琴首雕刻成马头形状。马头琴被认为是蒙古族音乐和文化的象征。

历史由来

马头琴的历史可以追溯到12世纪蒙古帝国时期。传说一位牧民在他心爱的马死后，用马的骨头和马毛制作了第一把马头琴。这种乐器成为蒙古人与马之间深厚纽带的象征。2009年，它被列入联合国教科文组织人类非物质文化遗产代表作名录。

乐器特点

马头琴有梯形琴身，两根用马毛制成的弦。弓也用马毛制成。琴首雕刻成马头形状，因此得名。演奏时坐着，琴夹在两腿之间。其音色深沉、温暖，让人联想到蒙古草原。它能模仿马奔跑的声音和草原上的风声。

Morin Khuur

Mongolian · Bowed Instrument

Introduction

The Morin Khuur (Horse-head Fiddle) is the most iconic instrument of the Mongolian people. It is a two-stringed bowed instrument with a trapezoidal body and a scroll carved in the shape of a horse's head. The Morin Khuur is considered the symbol of Mongolian music and culture.

History & Origin

The Morin Khuur dates back to the 12th century during the Mongol Empire. Legend tells of a shepherd who created the first Morin Khuur from the bones and hair of his beloved horse after it died. The instrument became a symbol of the deep bond between Mongolians and their horses. It was inscribed on UNESCO's Representative List of the Intangible Cultural Heritage of Humanity in 2009.

Instrument Features

The Morin Khuur has a trapezoidal body with two strings made from horsehair. The bow is also strung with horsehair. The scroll is carved in the shape of a horse's head, giving the instrument its name. The instrument is played while seated, held between the legs. Its tone is deep, warm, and reminiscent of the Mongolian steppe. It can imitate the sounds of horses galloping and the wind on the grasslands.

托布秀尔

蒙古族 · 弹拨乐器

简介

托布秀尔是蒙古族传统弹拨乐器，有两根弦。它有圆形或椭圆形琴身，蒙动物皮，短琴颈。托布秀尔常用于舞蹈伴奏和民歌，产生清脆、有节奏的声音。

历史由来

托布秀尔是最古老的蒙古乐器之一，起源于成吉思汗时代。战士和游牧民族都演奏它，既作为娱乐，也是保存口头历史的手段。几个世纪以来，这种乐器基本保持不变，保持着传统的形式和演奏风格。

乐器特点

托布秀尔有小型圆形琴身，由一整块木头雕刻而成，蒙骆驼皮或山羊皮。它有两根用马鬃制成的弦。短琴颈没有品，允许灵活的音高控制。演奏时用右手拨弦或弹拨。其音色明亮、有节奏感，非常适合节奏伴奏。

Tobshuur

Mongolian · Plucked Instrument

Introduction

The Tobshuur is a traditional Mongolian plucked instrument with two strings. It has a round or oval body covered with animal skin and a short neck. The Tobshuur is commonly used for dance accompaniment and folk songs, producing a crisp, rhythmic sound.

History & Origin

The Tobshuur is one of the oldest Mongolian instruments, with origins dating back to the time of Genghis Khan. It was played by warriors and nomads alike, serving as both entertainment and a means of preserving oral history. The instrument has remained largely unchanged for centuries, maintaining its traditional form and playing style.

Instrument Features

The Tobshuur has a small, round body carved from a single piece of wood, covered with camel skin or goat skin. It has two strings made from horsehair. The short neck has no frets, allowing for flexible pitch control. The instrument is played by strumming or plucking with the right hand. Its tone is bright, percussive, and well-suited for rhythmic accompaniment.

Dombra

Kazakh · Plucked Instrument

Introduction

The Dombra is the most popular musical instrument among the Kazakh people. It is a two-stringed plucked lute with a long neck and pear-shaped body. The Dombra is the primary accompanying instrument for Aken Aytes (improvisational singing contests) and is essential to Kazakh folk music.

History & Origin

The Dombra has been played by Kazakhs for over 1,000 years. It is believed to have originated from ancient Turkic lutes. The instrument was central to the nomadic lifestyle, as it was portable and could accompany singing around campfires. Famous Kazakh poets and musicians like Abai Kunanbayev were known for their Dombra playing.

Instrument Features

The Dombra has a pear-shaped body carved from a single piece of wood, typically pine or birch. It has two strings made from horsehair or gut, tuned a fourth or fifth apart. The long neck has frets tied with gut or string. The instrument is played by strumming or plucking. Its tone is warm, mellow, and well-suited for both accompaniment and solo performance.
